ZAPATA CHECKS MEXICO CITY RIOT

Serious Disorder When Blanco Left, but Capital Is Now Quiet, Our Agent Reports.

VILLA TO ENTER CITY TODAY

His Main Force Now at Tula, Fifty Miles Away—Expects Blanco's Co-operation.

RAID ON TAMPICO BLOCKED

Villa's Column Driven Back with Heavy Loss—All Mexican Factions Busy at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The forces of Gen. Zapata occupied Mexico City last night and are maintaining order, according to official telegrams from Mexico City dated today and received here late tonight.

Two messages were received, one from the Brazilian Minister and the other from American Consul Silliman. Both were filed in Mexico City this morning.

Mr. Silliman reported that the Zapata forces, after sharp fighting in the outskirts of the Mexican capital yesterday afternoon in which sixty soldiers were reported killed, entered just as the forces of Gen. Blanco evacuated the city. There was some disorder and looting in the brief interval between the evacuation by Blanco and the arrival of the Zapata troops.

The Brazilian Minister said he had received full assurances from the Zapatistas that they would maintain order. He said that contrary to previous promises to the Diplomatic Corps and without taking any measures to protect the city, Gen. Lucio Blanco left the city at 3 A. M. yesterday. The Brazilian Minister immediately sent a commission, consisting of Carlos Cordillo, Secretary of the Brazilian Legation; Charles Parker and S. Fuller, to visit the Zapata headquarters. They were assured that full protection would be given the city. In the meantime, before the Zapata forces entered, Col. Salvana, assisted by ex-Gov. Iturbide, in agreement with the Diplomatic Corps, organized a patrol service with the police force, whose arms had been taken from them by the departing troops.

Notwithstanding the constant entry of Zapata troops during the night, the Brazilian Minister said, order had been maintained.

Villa to Enter City Today.

Gen. Francisco Villa, with his army of 35,000 men, has arrived at Tula, on the Mexican Central Railway, fifty miles north of Mexico City, and intends to enter the capital with his troops tomorrow, according to a telegram from Gen. Villa to Enrique C. Llorente, former Consul General of Mexico at El Paso, who has arrived in Washington as the representative of Gen. Gutierrez. The telegram from Gen. Villa was sent from Tula at 2 o'clock this afternoon and was the first definite information of the position of Villa received in Washington for forty-eight hours.

Gen. Gutierrez, who has established a temporary provisional capital at San Luis Potosi, expects to move to Mexico City as soon as Villa is in control.

Señor Llorentes said that if Blanco had left the capital, he had probably only gone into the suburbs, as reports to Gen. Villa represent Blanco as still controlling the situation there.

Mr. Silliman has been ordered by Secretary Bryan to proceed to Vera Cruz to join Carranza's headquarters. This leaves no American diplomatic or consular agent in the capital, but Consular Agent Carothers has orders to enter the capital with Gen. Villa. American interests in Mexico City are in the hands of Señor Cardoza, the Brazilian Ambassador.

All Factions Represented.

The Mexican political pot is beginning to boil vigorously in Washington. Nearly all the leading Mexican factions are now represented by special agents in Washington. The Carrancistas are represented by Rafael Zuburan Capmany, who has his headquarters in the Mexican Embassy building. The Villistas are represented by Felix Summerfield and the Aguascalientes Convention and Gen. Gutierrez are represented by Enrique C. Llorente, Roberto V. Pasquiera, former agent of the Constitutionalists, who is now supporting the Carranzista cause, has joined Señor Zuburan at the Mexican Embassy.

Taking advantage of the factional difficulties, the Felicistas (followers of Gen. Felix Diaz, nephew of the elder Diaz) have also established headquarters here at the Sterling and using every possible influence to reach the ear of the State Department in advocacy of a neutral candidate. If possible, the Felicistas would like to have Gen. Fernando Gonzales installed and recognized as Provisional President.

The Diaz supporters in Washington now are Teodoro Deshea, ex-Governor of the State of Vera Cruz, and Inigo Noriega, a wealthy Spaniard who has lived long in Mexico City, but is now an exile. Emetero de la Garza, former confidential envoy of Huerta in the United States, has also been in Washington working in harmony with the Felicistas. Felix Diaz himself is in New Orleans, with other of his followers.

With all the factions represented in Washington, it is evident that the next few weeks are expected to mark another crucial period in Mexican revolutionary history.

RIOTS WHEN SOLDIERS LEFT.

Armed Citizens Guarded Capital—Many Shots Fired.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 24, (Delayed.)—Serious disorder occurred in the capital tonight when a mob gathered in front of the National Palace.

Later they marched to stores, where arms and ammunition were kept, battered down the doors, and sacked the places of their contents.

There was much shooting, but thus far, according to reports, the casualties are few.

The police were powerless, as the few who remained to guard the city were stripped of their arms by the mob.

Later in the evening the mob, which

ROCKEFELLER MUST PAY TAXES ON $311,000,000

Personal Property Assessment Sustained by Ohio Board—Oil Man to Seek Federal Injunction.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 25.—By a vote of 2 to 1 the Board of Complaint, the highest tax authority in Cuyahoga County, today sustained Deputy Tax Commissioners John D. Fackler and William Agnew and decided that John D. Rockefeller must pay taxes here on $311,000,000 of personal property. Mr. Rockefeller can appeal from this decision to the State Tax Commission at Columbus, the highest taxing body in the State, or take his case direct to the Federal courts on the ground that he is a citizen of another State.

An abatement of $70,000 was allowed by the board on Mr. Rockefeller's painting, "The Disputed Boundary," by Erskine Nicol. The board valued the painting at $5,000, although Mr. Rockefeller twice had insured it for $75,000, the valuation placed on it for taxation by the Commissioners. Two automobiles, valued at $8,000, which Mr. Rockefeller declared were not in Cuyahoga County on the first Monday in February, taxing day, were found by the board to have been properly assessed.

Attorney A. E. Clevenger, who is associated with Virgil P. Kline, for years Mr. Rockefeller's personal attorney, is conducting Mr. Rockefeller's fight against taxation in Ohio.

"Mr. Kline and myself have not had time to confer. It is probable the next step will be an appeal to the Federal courts for an injunction restraining County Treasurer P. C. O'Brien from collecting the taxes," said Mr. Clevenger.

DRASTIC PANAMA PRESS BILL

Authorizes Expulsion of Naturalized Citizens Who Criticise Authorities.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

PANAMA, Nov. 25.—A new law in prospect, which has passed its second debate in the National Assembly, repeals the law of 1914, and gives free entrance to Chinese, Syrians, and Turks. It also forbids foreigners of any nationality to mix in politics and allows the Chief Executive to expel naturalized foreigners who attack public authorities or institutions through the press, or by other means.

The leading paper here bitterly opposes this law, which, it declares, deprives naturalized Panamans and foreigners of the right of free speech and is absolutely unconstitutional.

VON BUELOW PESSIMISTIC.

Ex-Chancellor Says Germany Will Win, but Only with Difficulty.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—A Berlin letter to The Standard, bearing date of Nov. 15, says the Berliner Tageblatt prints a letter from Prince von Bülow, ex-Chancellor of the empire, expressing fear that the war will "prove a very difficult task for Germany."

Of course the Prince ends by affirming his belief in the ultimate triumph of German arms, but he says several times that victory will be won only with great difficulty.

CLEAR THANKSGIVING.

Weather Fine Throughout the Country, Official Forecaster Predicts.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Clear skies and snappy temperatures for Thanksgiving Day were promised to virtually the entire country tonight by forecasters at the Weather Bureau. Records freed from the dust of years failed to show that better conditions ever prevailed on Thanksgiving Day than those predicted for the next forty-eight hours.

"A continuance of fair weather with moderate temperatures is indicated for all parts of the country during the next forty-eight hours, save the North Pacific Coast," was the official wording of the general forecast.

SHOT TO DEATH IN STREET.

Italian Importer Attacked by Three Men—Five Bullets in Body.

Frank de Fonte, an importer of olive oil, with offices at 164 Sackett Street, Brooklyn, was shot to death about midnight last night while walking to his home at 471 Henry Street.

According to stories told the police de Fonte was walking in Sackett Street, where there were quite a number of passers by at the time, when two men slipped out of hallways past which he was walking, and another appeared from a similar hiding place across the street and hurried toward him.

De Fonte tried to dodge him, but they closed in and shot him through and through. Five bullets were found in de Fonte's chest, abdomen, and heart when policemen who had heard the shooting arrived.

Policemen who were first on the scene arrested three men who are said to have been hurrying away. One of them was John Carusa, a salesman, of 89 Fourth Avenue. It is said that a fully loaded revolver was found on the sidewalk just behind him. Leone Constantino, a tailor, of 94 Baltic Street, and Tony Melati of 29 Woodhull Street, a clerk in a Manhattan broker's office, were also arrested.

In the gutter near de Fonte's body was a revolver, five chambers of which had been discharged.

De Fonte leaves a wife and eight children. The police are working on the theory that de Fonte had defied blackmailers. The neighborhood in which he was killed has been the scene of several shooting affrays within a few weeks.

ELLIS ISLAND STAFF IS CUT.

100 Employes Laid Off as War Decreases Immigration.

Owing to the falling off in immigration through the European war instructions have been received at Ellis Island from Washington to lay off 100 employes. Twenty-three went yesterday, and the remaining seventy-seven will go at the end of the month. This includes Inspectors, male and female clerks, stenographers, and watchmen. Frederic C. Howe, the new Commissioner, has an unpleasant task before him, as the men have families and considered they would be on the staff at the island for life.

Before the war there were always from 1,000 to 1,500 aliens detained at Ellis Island, and at the present time there are only 300. The staff at the Immigration Bureau, including officials, numbers 650 and includes a large force of interpreters, who will also have to be reduced.

CROKER IS TO WED INDIAN MAID TODAY

Bula Benton Edmondson Did Not Learn English Till She Was 12.

IS 50 YEARS HIS JUNIOR

Marriage License Issued at Home of Nathan Straus — Cherokee Girl Sang in Hippodrome Last Year.

Richard Croker, once chieftain of Tammany, is to wed an Indian maid today. Last night at 7 o'clock a marriage license was issued to Mr. Croker and Bula Benton Edmondson, who last year rode a pony and sang Indian songs in the Hippodrome. She is a descendant of a Cherokee Indian chieftain and is a native of Muskogee, Okla. Mr. Croker gave his age as 73 years and the young woman is just fifty years his junior.

The license was issued in the home of Nathan Straus, 27 West Seventy-second Street, for many years a friend of Croker. City Clerk P. J. Scully took the license blank to Mr. Straus's house, and there Mr. Croker and his fiancée pondered over the document for nearly three-quarters of an hour. Mr. Croker handed Clerk Scully a dollar bill which had seen considerable circulation, and the license was recorded in the City Hall files last night.

Miss Edmondson gave her father's name as Michael Smith Edmondson. He was born in Georgia of Scotch descent. Her mother, Miss Edmondson said, was Florence Williams Hastings and was born in Indian Territory. There was nothing in her declaration to the City Clerk to indicate her Indian blood. Mr. Croker gave his full name as Richard Welsted Croker and his address as 5 East Seventy-fourth Street. He was born in Ireland, he said, the son of Eyre Cook Croker, also a native of Ireland. His mother's name was Frances Welsted, also of Ireland. The marriage license shows that his first wife is dead.

To Be Married This Morning.

Mr. Croker told City Clerk Scully that the arrangements for the wedding had not been completed. From other sources, however, it was learned that the original plan to have the ceremony this morning had not been changed. It will take place in the parsonage of St. Agnes' Roman Catholic Church, Lexington Avenue and Forty-third Street.

Mr. Croker and his fiancée had dinner with Nathan Straus and his family. Newspaper men were not permitted to send in messages. Mr. Straus left the house shortly after 8 o'clock, and an hour later a servant told reporters that Mr. Croker and Miss Edmondson had left the house before Mr. Straus went. There is a tall iron fence surrounding the Straus property, and in the rear of Mr. Straus's home and facing on Seventy-third Street is the home of Simon Rawitzer. The supposition was that Mr. Croker and his fiancée had eluded the reporters by slipping out of the back door of the Straus home and going out to Seventy-third Street through the Rawitzer house. The rumor spread that the marriage had taken place immediately after the license was issued, but this was denied at the rectory of St. Agnes's Church, of which Mgr. H. A. Brann is pastor.

The mystery regarding the identity of Mr. Croker's fiancée was solved early yesterday morning, when a telegram from Memphis, Tenn., told that a friend of Miss Edmondson had telegraphed to friends in Memphis about the event. Mr. Croker's friends in this city had kept their promises of secrecy, and Mr. Croker, when apprised of the news as he left his house on East Seventy-fourth Street about noon, seemed astonished.

"How in the world did you get it in such a round-about way?" he exclaimed.

Croker in Happy Mood.

He was in a happy mood, but he refused to say anything about his fiancée. He considered his marriage a strictly private matter, he said. The newspapers, he said, had ill-treated him in more instances than one, he insisted. He did not seem to appreciate a facetious remark to the effect that an alliance between a Tammany Brave and a Cherokee maiden was, after all, quite natural.

"When a man does a good thing," said Mr. Croker, "the newspapers never mention it. When a man does a bad thing the newspapers hound him for years. Now this thing is purely personal, and I won't talk about it."

"It has been quite a while since any one has charged you with doing anything wrong," suggested a reporter.

"Never did anything wrong in my life," snapped Croker. He went to the home of Mrs. Randolph Guggenheim, 923 Fifth Avenue, and presently motored down the avenue.

Miss Edmondson formerly lived at 54 West Fifty-fourth Street, but for the last few months has been living in the Studio Club of New York, a branch of the Young Women's Christian Association, at 35 East Sixty-second Street, of which Mrs. Stephen Baker is President. The Studio Club is a social centre for more than 200 girls studying music, painting, the drama, literature, and sculpture. Miss A. Evelyn Newman is the General Secretary of the club.

Miss Newman told a Times reporter that Miss Edmondson had been at the club in the morning. She spoke very highly of her and of her art. Miss Edmondson had done original research work among the Cherokee Indians, Miss Newman said, and had lectured in many places on Cherokee folk lore and customs. Miss Newman said that she regarded the young woman's work as highly artistic.

It was learned from other sources that Miss Edmondson came to New York two years ago with the purpose of developing her voice for concert purposes. She became active in many enterprises and took a part in several entertainments given by suffragists. A well known suffragist said yesterday that she knew Miss Edmondson well.

Learned English at Twelve.

"Her Indian name is Keetaw Kelantuchy Sequoan," she said. "She is the daughter of a Scotchman, who fell in love with and married a Cherokee woman in Oaklahoma. Miss Edmondson grew up as a little Indian girl and did not learn English until she was twelve years old, when she attended the public schools in Muskogee. Up to that time she had been taught principally by her uncle, whose name was Ti-Ault-Ty.

"Miss Edmondson was graduated from Wisconsin University and went to Boston to study in a school for expression. Then she came to New York, where she studied music. She gave dramatic evenings and was featured in several vaudeville performances. She told the legends of other people and interpreted her people as she knew them.

"Miss Edmondson is a clever all-around girl, fond of riding, canoeing, and other sports. In the Summers she had a camp in Maine, where she taught girls to ride and row and paddle. She is a suffragist and rode at the head of the Washington Woman Suffrage parade, and recently, at a mass meeting of the Women's Political Union, she headed a

HINTS OF FUTURE PEACE ALONG WILSON'S LINES

Earl of Beauchamp Makes Suggestive Remarks at Dinner to Jason's Officers.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Speaking at the dinner at Plymouth tonight in honor of the officers of the "Christmas ship" Jason and those connected with the American enterprise of sending holiday gifts to the children of Europe, the Earl of Beauchamp, first Commissioner of Works in the British Cabinet, expressed England's appreciation of the peace treaty between England and the United States.

He went on to say that he was not at all sure that within the next few months the probabilities of future peace would not be along the line suggested by President Wilson and Secretary Bryan. In conclusion he said:

"This modern Jason bears a more valuable treasure than did the ship of Jason of old—the affection of the children of a mighty nation."

TROOPS STAGE A PLAY WITHIN RANGE OF GUNS

French Quit Trenches to Perform a Musical Skit Written by Soldiers—Theatre a Barn.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—According to the Figaro, one French theatrical company did not wait for official permission to open the Winter season, despite being even nearer the front than Paris itself. The Figaro announces the receipt of a manuscript review entitled "Ah! ce que tu es boche!" which was written by soldiers, at the front and performed in a barn actually within range of the German cannon.

The dramatis personae include the Kaiser, von Jagow, von Moltke, the Crown Prince, German officers, and several assassins. Among the songs are "William's Mustache," "The French Soldier," "The English and German Soldier," and "Belgium Independent," sung to the tune of the "Marseillaise." The authors demand the indulgence of the audience for the poverty of the stage setting and scenic decoration, but, says the Figaro, no apologies are needed for the libretto, which has a sparkle denoting satisfactorily the condition of the French morale.

BRITAIN TO INSTALL ANOTHER KHEDIVE

Chooses Hussein Kemal, Son of the Late Ismail Pasha, in Place of Rebel Ruler.

ROME, Nov. 25.—The Giornale d'Italia today publishes correspondence from Alexandria, which says that Germany is reviving, after 115 years, but with much wider scope, the game played by Napoleon in Egypt, and that the natives can now be compared to a volcano from which anything may be expected.

Meanwhile, the correspondent says, Great Britain is preparing to give the Egyptians a new Khedive in the person of Husseln Kemal, son of Ismail Pasha, Khedive from 1865 to 1879, and uncle of the present Khedive.

"For the present," the correspondent continues, "the only grave symptom is an economic crisis, due chiefly to the impossibility owing to the war of exporting cotton, which is Egypt's chief product. As a consequence the banks are shaky. The moratorium has suppressed 3,000 notes of hand, which have not been paid, and which will result in about 2,000 bankruptcies."

SUNDERLAND HOUSE NOW ZEPPELIN-PROOF

The Duchess of Marlborough Protects Her London Home With Wire Netting.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The Duchess of Marlborough, following the example set by many prominent persons here, has fortified her home, Sunderland House, Curzon Street, against a Zeppelin attack. A stout wire netting attached to heavy poles stretches across the roof at a height of several feet. Sunderland House is the personal property of the Duchess, given to her by her father, who bought the site of the old Curzon Chapel and built on it.

Measures to prevent damage by bombs are still being taken by public institutions, among others the Tate Gallery of British Art. Some time ago the National Gallery stored 250 of its finest paintings. Several of the best works of Turner, Burne-Jones, and Rossetti have been taken from the walls of the Tate Gallery. In each room are big cans of sand to be used to smother any outbreak of fire caused by bombs.

1,000,000 FRENCHMEN SHOD BY GRAND DUKE

Michael of Russia Orders $3 Shoes from Webster (Mass.) Firm for Big Army Gift.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—Grand Duke Michael of Russia has presented to the French Army 1,000,000 pairs of shoes, which have been ordered from Webster (Mass.) factories, at an average price of $3 a pair.

Some enormous orders for shoes for the Russian Army also have been placed in America.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Grand Duke Michael of Russia has hit upon an ingenious method for getting money for his fund for providing comforts for the British soldiers, which has tickled the London public immensely and is likely to be a huge success.

He offers to inform all contributors of a dollar and upward of the official Russian pronunciation of Przemysl.

AMERICA DRAFTING A NEW SEA CODE

Hopes to Induce Belligerents to Agree on Set of Rules for Contraband and Neutrality.

REPLY TO GERMAN PROTEST

London Declaration Void, Envoy Is Told, and Only Specific Cases Will Be Considered.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The decided stand taken by the United States in refusing to accept piecemeal adoption of the principles of the Declaration of London as a guide to commercial restrictions to be imposed during the European war, was made clear today at the State Department when the text of a cablegram sent to Ambassador Gerard at Berlin on Oct. 14 was made public.

Mr. Gerard had communicated a preliminary notice that Germany intended to protest to this Government against alleged violations of the Declaration by Great Britain and France. The German Ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, called at the State Department today to lodge the formal complaints, and the text of the reply cabled to Ambassador Gerard, copies of which went to all American diplomatic representatives abroad, was then made public. It follows:

Please inform the German Government that the department's suggestion made to the belligerent countries for the adoption for the sake of uniformity of the Declaration of London, as a temporary code of naval warfare for use in the present war, has been withdrawn because of the unwillingness of some of the belligerents to adopt the Declaration of London without modification. The United States Government, therefore, will insist that its rights and duties and those of its citizens in the present war be defined by the existing rules of international law and the treaties of the United States with the belligerents independently of the provisions of the Declaration, and this Government will reserve the right to enter a demand or protest in every case in which the rights and duties mentioned above and defined by existing rules of international law are violated or their free exercise hindered by the authorities of the belligerent Governments.

The message was signed by Counsellor Lansing, then Acting Secretary of State.

The United States and Germany are among the nations which have recorded their acceptance of the Declaration of London, while Great Britain has not taken this action. One article of the Declaration provides that it shall be binding as between belligerent powers only upon those by which it has been ratified.

Soon after the war began it became evident that while they recognized in a general way the spirit of the Declaration of London, some of the belligerent powers intended to insist upon great modification of important details, basing their action upon the fact that they had not formally ratified the convention.

Since the Declaration was in fact a compromise between the extreme views of the several Governments which participated in the conference, a high official here pointed out today that it would have been neither just nor fair in the opinion of this Government to consent to any modification without the agreement of all parties. On this theory, the State Department felt obliged to withdraw from its adherence to the Declaration, even before the German protest was received.

In his conversation with Ambassador von Bernstorff today Counsellor Lansing made it clear that in the absence of general rules, the United States could deal only with such specific complaints as the German Government might wish to present, where it felt this Government had been remiss in the fulfillment of its duties as a neutral State.

The German bill of protest contains several specific declarations, but the State Department has as yet made no reply to these. It is said, however, that the German position that the British have violated the spirit of the Declaration of London by seizing or detaining food supplies carried in neutral bottoms and consigned to German ports, directly or indirectly, is recognized by United States officials as entirely sound. The same is true as to the complaint against the removal of German citizens not yet in a military establishment from neutral ships, and also the extension by Great Britain of her contraband lists far beyond the limits fixed in the London Convention.

In the opinion of American officials, however, no way is open to the United States to require adherence to the strict letter of the Declaration of London. Great Britain has never ratified the declaration, and Germany and Austria are therefore absolved by the declaration itself from adherence to its terms. It was this situation that led the State Department to revert to the old practices of international law and treaties for guidance.

Since the war began the department has been at work virtually forging out a code of its own for the treatment of questions of contraband and neutrality. It is hoped that this code can be devised with such fairness and impartiality that it will commend itself to all of the belligerents.

It is recognized, however, that the failure of all belligerents to adhere to the Declaration of London has greatly increased the difficulties of neutral States in attempting to protect their legitimate commerce, and at the same time preserve strict neutrality as to contraband shipments.

WOOD AS CONTRABAND.

Germany's New List Proves a Hard Blow to Sweden.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 25, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Germany has declared manufactured wood contraband, thereby causing a heavy blow to Swedish industry, as it is estimated that wood, to the value of about 20,000,000 crowns, is still under contract for shipment this season. The Government immediately took steps to intercept all steamers in the Baltic and ordered them to return to Swedish ports.

The new contraband declaration also includes tar and sulphur. The new German contraband declaration refers to all wood. Great indignation is felt over this as being an infringement of the rights of neutral commerce. The Svenska Dagbladet says:

"This step brings further warning to neutral countries stubbornly to protect their ignored rights, and it is to be hoped that Germany's decision will not be final, but that reasonableness and wise consideration, as shown by England in the ore question, will also in this case bring about a further modification."

The list of articles prohibited for export has been increased to include hides, skins, gold and silver in bars and coins. Persons going abroad are allowed to carry cash in gold and silver up to 200 crowns. The moratorium for foreign debts runs to the end of the year, and will probably then be prolonged for another two months.

GERMAN ARMY TRAPPED, RUSSIANS SAY; NOW TRYING TO CUT THROUGH TO NORTH; AT LEAST ONE CORPS HAS SURRENDERED

Summary of War News.

Petrograd reports that the German left wing in Russian Poland is surrounded and is making a supreme effort to cut through to the north. German losses west of Lodz, according to some dispatches, may total two army corps. The Russians say they have again invaded Hungary and cornered large bodies of Austrian troops in the Carpathian passes.

The German General Staff, on the other hand, says that the Russian counter-attacks in Russian Poland have failed. All Russian attempts to assume the offensive, it is said, have resulted in little success. In East Prussia also, it is stated, the Russian attacks have failed.

French guns are bombarding Arnaville, only ten miles from Metz, according to the French official bulletin. Indian troops in Flanders captured many German trenches and men yesterday, according to bulletins from Paris and London. A request by Germans for an armistice in the Argonnes was refused.

A Berlin official statement says that the Germans made some slight progress at Arras.

In announcing to Commons the appeal to the United States to induce Colombia and Ecuador to maintain neutrality as to wireless messages, a British Foreign Office official stated that should Colombia continue her present attitude the Allies might be compelled in self-defense to take further steps for the protection of their interests.

Refused an Armistice at Bethincourt—Germans Report Progress Near Arras.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—Progress in Tuesday's fighting on the western battle front was reported by the War Office this afternoon, but tonight's official communication merely said:

This was a quiet day. There was no alteration of any part of the entire front.

The afternoon official statement said:

From the North Sea to Ypres there have been no infantry attacks. Between Langemarck and Zonnebecke we have gained territory. In the vicinity of La Bassée the Indian troops recaptured from the enemy certain trenches which had been taken from them the evening before. From La Bassée to Soissons there has been almost complete calm.

We have made slight progress near Berry-au-Bac and in the Argonne.

At Bethincourt, northwest of Verdun, a German attack has been repulsed. A suspension of hostilities requested by the enemy has been refused.

In the region of Pont-a-Mousson our artillery found it possible to bombard Arnaville.

Nothing has happened in the Vosges.

Indian Troops Retake Trenches.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The Official Information Bureau today issued a statement saying that certain detachments of the Indian troops in Flanders had gallantly retaken some trenches which the British lost yesterday. The Indians captured three German officers and more than 100 men, together with one mortar and three machine guns.

The bureau said further that the general situation in Flanders was unchanged.

Germans Claim Gains at Arras.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—(By Wireless to London.)—In the official communication issued by the German General Staff today the Germans claim to have made progress at Arras. The text of the statement follows:

Yesterday the enemy's ships did not repeat their expedition against the coast (of Belgium.)

The situation in the western war theatre remains unchanged. We made some slight progress at Arras.

French Shells Fall Near Metz.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—The French have bombarded the village of Arnaville, a point on the Lorraine frontier, which is important because of its position on the railway, and its nearness to the Moselle River. It is only ten miles from Metz.

ZEEBRUGGE LOSSES HEAVY.

British Shells Destroyed a Big Hotel and Many Houses.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 25.—Refugees who have arrived from the Belgian coast report that Zeebrugge suffered severely as the result of its bombardment by the British fleet on Monday. Much of the little town is in ruins.

The fleet appeared unexpectedly out of the mist, and the first gun fired dropped a shell in a group of military engineers engaged in work on a submarine in dry dock. Seventeen men were killed on the spot and a number wounded. The Palace Hotel, a fine building, erected last year, was leveled to the ground by the subsequent bombardment with high explosive shells, and two other hotels were also badly damaged. A large briquette factory was burned to the ground and sixteen private houses were practically destroyed.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Dispatches from Dover to the Central News Agency say that the British destroyers played an

BRITISH TOWNS PLAN TO REPEL GERMANS

Organize Rifle Clubs and Plan Measures for Removing Supplies from the Coast.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—England is preparing rapidly to repel any possible invasion by Germany. Along the east and south coasts of England these preparations, begun some time ago, are being pushed forward as speedily as possible. The work is chiefly in the hands of civilians.

Emergency committees of prominent citizens have been formed in several of the large towns. The principal measures already planned look to the safe withdrawal of women and children from the areas which may be threatened, and also the removal of live stock and provisions which would be useful to an invading army, the destruction of grain and other commodities which cannot be removed, and the blocking of roads and destruction of bridges.

Rifle clubs are being organized. The War Office has decided to recognize these clubs, many of which are now drilling. Their badge will consist of a red armlet bearing the letters "G. R." Only those who are ineligible for service as regular soldiers or territorials may belong to such organizations. Members are required to furnish their own equipment.

The City of Hull, according to The Daily Mail, has been divided into six districts. In each district is a committee of 200 prominent men, which will co-operate with the police. Similar committees have been formed in Deal, Sandwich, Folkestone, and several other towns, the Mayors usually acting as Chairmen. Bicyclists and automobilists were organized some time ago for their share of the work.

GERMANY PREPARES FOR ALLIES' INVASION

Strengthens Fortifications North of the Kiel Canal—Guards North Sea Islands.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—An invasion by the Allies is feared by Germany, according to The Copenhagen Evening News, which reports that extensive preparations are being made to guard against such an eventuality.

The News says it has learned from eye-witnesses that the Germans are strengthening old fortresses in the former Danish territory of Schleswig-Holstein, as well as a line of intrenchments, called the Dannewerk, along the northern side of the Kiel Canal. It is thus hoped to protect the canal against attack from the north, for it is on the shores of Schleswig, according to these reports, that an invasion is feared.

All the German islands in the North Sea, it is said, are now closely guarded, and strongly fortified positions are being erected on the shores of Holstein and along the western side of the River Elbe.

SAYS CROWN PRINCE ESCAPED BY TUNNEL

Frenchman's Version of How He Evaded Capture After the Battle of the Marne.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—Details of the German Crown Prince's narrow escape from French dragoons after the Marne defeat were given to me today by a French civilian who, disregarding the prohibitive placards, succeeded in making the trip on a bicycle to within four miles of the German trenches on the western fringe of the Argonne Forest.

Before the battle of the Marne the Prince was at St. Menehould for about a week, with the Princess. He occupied a chateau belonging to a rich drug manufacturer, M. Geraudel, who gained considerable notoriety here some years ago by trying to get a huge poster advertising a cough specific attached to the Eiffel Tower. When the Germans retreated the Crown Prince and Princess retired to the small village of Montfaucon, in the Argonne, where they lived for some days in a large house which previously had been prepared for him.

Learning of this the French made a furious dash on Montfaucon, which they surrounded with a regiment of dragoons and captured several hundred Germans, but the royal party had flown. The raiders found a new subterranean passage eight hundred yards long connecting the house with a by-road at the farther side of a small wood. There, according to natives, a motor was always waiting during the Prince's stay. It is further asserted even this would not have saved him from capture if the Mayor of Montfaucon had not run to warn him when the French entered the village. For this treachery the Mayor subsequently paid with his life.

General Staff Avers Russian Attacks Have Failed Everywhere on Entire Battle Front.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—The retreat of Germans from north of Lodz has become a catastrophe.

A Russian cavalry division, which is pursuing the Germans, has succeeded in thrusting its full strength between one of four German corps engaged and the others. The pressure of the main Russian pursuit compelled these three corps to continue their flight, leaving the fourth corps, which is believed to have been surrounded.

Fifty empty trains have been sent westward from the Warsaw district to bring back the spoils of victory. It is estimated that the entire corps, with guns, has been taken.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Owing to the excessive caution of the military authorities, whose one fear is lest anything be published which afterward should prove untrue and have the appearance of boastfulness, it has been impossible to send many interesting episodes of the recent fighting on the Vistula-Warthe front.

There is no reason to doubt the truth of these matters, but they have not yet appeared in the reports of the Commander in Chief. However, one important item may perhaps go through today which I heard on Monday night.

My previous description of the fight noted that at one point the Germans succeeded in breaking through the Russian defense, but failed to utilize their advantage. It seems that at least one whole army corps found itself in the rear of the Russian position. What I hear on excellent authority was that two army corps got through.

When the Russian counter-stroke was delivered these forces found themselves caught, surrounded, and helpless.

Officially, we do not know even now whether one, one and a half, or two army corps belonging to Gen. von Hindenburg's command surrendered to the Russians, or, indeed, whether any prisoners were taken at all in this fight.

Nevertheless it may be taken for a minimum statement of truth that one German army corps—that is, forty-odd thousand men—has been captured with all their munitions complete.

The only form of confirmation obtainable comes from the Ministry of Ways and Communications, from whom I learned that forty-eight trains had been ordered to convey the captured prisoners and their guns and stores.

As a matter of fact, I believe the Russian success is very much greater than is indicated by the capture of even two army corps, but the military authorities deprecate the publication of premature and incomplete statements. It would not surprise me to hear in the next few days an official account that practically the whole German army in this region had been disarmed.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 26.—"The action near Lodz," says The Daily Mail Petrograd correspondent, "resulted in a great Russian victory.

"One division of Germans already has surrendered and another is in such a hopeless position that it is expected to surrender immediately."

ATTACKED ON ALL SIDES.

Petrograd Official Account of German Left Wing's Plight.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25.—The following official communication from the Russian General Staff was given out tonight:

The fighting near Lodz continues. The large German forces which on Nov. 20 broke into the region of Strykow, Brzeziny, Koluszki, Rzgow, and Tuszyn (all these places are in the vicinity of Lodz) are pressed on every side by our troops, and are now attempting by a supreme effort to cut through toward the north.

To the south of Koluszki station some scattered units are roaming about. We captured prisoners, some heavy ordnance, and field guns.

The outcome of the battle of Nov. 24 was to our advantage.

In the fighting near Czenstochowa and Cracow our troops manifestly have the upper hand.

Beyond the Carpathian passes we are surrounding large bodies of Austrian troops in the vicinity of Mezolaborcz. In this region we captured a General, forty officers, more than 3,500 soldiers, and convoys and machine guns. Near the pass giving access to the Hungarian plain we occupy the City of Homonna.

The Army Messenger, referring to the fighting north of Lodz, says:

"The Germans are making attack after attack in an attempt to break the Russian forces, but without success. The Austro-German Army is staking all on this battle."

The Messenger adds that on the Galician front the Russian offensive is becoming more energetic, and is reducing the enemy to a state of impotence.

There is great jubilation in army circles, officers expressing the conviction that the Germans have received a crushing blow, which is likely to prove decisive in the campaign in Poland.

According to meagre unofficial reports from the theatre of war, the Germans have begun a retreat on the entire front of the Vistula and Warthe Rivers. At some points, it is said, the backward movement resembles a rout, artillery and machine guns and ammunition and commissary stores being left on the field.

Military men express the opinion that the reported defeat was partially due to the failure of the column of Germans from Wielun to drive back the Russians sent against it. Bad roads, it appears, delayed this column, enabling the Russians to concentrate a sufficient force to repulse it and turn the flanks of the main German column.

German Ruse Nearly Successful.

One detachment of Germans, which the reports arriving here assert was cut to pieces, is said to have been on the point of executing a coup disguised as Russians. It is alleged that they wore the round fur peaked cap which forms part of the Caucasian regiment's uniform. They were detected as they were about to turn the Russian flank by officers who noted through their field glasses slight differences in the uniform and equipment of the Germans, according to the story.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The information I telegraphed Monday as to the capture of two German regiments is now officially confirmed. They were taken Sunday to the number of over 6,000 on the Czenstochowa-Cracow front.

It appears that the large bodies of German reinforcements which were marching from Wielun and were intended to envelop the Russian left on the Vistula-Warthe front arrived only in time to support the retreat of the whole German right, which is now endeavoring to make a stand and is relying on the new troops.

The Russian cavalry made a series of charges into the masses of retreating German infantry, doing terrible execution on the fugitives.

The Grenadier Corps, which is always quartered in the premier capital, Moscow, has been selected for special mention for repeated exceptional deeds of gallantry during the recent fighting. Three regiments in three days took 5,000 prisoners from the enemy.

SAYS RUSSIANS HAVE FAILED.

German Staff Reports Success Along Entire Battle Line.

BERLIN, Nov. 25, (By Wireless Telegraphy to London.)—The following official communication was issued by the German General staff today:

In East Prussia our troops repulsed all the Russian attacks.

In the counter-offensive of the Russians from the direction of Lowicz, Strykow, and Brzeziny they failed.

In the districts of Czenstochowo all the Russian attempts also broke down before our front.

BERLIN, Nov. 25, (By Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The Austrian official report published today, announces that the Austrian troops have gained ground in the direction of Wolbrom and this, taken in connection with the German report from Czenstochowo and the district to the north of Cracow, shows, in the opinion of the German military authorities, that the Teuton Allies are working together on the south wing to good purpose.

Wolbrom and Pilica, toward which the Austrians also have gained ground, lie in mountains lands and the fact that this ground has been gained shows that the troops are overcoming many difficulties.

Clear and frosty weather prevails in most of the eastern war zone, with a temperature of 14 above zero, Fahrenheit. At Cracow, Galicia, foggy weather with snow and rain continues.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 25.—Russian troops which entered the County of Ung, in Hungary, have been driven back, according to a telegram received from Budapest, and are now retreating to the frontier after suffering heavy losses.

Energetic action is being taken, the message reads, against the smaller Russian forces at present in the Hungarian County of Zemplin.

HOW HINDENBURG FAILED.

Was Isolated from Crown Prince's Army—Position Called Hopeless.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The weakness of Gen. von Hindenburg's position was that he was isolated from the Crown Prince's army, which is fighting south of Czenstochowa with the object of keeping the main Russian force engaged while von Hindenburg acted in the north.

But the Russian resources were equal to both armies, and when von Hindenburg found himself hard pressed he ordered up into the gap at Wielun Austrian troops who were intended to turn the Russian left flank. These unfortunate Austrians shared the fate of all Austrians who are made to fight Prussian battles. Russian grenadiers foiled their turning movement and put them to flight, capturing 5,000 prisoners and several score of machine guns.

Gen. von Hindenburg's position is now hopeless and thousands of prisoners now streaming into Warsaw speak eloquently of his failure. Among these prisoners are many boys. The multitude of prisoners is heavily taxing the resources of the local railway management.

The Russian Army advancing westward from the San is within twelve miles of Cracow and a battle here will decide the fate of the city. The civil population fearing destruction of the historical buildings through a bombardment, demanded that the city should be surrendered without fighting. In reply the military governor ordered the wholesale expulsion of civilians.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 26.—The Warsaw correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company sends the following dispatch:

"Long columns of German prisoners are passing through this city. Among them are many of the Prussian Guard. Many wounded Germans have their hands and feet frozen and lack warm clothing."

RUSSIA CALLS RESERVES.

First Line in Convenient Centres Ordered to Join the Colors.

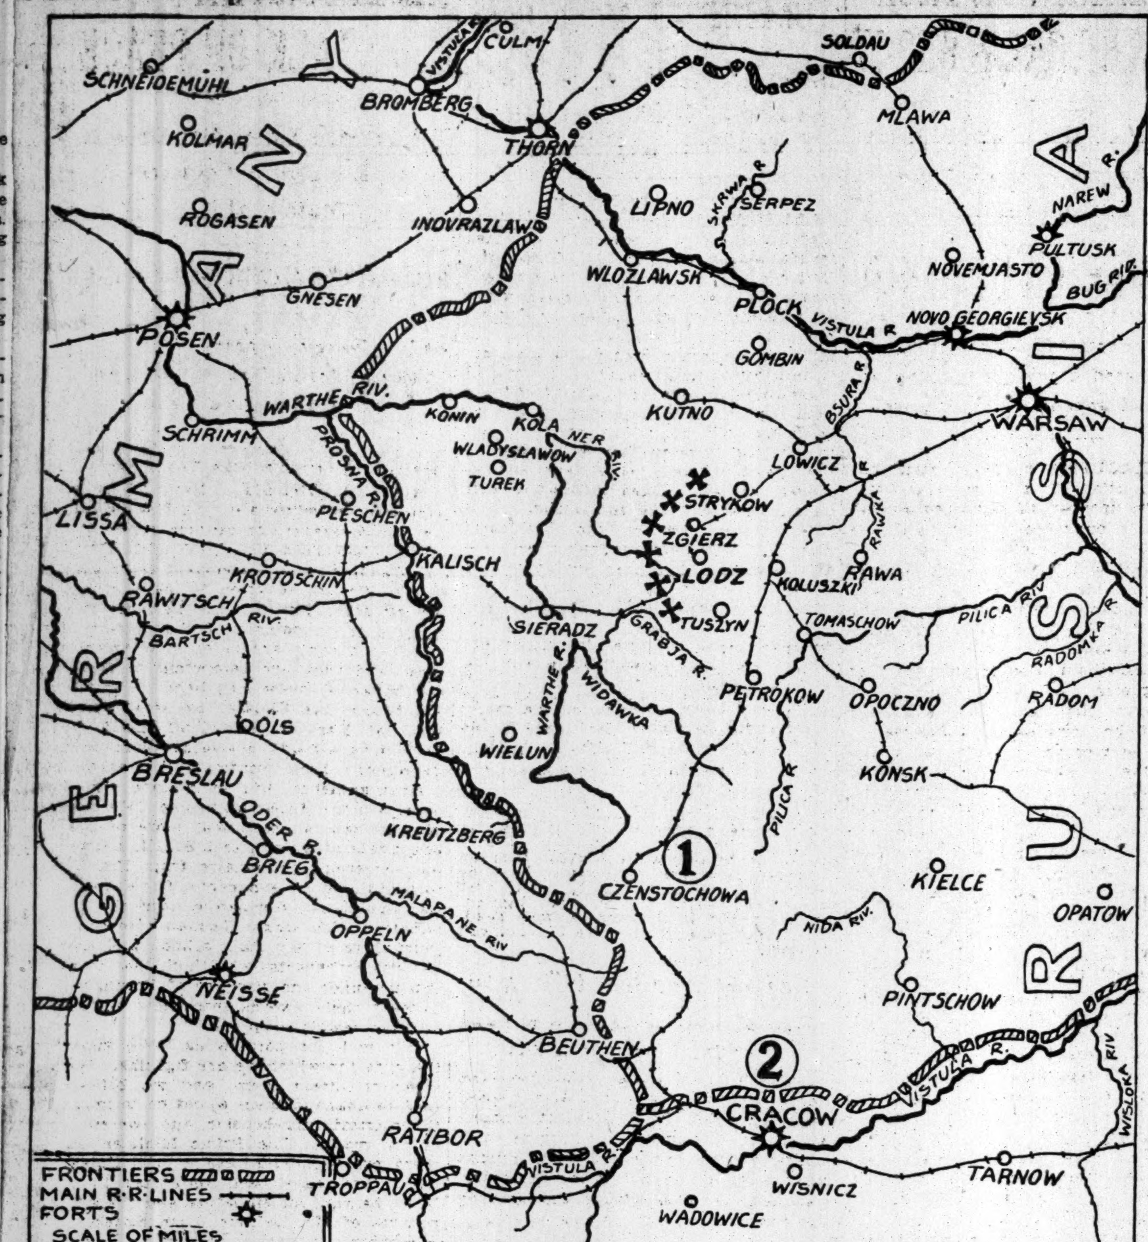
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Another category of Russia's inexhaustible resources in fighting men is called to the colors today. These are all who, not being wanted to complete the peace strength of the army at the recruiting periods from 1905 to 1913, inclusively, were at once written off on to the reserve. Their ages thus vary from 21 to 30.

This mobilization of first reserves is ordered, however, not for the whole empire, but only for certain convenient centres, of which Petrograd is, of course, one.

In ordinary peace recruiting not even half the available contingent is taken, and the numbers exempted were always very great. This is quite apart from exemptions on account of physical incapacity, which is smaller in Russia, with its preponderant agricultural population, than elsewhere.

Scene of Operations of the Main German and Russian Armies



The Russian General Staff intimates that in the region west of Lodz and extending from Strykow to Tuszyn (indicated by crosses on the map) the left wing of the German Army is surrounded. "It is pressed on every side by our troops," says the report, "and is attempting by a supreme effort to break through to the north."

Russian victories are reported near Czenstochowa (1) and Cracow (2).

On the other hand, official reports from Berlin deny that the Russians have achieved success anywhere.

SENTRY ON DUTY SIX DAYS.

Officer Who Posted Him Killed, So Czar Alone Could Relieve Him.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25, (dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The tradition of the Russian army is that once a sentry is posted only his officer who posted him and the Emperor himself can relieve him. Even in times of peace cases occur which require the personal interference of the Emperor to relieve a sentry from his post.

The first case that has happened in this war occurred with a convoy train of a Siberian division, which, on meeting the German outposts, was fired on. The officer who had posted a sentry named Popoff over a regimental treasure chest was killed. For six days Popoff remained at his post, refusing, as the regulations direct, to hand over his charge until a telegram arrived from the Emperor to relieve him.

A deed like this is put in the orders and read before every battalion, squadron and battery in Russia's armies.

SWISS FEAR CHOLERA.

Stringent Precautions Enforced Along the Austrian Frontier.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, Nov. 25, (dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The increase of cholera in Austria-Hungary is becoming so alarming that the Swiss Government has ordered in the districts along the Austrian frontier rigorous disinfecting measures for railway stations, tramcars, and diligences.

It has also appointed numerous places, for instance Zurich, Winterthur, St. Gall, Chur, and Buchs, where persons found infected with cholera can be isolated.

It is becoming increasingly difficult to cross the German frontier, and persons with passports are rigorously searched and questioned, their answers being taken down in writing.

No fewer than 1,700 students enrolled for the Winter term at Heidelberg University are under arms and fifteen from the technical academy at Karlsruhe.

GRAND DUKE DMITRI SHOT.

Czar's Relative, Once in Love with American Girl, Wounded in Battle.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 25. — German newspapers have received a telegram from Milan saying that the Russian Grand Duke Dmitri, son of Grand Duke Paul Alexandrovitch, uncle of Emperor Nicholas, was severely wounded by a bullet in an engagement on the River Warthe.

PRZEMYSL'S CHIEF HANGED?

Clash Between Germans and Austrians of Garrison Reported.

LEMBERG, Galicia, Nov. 25.—The sound of firing, which was said to be the result of a clash between the Germans and Austrians composing the garrison of Przemysl, was reported by refugees arriving here to-day from the vicinity of the Austrian fortress.

The sound came from the fortifications on the interior line and was audible for a distance of two miles. At first it was believed that the troops had fired on mutinous inhabitants in Przemysl, but later, the refugees say, the above cause was learned.

It was further reported that the Germans had hanged the commandant of the fortress, because he proposed to surrender the citadel. The Austrians are said to have opposed the measures put into effect by the Germans, which resulted in a pitched battle in the streets.

Wounded Austrians returning from the Carpathians and from the south of Lemburg, report that the Austrians are retreating in utter defeat. Their losses are said to have been very heavy and to have included 6,000 prisoners and all supplies. Toward Cracow the retreat is said to have been made in better order.

SAYS KAISER SAW DEFEAT.

Emperor Reported to Have Left the Scene Abruptly.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 26.—"The German Emperor last week witnessed in East Prussia, from a hill, called Obernlagen, a German defeat at the hands of the Russians," says the Copenhagen correspondent of The Daily Mail.

"The Emperor took an abrupt leave of the Commander in Chief, asking him to convey his greetings to the troops."

KAISER'S COAT A TROPHY.

Was in His Carriage Captured by Russians at Czenstochowa.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25.—The Army Messenger asserts that among the trophies taken by the Russians at Czentsochowa was Emperor William's carriage.

In it was the Emperor's blue coat.

Iron Cross for Archduke Charles.

BERLIN, Nov. 25, (via The Hague and London.)—Emperor William has conferred the Iron Cross of the first and second class on Archduke Charles Francis of Austria, Commander-in-Chief of the Austrian Army and Heir Apparent to the Austro-Hungarian throne, for the part he has taken in the military operations.

SERVIANS WIN A VICTORY.

Austrians Who Crossed the Kolubara Routed with Large Losses.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—A Servian victory in the fighting with the Austrian invaders is reported in a dispatch today to the Havas Agency, from Nish.

It is said that the Austrian columns which on the night of Nov. 22 crossed the Kolubara River, in Northwestern Servia, were put to rout by the Servians, with large losses. The battle continues, it is said, on a line from Lazarevatz to Mionitza, where the attacks of the Servians caused the Austrians to fall back.

The Austrians are said to have lost 500 prisoners and three machine guns.

VIENNA, Nov. 25, (Via Venice to London, Thursday, Nov. 26.)—Wounded soldiers from Servia are pouring into Hungary in such vast numbers that nearly all the school buildings in the country have been requisitioned for their accommodation. The few schools in Vienna, which had previously been permitted to give instructions two hours daily, have also been commandeered for the wounded.

The Hungarian Minister of the Interiar has ordered the police throughout the country to prepare an accurate list of all enemy aliens in their districts.

ROCKEFELLER AGENTS LEAVE.

Will Go to Servia, Studying Needs and Means of Relief Work.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Wickliffe Rose, Ernest Bricknell, and Henry James, Jr., leave England today for the Continent, where they will investigate with a view to reporting to the Rockefeller Foundation on the suffering among non-combatants in Belgium, France, and Servia. Herbert Hoover, Chairman of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium, joins them in Rotterdam on Saturday night, and the four will make a thorough tour of Belgium. Mr. Rose said:

"We have been investigating the condition of Belgian refugees in England. The American Commission has done remarkably speedy and effective work. I cannot say anything as to what further relief the Rockefeller Commission will undertake on the Continent, but we will make a wide investigation of the needs and means of relief which can be employed. We understand that suffering in Servia is acute and likely to grow worse."

NO QUARRELS, SAYS MOLTKE.

Germans and Austrians Will Stand Together Till Peace Is Obtained.

PRAGUE, Bohemia, Nov. 25, via London, Thursday, Nov. 26.—The Tageblatt's Frankfort, Germany, correspondent says that in an interview with Field Marshal Count von Moltke, the German Chief of Staff declared there was no foundation for the reports that there had been conflicts between the Austro-Hungarian and the German military commanders.

"We will stand together and will hold together until a lasting peace is obtained," Count von Moltke is quoted as saying.

RELIEF CLEARINGHOUSE ESTABLISHED IN PARIS

Americans and Frenchmen Form a Committee to Distribute Goods Sent from Here.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—An organization has just been formed here for the purpose of centralizing and supervising the transmission and distribution of American relief in Europe. It is to be called the American Relief Clearing House, and has the sanction of the State Department at Washington and the approval of the French Government. The organization was formed at the suggestion of Myron T. Herrick, the retiring Ambassador to France.

The committee purposes to have its own warehouse, and will take an inventory of everything sent from the United States to France. The work will be under the personal direction of a Director General, whose name will be announced later. The French Committee, of which Gabriel Hanotaux, President of the Franco-American Commission for the Development of Political, Economic, Literary, and Artistic Relations, will be Chairman, will work in conjunction with the organization. It is also intended to form a Belgian Committee.

In the United States the branch of the clearing house will be in charge of R. A. C. Smith, Dock Commissioner of New York City. In Paris the committee will be a large one. Its membership will include Robert Bacon, former American Ambassador, Honorary Chairman; H. Herman Harjes, Chairman; J. Ridgely Carter, Treasurer; Charles Carroll, Secretary, and T. Piexotto, Whitney Warren, George Munroe, and Edward Tuck.

FRENCH FETE BRITISH AIRMEN.

Legion of Honor for Men Who Dropped Bombs at Friedrichshafen.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—A Geneva dispatch to The Daily Express says:

"A telegram from Belfort states that the commanding General there had a parade Monday in honor of the British airmen, Commander Babbington and Flight Lieut. Sippe, who participated in the raid on Friedrichshafen, and decorated them with the Legion of Honor. Later the officers of the garrison entertained the airmen at a banquet.

"It is reported here that two Zeppelins at Friedrichshafen were seriously damaged."

SAYS POSTMARK IS FORGED.

French Paper Accuses Germans of Putting "Paris" on Their Mail.

NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 25, (dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—It is said that letters of German soldiers fighting in the western theatre of war are sent to their wives in Germany with a special Paris postmark. The Petit Calaisien makes the following announcement, on which it says is reliable authority:

"The German postal service on the field has fabricated a special postmark on which is inscribed 'Paris.' Although Paris has not been reached, the postmark is in use, and German families are thrilled with pride when they receive the letters and postcards bearing it."

EXCHANGING CIVILIANS.

French, Germans, and Russians Passing Through Switzerland.

BERNE, Nov. 25, via Paris, Thursday, Nov. 26.—The exchange of civilians under or above military age interned in belligerent countries is now being actively carried out. Within the past few days over 5,000 such persons have passed through Switzerland. They included 700 French, 1,000 Austrians, and 3,500 Germans. They were transported in special trains, each carrying 500 persons.

It is estimated that there are still 20,000 Germans interned in France, and, according to German newspapers 150,000 to 180,000 in Russia. Several thousand women, children, and old men, it is charged by these newspapers, have been sent in their Summer clothes to Siberia, where, destitute of all means, their situation is deplorable. It seems no way has yet been found to effect their exchange.

AMSTERDAM, via Berlin, Nov. 25.—The Telegraaf's Berlin correspondent says the German Government would not oppose the formation of an international committee, composed of subjects of neutral States, for the inspection of all war prisoner camps in belligerent countries, if Great Britain, France, and Russia would agree to such an inspection.

JOFFRE DIRECTS WAR FROM TRANQUIL SPOT

French General's Headquarters in Village Schoolhouse 70 Miles from Firing Line.

HEARS NO SOUND OF BATTLE

In Constant Touch with Six Field Generals by Telephone — Office Force of Busy Young Colonels.

Correspondence of The Associated Press.

GEN. JOFFRE'S HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 7.—The nerve centre that moves more than 2,000,000 men is in a village schoolhouse seventy miles behind the firing line. The rare observer who is permitted to learn its whereabouts, and approach, finds an absolute contrast between the tranquillity here and the intense action near the trenches. No cannon, machine guns, or rifles can be heard.

The Commander in Chief co-ordinates his information and arrives at his decisions not only far from the disturbance of actual conflict but in the depth of the country, away from the first and second lines of reserves, the incessant movement of motor transport, and the dislocation of civil life. An air of repose surrounds the headquarters, but life is intense here also, a twenty-four-hour day of study and acts of judgment.

"What young Colonels you have here," remarked the correspondent to a member of the staff.

"They are the men of the future," he replied. "Some of these young Colonels are at their desks at 5 in the morning and go to their quarters, in pleasant private dwellings near by, at 10 at night. They are relieved by others, and each sort of work goes on throughout the night."

Gen. Joffre has six subordinate nerve centres in the six armies into which the field forces are divided. The six Generals commanding these armies—Gens. Pau, Foch, Dalstein, Franche d'Esperay, Castelnau, and Manoury—each with his general staff, are connected by direct telegraph and telephone wires with headquarters. Gen. Joffre often talks over situations by telephone, receives suggestions, and gives orders, which are confirmed and recorded by telegraph. He is also in direct and frequent communication with Field Marshal French and Belgian Headquarters, and with Bordeaux and Paris.

A single sentinel paces in front of the entrance. Except for a few forester guards, there are no soldiers in Gen. Joffre's village except his group of youngish men on his staff, picked for their talents among the 50,000 officers of France. The roads of approach are watched by gendarmes, and it is impossible to enter the place except by a pass either by the chief of Joffre's staff or by one of the few persons in the military administration authorized to sign such a pass.

The headquarters of a commanding General used to be distinguished by the orderlies and horses in front, and his rank could be reasonably well determined by their number. Now it is the number of motor cars. Some of the long, high-powered runners are usually lined up in the playground of the school house. There is no tooting of horns. The cars come and go quietly and swiftly. The representative of the British War Office, Col. Yarde-Buller, arrives, or the Russian military agent, or an officer from the immediate front, or a delegate from the Government, but for the most part there is little coming and going. The vast business of the drama is transacted by wire. The meaning and significance of it all can only be determined by events remote from here.

When Gen. Joffre goes to the headquarters of one of the armies he has with him an automobile fitted as an office. It looks inside very much like the little drawing rooms attached to steamer cabins. A writing desk lets down from one end. Two divisions are along the sides, and there are convenient devices for docketing the papers.

Gen. Joffre himself appears to be in a grave, calm mood and in vigorous health.

FRENCH TROOPS NEARING METZ

important part in the bombardment of Zeebrugge on Monday. Steaming with great daring close to the shore, the vessels drew the fire of the German artillery, which disclosed their positions to the British naval guns.

The British ships have now withdrawn, the messages say, without a single casualty, and are returning to home ports to take on stores.

Reports Ships Still Bombarding.

AMSTERDAM, via London, Thursday, Nov. 26.—The Maasbode says that reports received from Aardenburg state that continuous heavy gun firing has been heard there since yesterday at noon, and that the British fleet was still bombarding the German positions near Zeebrugge.

REPORT BAVARIANS DESERTING

French Assert That Hatred of Prussians Makes Them Surrender.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON Nov. 25.—More stories of the disaffection of the Bavarian troops are reaching here. A Paris dispatch to The Standard supplements the accounts of the fraternizing of French and Bavarian outposts in the Vosges region.

"There will be an attack tonight, but you can rely upon us firing into the air. We shall be replaced by Prussians in a day or two, and I will let you know when this occurs."

"This," says The Standard correspondent, "is what a Bavarian officer said to a French Lieutenant who walked boldly into the enemy's trenches four days ago. Of course the statement represents an extreme case, but there is no doubt that serious friction exists between the Bavarians and Germans who are fighting together. Several incidents reported go to prove this.

"Bavarians and Prussians have undoubtedly come to blows regarding the Queen of the Belgians, [who is a Bavarian Princess.] Further, it is now reported that a serious disagreement has arisen between the Imperial Chancellor and the Prime Minister of Bavaria. What is undeniable is that the Bavarian troops take every possible opportunity to surrender.

"From another part of the front, at Quesnoy, a letter to hand says that when the Germans saw that the French Red Cross men occupied themselves with the German wounded as well as with their own over 200 deserted during the night. They came to the French and told them that if only all the Bavarians could be sure that they would be humanely treated, three parts of them would surrender outright."

JULIUS FOEHR KILLED.

Director of North German Lloyd Line Was Serving in German Army.

News was received from Berlin yesterday by the agents of the North German Lloyd Company that Julius Foehr, a Director of the company, was killed in action in Northern Belgium on Oct. 22, two days after the death of his assistant, Erwin Schricker, who had been wounded in a fight in France.

Director Foehr entered the service of the North German Lloyd in 1900, spending from August of that year to July, 1901, in the New York office. In 1910 he went to Bremen in place of Charles von Helmolt, who came here as General Manager in the United States.

Foehr was First Lieutenant of the Grenadier Regiment King Karl, No. 123.

BRITISH NAVAL LOSSES TOTAL 7,341 MEN

4,327 Killed, 473 Wounded, 968 Missing, and 1,573 Captured or Interned.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Thus far during the war the Royal Navy has lost 4,327 officers and men killed and 473 wounded, while 968 men are missing and 1,573 are captives or have been interned. The total is 7,341 officers and men.

These figures are contained in a statement issued tonight by the Admiralty, and include, in addition to naval men, the marines of the Royal Naval division. The casualties and the number of men captured or interned are as follows:

Officers: Killed, 220; wounded, 37; prisoners, 5; interned, 46.

Men: Killed, 4,107; wounded, 436; missing, 968; interned, 1,524.

A great majority of those reported killed were drowned, 1,718 losing their lives in this manner when the cruisers Pathfinder, Aboukir, Cressy, and Hogue were sent to the bottom by German submarines, while the foundering of the Monmouth and Good Hope after the action with the German squadron off the coast of Chile was responsible for the loss of 1,654 officers and men.

The operations of the Royal Naval Division at Antwerp are accountable for nearly all of those reported interned or missing. Most of the missing are prisoners of war in Germany.

CHILE TO FORCE NEUTRALITY.

Sends Three Warships to Search Juan Fernandez Islands.

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 25. — In pursuance of its announced intention of enforcing strict neutrality, the Chilean Government today dispatched the destroyers Capitan Merino, Tarpa, and Capitan O'Brien to the Juan Fernandez Islands, Chilean possessions, 400 miles off the coast. The warships sailed under sealed orders.

The authorities at the port of Antofagasta removed vital parts of the engine of the German steamer Karnack, notwithstanding the promise of the German Minister that German steamers would not leave Chilean ports.

An official statement of the Chilean maritime authorities yesterday said it had been proved that German warships had violated the neutrality of Chile by staying for several days in the Juan Fernandez Islands.

AMERICANS LAUD HERRICK.

Thanksgiving Celebration in Paris a Tribute to the Ambassador.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—About sixty well known Americans in Paris gathered tonight for an informal Thanksgiving dinner. Although robbed of much of its usual vivacity, owing to the prevailing conditions in Europe, the function was one of great sincerity as regards Myron T. Herrick, the American Ambassador who soon will return to the United States.

Lawrence V. Benet of the American Club and T. Piexotto of the American Chamber of Commerce expressed warm appreciation of the services of Mr. Herrick, who, they said, had displayed marvelous capacity as an organizer in the critical period in Paris.

Mr. Herrick, replying, said the situation had drawn Americans closer together and had shown the value of united action. He concluded with a eulogy of the American women who have devoted themselves to the care of the wounded and to other persons in need.

Toasts to President Wilson and President Poincaré were drunk.

VENICE, Nov. 26, (via Paris.)—Frederic C. Penfield, American Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, and Mrs. Penfield provided a bountiful Thanksgiving dinner in Vienna yesterday for 2,000 poor persons, inmates of hospitals and for refugees, including many Russians. There was also a dinner for the American physicians and nurses of the Red Cross Hospital.

HERRICK ON HIS ESCAPE.

"Times When a Man Is More Valuable to Humanity Dead Than Alive."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—The Petit Journal mentions apropos of former Ambassador Herrick's departure what it calls "a diplomat's fine remark."

When a Taube bomb fell near the Embassy in the Avenue du Trocadéro Mr. Herrick passed the spot ten minutes afterward. Some one said: "What if the bomb had fallen ten minutes later?"

The Ambassador replied:

"There are times when a man is more valuable to the cause of humanity dead than alive."

German Paper Says He Was Hurt While Visiting the Trenches.

BERLIN, (via The Hague and London), Nov. 25.—The correspondent of a Marburg newspaper, who recently visited Gen. von der Goltz, Governor of the occupied territory in Belgium, says that while the General was visiting the trenches lately he was wounded in the face.

NOVEL ANTI-ZEPPELIN BOMB.

Explodes When It Hits a Dirigible, Harmless Against Hard Surface.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—According to the Eclair, a Grenoble jeweler, Anthony Anthony Jacques, has invented an arrow bomb for destroying Zeppelins, which is quite harmless when striking a hard surface, even with great force, although it can be set to act as a percussion bomb if desired. Experiments made yesterday morning at Grenoble before a party of investigators, including M. Morard, the local Fire Chief, showed that when the arrow bomb struck a comparatively flimsy fabric, like the envelope of a dirigible, it promptly exploded, but when thrown violently against a steel plate fell harmlessly to the ground.

The inventor says these bombs could be cheaply and rapidly fabricated, and suggests that they might be thrown from aeroplanes in handfuls. He has placed his invention at the disposal of the War Department.

CHOLERA IN ANTWERP?

London Paper Says a Few Cases Have Been Reported.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Cholera is reported to have broken out in Antwerp, according to a dispatch from Rotterdam to The Evening Star.

Only a few cases so far have been reported, and the most energetic measures are being taken by the sanitary authorities.

SAY GERMAN TORPEDO SANK REFUGEE SHIP

Fragment of Projectile Shows How the Admiral Ganteame Was Destroyed.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The French steamer Admiral Ganteaume, which was sunk on Oct. 26 while on her way from Calais to Havre with a great throng of refugees aboard, was hit by a German torpedo, according to an Admiralty statement issued today.

An examination, it is said, revealed a fragment of the torpedo in a lifeboat. Although 2,000 refugees were aboard the ship, many of them women and children, only forty lives were lost, the others being rescued.

With the foregoing announcement the Admiralty furnished a picture of the torpedo fragment, adding: "This proves conclusively that the vessel was torpedoed by a German submarine."

The theory up to now was that the Admiral Ganteaume had hit a mine.

STEAMER SUNK NEAR HAVRE

German Submarine Makes Capture Few Miles from French Port.

HAVRE, via Paris, Thursday, Nov. 26.—The British steamer Melachite has been sunk by a German submarine a few miles northwest of Cape La Hève, which is about three miles from Havre.

The Melachite, a steamer of about 2,000 tons, belonging to the Cunard Company, was bound from Liverpool to Havre. She was stopped by the submarine and the crew received ten minutes to get into the ship's boats.

After this was done the submarine sank the Melachite and then closed her own hatches and dived down beneath the sea, leaving the crew of the steamer to make their way to Havre. They arrived safely a few hours after their boat had been sunk.

SHIP BUILDERS ARE RUSHED

British Yards Busy in Making Up for Sea Losses.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The success of the Emden and other German cruisers in capturing and sinking British steamships has resulted in a boom in shipbuilding industry. In the North of England the yards have orders for 200,000 tons of new shipping, while on the Clyde alone, orders have been given for 50,000 tons.

MIGHT INVADE CANADA.

Not Impossible for Germany, Prof. Wendell of Harvard Writes.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 25. — If Germany should seriously impair the fighting strength of England's Navy, an attempted invasion of Canada, by way of New York or Boston, by the Kaiser's forces would not be impossible, according to Prof. Barrett Wendell of Harvard's English department. Writing in The Harvard Crimson, Prof. Wendell declares:

"Should the naval power of England collapse, a most unlikely event, the British Empire would everywhere be exposed to German attack. Among the parts of the empire thus exposed would be Canada. Indeed, if I am not in error, the newspapers have lately attributed to the German Ambassador at Washington certain conjectures as to how the Monroe Doctrine should be interpreted if an attack on Canada should occur.

"Canada is evidently assailable, not only through her own ports, but through ours. The accident of American neutrality need no more interfere with German plans than the accident of Belgium did. That a German military expedition against Canada by way of Boston or New York might probably be disastrous is no reason why it should not be attempted. That America would permit it is unthinkable. Such indemnities as might consequently be demanded from Boston and New York would be highly desirable in the present state of German national expenses."

VICTORIA CROSS FOR INDIAN

First One to be Recommended Killed Eleven Germans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 26.—The Times's correspondent at Boulogne, writing on Nov. 24, says that Havildar Gagna Singh of the Fifty-seventh Wilde's Rifles, is the first Indian to be recommended for the Victoria Cross. He arrived in a hospital ship this afternoon, a bundle of splints and bandages, but very cheerful and full of heart. He has five bullet wounds—one in a leg, one in the chest, one in each hand, and one on the scalp from a revolver, fired point-blank.

The Havildar and fifteen men of his regiment were attacked in their trench before dawn. The Germans were stopped for some seconds by barbed wire entanglements and lost heavily before they broke through. In the hand-to-hand struggle that ensued the Havildar shot the German officer whose bullet grazed his head. He took his sword from him and killed ten more before he was brought down by a bullet in the foot.

"Otherwise," he said, "I should have killed more. It was a heavy sword."

The Germans lost sixty. He was left for dead, and is the sole survivor of his party.

GERMANY CONSERVES FOOD.

Orders a Census of Cattle on Dec. 1—Restricting the Bread Output.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 25.—To obtain exact information as to the food supplies in the country a census of animals is to be taken throughout the German Empire on Dec. 1. Cattle, sheep, pigs, goats, and horses are to be enumerated.

As the result of a conference between the Government and the Berlin bakers, the baking of bread more than twice a day has been prohibited in order to prevent waste of grain due to the fact that the public always insists on having new bread. The sale of stale bread as food for cattle is declared illegal, and it is enacted that as much stale bread as possible shall be rebaked to appear as new.

It is estimated that these steps will result in saving 12,000 pounds of flour per day in Berlin alone.

NEW GERMAN GUN FIRES IN SILENCE

Hurls Its Shell by Pneumatic Contrivance and Gives No Warning Sound.

BATTLE FRONT AMENITIES

Germans and British Only 40 Yards Apart, Fraternize and Exchange Tobacco.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Interesting bits of description from the battle front from the pen of the British eye-witness, Col. E. D. Swinton, under date of Nov. 23, were given out today by the London Press Bureau. Of chief interest was the statement that the Germans are using a silent gun, probably of pneumatic equipment. Concerning this weapon, the account says:

"In our centre the enemy employed a silent gun which may be pneumatic or worked by some mechanical contrivance. There is no report of the discharge, the projectile travels through the air without any of the warning made by an ordinary shell and the first notice to be received of its arrival is the detonation. So far the weapon has done no damage."

The account speaks of the trenches of the opponents as being at some points only forty yards apart. The English and Germans talk back and forth, hold shooting competitions and exchange tobacco much after the manner of soldiers in the American civil war.

"There the positions are not unwelcome to our men," the account says, "for they at any rate are secure from shell fire, the hostile artillery being unable to shoot in the fear that it would hit its own infantry. Indeed, for either side, a trench close to the enemy often is a safer spot than any other in the fighting zone.

"Tacit agreements among the men so situated often are made, a notable one being for permission for the representatives of either side to venture from the trenches to heat tea on a smoldering fire at a farm. Friend and foe continued to make use of this for days until for some reason the Germans broke the truce and put a bullet in the shoulder of one of our men, thereby cutting off the supply of hot water from both sides for good and all."

Cold weather has frozen the slush, improving the conditions in the trenches in some ways, but the drop in the temperature makes the men so lame that many have to be lifted out of the trenches when relieved and others are sent thoroughly chilled to the hospital.

"Beyond the hardships inflicted on individuals," Col. Swinton says, "the change in the weather chiefly has affected aerial reconnoissance and transportation. The freezing makes the roads better and the clear, crisp atmosphere aids the aviators to see the landscape more freely."

The Germans in one place are using a 42-centimeter howitzer against the British left, it is said, and the report tells of the capture on Nov. 21 of a German aeroplane bearing circulars calling on the Hindus to desert. Two more German aeroplanes were brought down on Nov. 23, one after a running aerial fight in which a British aviator was wounded. This German machine was captured, but the other succeeded in landing within the German line.

"Some of the roads behind the enemy's front line in one quarter," Col. Swinton writes, "have, it is believed, become impassable, owing partly to the weather conditions existing before the recent drop in the temperature, and also to the attentions of the allied artillery. It is possible to render roads impracticable by long-range fire from heavy guns, either by shelling any object that attempts to pass or merely by dropping a shell on the road itself. A combination of craters, such as those made by a large calibre high-explosive shell, and deep mud forms an obstacle difficult of negotiation by motor transport."

HOPES FOR JAPAN'S AID IN EUROPEAN STRUGGLE

M. Pichon, ex-Foreign Minister, Advocates It — Thinks Allies Willing and America Not Afraid.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 25. — In an editorial article in the Petit Journal, M. Pichon, ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs, asserts that the idea of Japanese participation in the war in Europe is gradually gaining ground. He says:

"At first such a suggestion received little favor from the chancelleries, though greatly interesting the public and the press, but it has now won at least careful examination. It has numerous partisans in Japan, France, and Russia, while England welcomes it sympatheticalįq. Germany fears it, which emphasizes its importance.

"Any fears aroused—quite unjustly—in the United States are disappearing. Besides, it is easy to give the American Republic all the guarantees it desires.

"I see with satisfaction the progress of the proposal. Let us make one more effort, and our great Far Eastern ally will come to join us on the European battlefields."

Since the beginning of the war, M. Pichon has been a strong advocate of Japanese aid in the West. During his term of office in 1907 he engineered the entente between Japan, Russia, and France, which helped to render possible Japanese action.

RUMANIA LIKELY TO FIGHT.

Legislature Summoned and Will Probably Authorize War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—The belief now prevails that Rumania has finally decided to enter the war. Her politicians are convinced that she cannot expect to secure Transylvania without firing a shot, as she gained Dobur-Dobrudja in the second Balkan war.

The Constitution of Rumania requires the Legislature's sanction for mobilization, and the Senate and Chamber of Deputies are being convoked by royal decree for next Saturday, when the necessary measures, including a moratorium, will be presented.

It is expected that the Government thereafter will be authorized to declare war against Austria and Turkey.

COLOMBIA WARNED BY BRITISH OFFICIAL

GERMAN WIRELESS INVOLVED

Futile British Protest to Colombia Led to Direct Appeal for Washington's Help.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Great Britain and France have appealed to the United States to exercise its good offices to induce Colombia to observe more strictly the requirements of neutrality. Otherwise the Allies, it was stated in the House of Commons today, may be compelled in self-defense to take further steps for the protection of their interests.

Charles Roberts, Under Secretary of the Colonial Department, speaking on behalf of the Foreign Office, stated that information in the possession of the Government indicated that the Governments of Colombia and Ecuador had failed in certain respects to observe an attitude of strict neutrality, and that their failure to do so was likely to be detrimental to the interests of this country.

The particular cause of complaint against Colombia had reference to a high power wireless station. The British Chargé d'Affaires endeavored repeatedly, said Mr. Roberts, to induce the Colombian Government to remove the staff of Germans at the wireless station and institute strict control in order to prevent the transmission of messages to belligerent merchant ships lying in Colombian ports. Failing in this, the Chargé sought to have the station closed. The report received from the Chargé leaves it in doubt whether the steps taken by the Colombian Government are of an effective nature.

Mr. Roberts added that the British Naval Attaché at Washington, who was sent to Colombia to investigate conditions there, found that the wireless station was nominally being operated under censorship, but that in reality it was entirely under German influence. He considered it of importance to suppress the operation of the station. He also reported that German steamers in ports of Colombia were continuing to use their wireless equipment, although ostensibly dismantled.

It therefore appeared to the British Government, said Mr. Roberts, that further representations to Colombia were not likely to be of any avail. It was therefore decided to appeal, in co-operation with the French Government, to the good offices of the United States to procure a more strict enforcement of Colombian neutrality. It was also stated that in the event that Colombia continued to maintain her present attitude, the allied Governments might be compelled, in self-defense, to take such measures as they deemed necessary for the protection of their interests.

Mr. Roberts went on to say that a similar communication had been sent to Washington with respect to Ecuador, whose Foreign Minister had himself informed the British Chargé and his French colleagues that German warships had converted certain islands belonging to Ecuador into naval bases. Mr. Roberts said that the Government of Ecuador had failed to comply with the request of Great Britain and France to exercise proper control of wireless apparatus.

The British Government being of the opinion that further diplomatic protests to Ecuador would be useless, and not being prepared to disregard Ecuador's obligations with respect to neutrality, judged it expedient to communicate with the Government of the United States. The latter had consented to communicate with Colombia and Ecuador, but Great Britain was not yet aware what result had attended that action.

In reply to a question by Earl Ronaldshay, Mr. Roberts said that in the communication to Washington no assertion had been made that these breaches of neutrality had resulted in the loss of the cruisers Good Hope and Monmouth, which were sunk in an engagement with the German Pacific fleet off the coast of Chile.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Today's announcement in the British House of Commons that the Allies may be compelled in self-defense to take measures to protect their interests unless the Republic of Colombia observes more strictly the requirements of neutrality relates, it was authoritatively explained here tonight, to the oral communications delivered to the State Department two weeks ago by the British and French Ambassadors. At that time the State Department was informed by the Ambassadors of the complaints of England and France against alleged violations of the neutrality of Colombia and Ecuador through the erection of wireless telegraph stations, reputed to have been utilized in the delivery of unneutral messages to German warships.

The British and French Ambassadors informed the United States of the complaints of their Governments, and asked the United States Government to call the attention of the Colombian and Ecuadorean Governments to the complaints. The American Government was not asked to compel Colombia or Ecuador to observe a more strict neutrality, but to use its good offices in inviting their attention to the facts. The statement made by Mr. Roberts in the House related to what was done then. There has been no new representation made by England or France.

HINTS AT REDRESS.

London Paper Sees Possible Attack on Ecuador and Colombia.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 26.—An editorial article in The London Daily Chronicle says: "It now appears that the German naval exploits in the Pacific have involved the infringement of the neutrality of no fewer than three South American republics, Chile, Ecuador, and Colombia. In the case of Chile, the attitude of the Government is now correct.

"It is otherwise with Ecuador and Colombia. The Governments of both these tropical republics appear to have fallen under German influence, both allowing wireless stations to be used contrary to neutrality for German purposes, and Ecuador also permitted the use of an island as a German naval base.

"Franco-British remonstrances have not been listened to, and in strict deference to the implications of the Monroe Doctrine Great Britain and France have turned to the Government of the United States, asking it to use its influence to bring back Colombia and Ecuador to neutrality. Should the two republics spurn American advice, we suppose the United States will stand by while the injured powers take whatever steps are necessary to vindicate their rights, subject, of course, to the fullest assurances that no annexation of South American territory will be attempted."

ENGLAND REPUDIATES GRAVES

Never Connected with Foreign Offices, House Is Told.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—A representative of the Foreign Office, questioned in the House of Commons today on the statement credited to Dr. Carl Armgaard Graves that he had been intrusted in 1912 with a mission to a foreign country by the Foreign Office, denied that the Foreign Office ever had any connection with Dr. Graves. This applied to either before or after June 16, 1913, when the matter of Dr. Graves's supposed connection with the British Foreign Office came up for discussion in the House of Commons.

The case of Dr. Graves has attracted no little attention in England since his arrest in Edinburgh in the Summer of 1912 at a time when he was supposed to have been acting as a spy for Germany. It was after this that it was intimated that he had entered the British service.

SHAW IS ATTACKED IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

Member's Assertion that Pamphlet on the War Was Harmful Is Cheered by Hearers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—In the House of Commons this afternoon Rowland Hunt, (Unionist,) asked Sir Stanley Buckmaster, Director of the Press Bureau, whether George Bernard Shaw's pamphlet, "Common Sense About the War," had passed the censor, and, if so, could he say why the censor had allowed it to be published in its present form?

Sir Stanley said he had not seen the "document" referred to.

Mr. Hunt asked if the pamphlet did not contain statements, not only false, but very injurious to this country. Cheers greeted this remark. He went on:

"Can we understand that men of the Bernard Shaw type can publish anything they like, however detrimental to the country?"

The Speaker, intervening, said: "The member forgets that this is question time."

LONDON, Nov. 25.—In the course of today's discussion in the House of Commons, Sir Stanley Buckmaster said that the censorship should have no concern with politics and should not in any circumstances be used for coloring opinion in favor of the Government. If that were done, he said, the Government would abuse the confidence of the nation and be guilty of a very base action.

Sir Stanley said he had no sympathy with the view that bad news should be prohibited. It was possible, however, that there might be circumstances in which a full disclosure of events might not be desirable, and might even prove disastrous.

The Government today accepted amendments to the Defense of the Realm bill, defining the powers of the Government with regard to action that can be taken in matters relating to the publication of news.

TO IGNORE HOLY WAR ORDER

Moslems in North Africa Loyal to France, Says Bishop Anderson.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 26.—The Rev. Dr. W. F. Anderson of Cincinnati, Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has arrived in London after a visit to Methodist missionary centres in North Africa. In conversation with a Daily Chronicle representative he said he was much impressed by the loyalty of the Moslems in Algeria and Tripoli to France and with their understanding of the real matters at issue in the war.

He said he was especially struck by the fact that these zealous Mohammedans had not been affected by the proclamation of a holy war in Constantinople. They knew quite well that this was due to German, not Moslem, inspiration.

"From Marseilles," said Bishop Anderson, "we went to Oran, from there to Algiers, then to Biskra and Constantino, and finally to Tunis. On the way back we stopped at Fort National. We made it our business to call upon officials of our Methodist Church and upon local officials to discuss the situation with special reference to local Mussulman opinion. From all sides we received evidence of the loyalty of the Moslems to the French Government.

"During one of our journeys we fell into the company of a group of leading Arab merchants, who unanimously repudiated the idea of responding to the declaration of a holy war by the Sheik ul Islam. They were all unqualified in their avowal of loyalty to the French Government, which, they said, had been their protector, and under which they had prospered. They added that they would be sorry to seem to be at variance with the Sultan of Turkey, but they were emphatic in their assurances that Constantinople's proclamation would not weaken the allegiance of the North African Moslems to the French Government."

Dr. Anderson thinks the unity of Mohammedanism as a political force "has been broken by the power of efficient Government in India, Egypt, and Algeria." Nowhere in Africa, he said, "did I find any sign or symptom of sympathy with Germany."

CANNOT DECLARE "HOLY WAR"

Sheikh-ul-Islam of Caucasus Denies Right of Turkish Confrere.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.) — The Sheikh-ul-Islam of the Caucasus has given this expression of opinion as the head of the Russian Mussulmans:

"The Porte holds no canonical right to declare a Holy War. Its orders are not binding on the local Ulema, and we are not even bound to know who happens to be Sheikh-ul-Islam at Constantinople at that time. Instructions he issues to the Turkish Ulema.

"As regards the declaration of a Holy War, it would if done under the present circumstances be a direct violation of the text of the Koran relating to it, namely Verse 7, beginning, 'Those who have no quarrel with us on the ground of faith,' and ending, 'Whose activity is wholly directed against our faith.'

"This text plainly shows that a declaration against Russia is the exact opposite of what the Koran prescribes. The Russians give us Mussulmans perfect liberty in the practice of our faith. We are entirely loyal to Russia, as is proved by the number of volunteers, 16,500, who have already been enrolled, and they are still coming in all the time."

RUSSIANS PURSUE TURKS.

Victors Near Erzerum Find Roads Strewn with Frozen Bodies.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25.—That the Turkish forces are still retreating before the Russians in the region around Erzerum is recorded in the following statement from the General Staff of the Russian Army in the Caucasus, made public here tonight:

"In the direction of Erzerum our troops continue to chase before them the bulk of the Turkish forces they have defeated. We are capturing many prisoners and much ammunition and stores. The roads along which the Turks are retreating are strewn with the frozen bodies of their dead.

"Prisoners taken are unanimous in declaring that the defeated army is making haste with a view to seeking shelter behind the forts at Erzerum and Deve-boyun.

"The situation elsewhere remains unchanged."

THE WAR SITUATION.

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.
(An Associate Editor of The Army and Navy Journal.)

The official French bulletin issued yesterday on the last six weeks of the war gives an interesting description of the fighting in Belgium. The German assaults in this region prove to have been pressed with great force in an effort to drive the Allies out of the country. The whole German campaign was for several weeks subordinated to this end.

The stubborn resistance of the French and British defeated every effort of the Germans to break through and achieved results that may prove to be the turning point of the war. By holding back the Germans until the Russian attack could get well under way the French and British have now passed the crisis in their military situation. By this check in the West the Germans are deprived of their advantage due to the suddenness of their forcing of the war, while that of preparation and training is also now passing to the Allies. The contest is consequently becoming one of endurance and resources, with the resources of the Allies pitted against the endurance of the Germans.

It must not too readily be assumed that superior resources in men mean an early victory. They may be worth little more in war than is a pistol in the bureau drawer, when one is confronted in the parlor by an armed burglar. This has been well illustrated by the impotency of the Allies in France to make use of their big advantages in numbers until the arsenals could properly equip their armies for fighting.

The first period of the western fighting has now passed, and the opposing troops are getting into shape for the second stage of the campaign. The British naval guns and the new French four-inch guns have strengthened the artillery on the side of the Allies, while immense stores of equipment have placed their forces in better fighting trim. The large losses suffered by the Germans in their first-line troops in their unsuccessful efforts to crush the French and British resistance have also brought the opposing fighting troops to an equality in training. Consequently, the Germans will now have much greater difficulty in holding their own against the Allies.

The minor skirmishes that are now being reported from the battlefield in France show an increased activity on the part of the Allies. On the coast east of Nieuport the British and Belgians are pushing forward under the support of the fire of the British gunboats.

In the region east of Verdun the French report renewed activity. From their position at Pagny on the Moselle they are bombarding Arnaville on the German border.

The expected check of the German advance in Poland has now occurred. This is due to the fact that an advancing army can never have its full strength at the front. The columns are necessarily spread out over long distances of thirty to forty-five miles. The check at the head, though, is only the beginning of the struggle.

To oppose this German invasion the Russians followed a plan that has placed part of the German Army in a serious position. The forces that immediately opposed the Germans fell back before them and encouraged them to make a rapid advance up to within forty miles of Warsaw. Meanwhile Grand Duke Nicholas massed his forces between Plotrkow and the Warthe River to strike at the German flank.

When the Germans were getting ready to crush the Russian forces along the forty-mile line from Lowicz, south to Koluszki on the railroad, the Russian armies from the Warthe were launched against the German flank at Szadek, fifteen miles east of Sieradz. The German line was driven back and their advanced forces, near Lodz, were taken in flank and rear. The battle that is now going on will determine whether the Germans can fight their way out of their predicament, or whether, being surrounded, they will have to surrender to superior forces.

The German position at Lodz is very similar to that of Gen. von Kluck's army at Nogent, on the Seine, on Sept. 6. By wonderful control and marching power the Germans were then able to extricate their forces in spite of being attacked on three sides. In Poland, though, the German troops are largely reserves, and naturally less efficient, while the Russian troops are principally drawn from their first line.

The German advance from Wielun, half way between Sieradz and Czenstochowa, shows the importance that they are giving to this campaign in Poland. By their invasion from Thorn they hoped to draw the Russians northward. The advance of the Austrians to the Pilica River was, on the other hand, intended to draw Russian troops in this direction. The advance from Wielun was then launched in the hope of finding the Russian centre sufficiently weakened to give way before the German onslaught.

The Russians have made an important gain in checking the German dash toward Warsaw. In every field they have foiled the German plans and at Lodz they threaten to inflict upon the Germans a serious reverse.

The Russian advance to Mezo Laborc and Homonna in Hungary, on the line between Przemysl and Kassau, shows the beginning of a new Cossack invasion of the Hungarian plains. Such a move has little direct influence on the outcome of the fighting along the German border. But if the war is to become a campaign of exhaustion, such raids may help to accomplish this end by throwing the burden of military operations upon a new province of the Dual Monarchy.

The Servian claim of a victory over the Austrians along the Kolubara River shows that the former are determined to make a stubborn resistance before they surrender their ancient capital. The announcement indicates only a small skirmish, but it also shows that the Austrians have made no important advance in the last five days. The Servians are adepts in the hill fighting that is taking place in this region. If the Austrians wish to make progress in this campaign, they must devote at least 400,000 men to it, with consequent reduction in their fighting strength in the north.

SANTA CLAUS SHIP GREETED WITH JOY

Plymouth and Devonport Gayly Decorated as Warships Escort the Jason Into Harbor.

BIG CROWDS WATCH ARRIVAL

Message from Kitchener, Expressing the Army's Gratitude, Read at Banquet to Ship's Officers.

PLYMOUTH, Nov. 25.—A dinner given tonight by the Earl of Beauchamp, First Commissioner of Works in the British Cabinet, in honor of the officers of the United States naval collier Jason, the Santa Claus ship, closed a day in which the British Foreign Office and the citizens of Greater Plymouth manifested in every possible manner the heartfelt appreciation of the King and the country for the 6,000,000 Christmas gifts sent by the people of the United States to the unfortunate children in the war zone through the efforts of a group of American newspaper men, including The New York World and The Chicago Herald.

Following the arrival of the Jason at Devonport today American flags floated over every public building in Plymouth and from the mainmasts of all warships and commercial craft in the harbor until sunset. Hundreds of women visited the Jason after the official reception of the vessel, among them Mrs. Waldorf Astor, who presented to Lieut. Commander C. E. Courtney, in charge of the ship, a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums on behalf of the women of England.

Admission to the navy yard at Devonport was by card only, but thousands of persons stood outside the gates, viewing the Christmas ship from a distance.

Fifty covers were laid for the dinner tonight, which was served in the Royal Hotel. The dining room was a mass of roses and chrysanthemums. The British Army and Navy were represented by the commandants of the Plymouth fortress and the navy yard. Mayor Baker of Plymouth and Major Waldorf Astor were among the guests. The Earl of Beauchamp replied to the toast, "The King," while Francis Dyke Acland, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, responded to "The President of the United States."

Lieut. Commander Courtney, replying to a toast to "The Christmas Ship," said:

"The American Navy is glad to discharge such a mission as this—a service which appeals to my heart. Thousands of little ones at home wish the Jason godspeed."

Kitchener Sends Message.

John Callan O'Laughlin, representing the American newspapers which assisted in collecting the Christmas gifts, speaking to the toast "The Children of America," reviewed the history of the movement which made possible the collier playing the rôle of Santa Claus to the children of the warring nations.

During the dinner the Earl of Beauchamp read the following telegram from Lord Kitchener, the British Secretary of War:

Please express on my behalf and that of the British Army our cordial appreciation and grateful thanks for the kind thought of the American people. The welcome freight the Jason carries will bring pleasure to the homes of many of those whose fathers are away.

Mr. Acland said that Sir Edward Grey, British Secretary of Foreign Affairs, had asked him to express how much Sir Edward had been touched by the greetings of good-will from the American children.

"We set much store by the peaceful and friendly relations with the United States," continued Mr. Acland. "An act of such kindly sympathy can only increase that good feeling and proves that the rising generation is animated with the same feeling."

Escorted by Destroyers.

A flotilla of British torpedoboat destroyers, flying the American ensign, met the Jason on her arrival and escorted her into the harbor. The docking was delayed for some time on account of a dense fog. The Earl of Beauchamp and Mr. Acland, together with representatives of the London Board of Trade, were on hand to meet the ship, which finally docked only a short distance from the point whence the Mayflower sailed for America three centuries ago.

Attended by the British warships, the Jason steamed slowly past Drake's Island and into the haven from which Sir Francis Drake directed the movements of the fleet which destroyed the Spanish Armada. A terrific din of whistles greeted her from all the craft in the harbor which flew the Stars and Stripes and the flags of the allied nations. The merchants and citizens of Plymouth and Devonport had decorated their houses and stores with flags, in the pier the Royal Marine Band played American and British national airs.

The unloading of toys and other gifts for English and Belgian children began almost immediately. These are to be distributed through English officials and the members of the American-Belgian Food Commission.

The Jason had a rough trip, but she came through without accident. She will leave here Friday for Marseilles, where the gifts for French children are to be unloaded.

It was learned today that the Bogota Government made clear to Great Britain and France her resentment at the course of those countries in ignoring the sovereignty of the Republic of Colombia and discussing the matter with the United States. Knowing the sensitiveness of Colombia in this connection, it is understood the State Department assured the Colombian Government it had no desire to intervene and had been misrepresented in press reports as intending to do so. These assurances, according to Colombian officials here, were received with much satisfaction in Bogota.

At the Colombian Legation here it was stated that the wireless regulations of the United States had been adopted by Colombia and were being scrupulously enforced.

DEATH OF LIEUT. ST. GEORGE

Officer Killed at Ypres Was Grandson of George F. Baker.

News has been received here of the death of Avenel Bligh St. George of Leamington, England, a Lieutenant in the First Life Guards, Cavalry Brigade, who was killed on Nov. 15 when leading his men in a charge at Ypres. Lieut. St. George's mother was Miss Evelyn Baker, elder daughter of George F. Baker, the New York banker. His father was Howard St. George, of a well-known Irish family. A brother, George S. George, is with J. P. Morgan & Co.

Relatives here had received many letters from Lieut. St. George since he went to the front, two of them having arrived after his death. In one of them he told of a night in the trenches in Belgium, when his troop was ordered in just after nightfall to relieve another. Before dawn 45 of the 125 men had been killed, and Lieut. St. George was senior officer.

According to a message sent by one of his comrades in the Life Guards, Lieut. St. George was buried on the battlefield while the Germans were shelling the British position.

Upholds Bulgarian Neutrality.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The entire Bulgarian Chamber of Deputies, says a dispatch from Sofia to Reuter's Telegram Company, today listened with attention and warmly applauded M. Radoslavoff, the Bulgarian Premier, who addressed the Sobranje, upholding the policy of Bulgarian neutrality. There is reason to believe, the message adds, that the Premier's address will satisfy the opposition parties.

SUBMARINE ATTACK AS THE CREW SEE IT

German of the U-26 Tells the Story of a Raid on a British Warship.

SUSPENSE HARD TO BEAR

Orders Given After Submersion by Illuminated Signs — Nothing of What Happens Seen or Heard.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 25.—A letter telling of an attack by the German submarine U-26 upon an unmentioned British warship is published by The Zeit. It begins by describing preparations for the expedition "two hours before midnight" in order to make the strike at dawn. The letter, which is said to have been written by a member of the crew of the attacking boat, follows:

"Around the heavy granite rocks of the long pier, monstrously black in the dark night, the storm sweeps up the water of the North Sea in angry waves. Inside the pier the water lifts up our submarine in the regular motion of heavy waves. Everything is pitch dark. The fact that many people are hurrying about on deck is only shown by the sombre figures who now and then pass in front of the single lantern. From out of the engine room, already under water, there arises the sound of heavy pounding and the weird crackling of the engines, which are being tried out.

"At 10:30 there is a shrill whistle from the little bridge, which stands high above the submarine, and which is covered with heavy canvas. The officer in command, dressed in his oilskins, gives the sign of departure. The cables are loosened. A short, sharp signal to the engine room, the sudden whirr as the motor catches, and the U-26 is under way. The sharp bow plows through the water. On both sides of the ship long waves are formed, shimmering with light from in the blackness of the sea. We move in a westerly direction. We are going toward the enemy.

"The heavens are covered with clouds. Not a star is visible. A few feet away from the boat nothing is noticeable at all. The commander with his experienced eye tries in vain to penetrate through this wall of solid blackness. The wind is from aside, and the bridge is entirely flooded with water. No noise is heard but the heavy, droning sound of the motor and the swish of the water passing along our sides.

"The earliest signs of dawn appear, when suddenly, in the near distance, there is the sight of a heavy bulk swinging high above us upon the water. We pass through the long tail of foam which a hostile torpedo destroyer has just left behind, speeding toward the east. We have managed to find our way through the first line of the enemy's advance guard. From now on we must be very careful.

Boat Prepared for Action.

"A signal is heard and men appear upon deck. The boat is prepared for action. The flagpole is taken down. Part of the bridge is folded together and well fastened. The periscope is brought up to the proper height. Then the entrance through the combined bridge and conning-tower is hermetically closed. The tanks are opened and the inrushing water tells us that the boat is about to submerge. The gasoline motors stop their endless song. Electricity will drive us from now on until we shall reappear upon the water.

"A young lieutenant is posted at the periscope and looks for the enemy. The sailors take their position near the torpedoes. The interior of the boat is lighted with two small electric bulbs. They make the darkness visible, but give no light. Everywhere there is a stale smell of oil. It is impossible to speak to each other with the noise of the engine and of the water. The heat in the small room is oppressive.

"From time to time, the officer in command of the three torpedoes looks at his watch or at his compass, both of which he carries on his wrist. Intently the men all watch the signboard on the wall in front of them. The storm which is raging upon the surface makes itself felt in the depth. Every motion of the water causes the boat to rock up and down—up and down and up and down.

"We think of the advantage of the man on board a warship. If his time comes, he can go down with a last look at the happy sun and the blue sky. We see nothing, hear nothing. If the boat is to go down we shall all suffocate in the darkness under water.

The Torpedo Launched.

"Suddenly we all jump up and forget heat and bad air and discomfort. In small illuminated letters, the signboard says: 'Attention.' The officer in command holds the lever which will release the first torpedo. The sailors make ready to launch the second as soon as the first shall have gone. A few seconds pass. We must be very near the enemy. Suddenly the first sign disappears. Half a second later, and the red-glowing letters say 'Fire!' With a single jerk, the lever releases the torpedo. A short metallic click, the noise of the water rushing into the empty tube, and all is over. The second torpedo is at once pushed into the tube. A few seconds later, and the interior of the submarine looks as before the attack began.

"But what of the first torpedo? Did she reach her goal? Instinctively we all have kept count—one hundred metres, two hundred metres, three hundred, four hundred. Under water no sound penetrates. We only hear the noise of our engines. We wait. Nothing happens. Then, suddenly, we are all thrown together by the jerky movement of the boat. Twice or three times more we feel that we have changed our course very abruptly.

"Then the boat rolls as before. The regular purring of the engines is heard. Our submarine is rapidly moving eastward.

"We are on our way home. The attack has been successful."

SCHWAB'S WAR ORDERS RATED AT $50,000,000

Bethlehem Works Under Strict Guard as 15,000 Men Turn Out Guns and Shells.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 25.—Following the receipt of orders for war materials, amounting to $50,000,000, the Bethlehem Steel Company today organized a strict guard about all the sections of its plant to guard against any possibility of spies or others entering the mills or tampering with the machinery. Orders were issued to allow no one to enter the plant without a pass, this rule applying to all inspectors as well as operating officials. New passes bearing the signature of Charles M. Schwab, the President, were issued, and all employes now are obliged to present their passes when entering the works.

All departments of the Bethlehem plant now are working full blast, the full quota of 15,000 men being on the rolls, filling the war contracts brought back from Europe by Mr. Schwab.

It was learned today on good authority that part of the English contract obtained by Mr. Schwab calls for 200 shrapnel guns, 600 caissons, and 800 limbers. This is in addition to the large submarine contract which will be partly filled at the Bethlehem plant and at the Fore River Shipbuilding Company's plant. The company also has received orders for thousands of shrapnel shells for the English army.

Before Mr. Schwab set sail for home, where he arrived, he cabled to his managers here the result of his visit to Lord Kitchener. Immediately various departments at the local plant took on unusual evidences of activity. Molds were carefully, but heavily made and great steel furnace fires were lighted, awaiting the final word to go ahead. This order came the minute Mr. Schwab reached home.

PORTUGAL EAGER FOR WAR.

Press Welcomes Passage of Bill Empowering Executive to Act.

LISBON, (via Paris,) Nov. 25.—The decision of the Government, as expressed in the bill passed by Parliament, empowering the Executive to intervene with military forces in the conflict in Europe when such action is deemed necessary, has been received with enthusiasm by the press throughout the country.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The Portuguese Minister, Viscount de Alte, said today he had been notified by his Government that the Portuguese Congress had decided to act in accordance with its interests and its duty in co-operation with the Allies in case of a request on their part.

The Minister, who had remained silent on all subjects concerning his Government and the war for some time, today stated that this act of the Portuguese Parliament did not signify any positive change in his country's policy, and did not necessarily presage immediate action.

Portugal is bound by treaty to support England, and the Portuguese Parliament reaffirmed the treaty after the war began.

LLOYD GEORGE OVERWORKED

Feared That Chancellor of British Exchequer Will Break Down.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Friends of David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, are anxious about his health, says The British Weekly. The Chancellor is being overworked. In addition to his heavy labors in matters of finance he is on the Armament and Pensions Committees.

Mr. Lloyd George is working from early morning until late at night, and it is imperative that he be relieved of some of his responsibilities, his friends assert, if his health and strength are to be conserved.

BRITISH HEROES REWARDED

Five Privates and Three Officers Get Victoria Crosses for Bravery.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Eight Victoria Crosses have been awarded for conspicuous service in battles in France. Five of these were given to privates and three to officers. Three men won their decorations at the battle of Le Ceteau, one at Mons, and the others in later battles.

Altogetner eighteen Victoria Crosses, the most coveted of all British decorations for valor, have been awarded since the commencement of the war.

RUSH FOR NEW PASSPORTS.

Thought That They Will Make Misuse for Spying Impossible.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The new regulations brought scores of Americans to the Embassy today to obtain passports in the new form. The staff was almost unable to meet the rush, which probably will continue for some days.

The latest form of passport, with the photograph of the person obtaining it, with a sworn statement of his reason for travel and destination, together with the old personal description, is expected to make a misuse of a passport for spying purposes impossible. It is far more of a safeguard than any other passports issued in Europe.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BELFAST, Nov. 25.—The American Consul at Belfast today advised all American citizens resident in Ulster to have their regular or emergency passports vised by him, with photographs of themselves, before Dec. 7. The reason privately assigned is the appropriation by Lody, the spy, of a Chicago man's passport.

RESENTS SCHIFF TALK OF PEACE

The London Times Also Objects to Zangwill's Commendation of It.

SUSPECTS A GERMAN ORIGIN

Says Financier Speaks "with the Voice of Berlin," but Is Not Likely to Sway Americans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 26.—The Times says editorially: "The latest German stratagem to capture American opinion has been tersely described by our Washington correspondent as 'peace talk.' We are satisfied to leave it, as we left other devices with the same object, to the judgment of that opinion. The broad facts are before the Americans, and they are competent to form an impartial view of them. Typical Americans like Choate, Roosevelt, Dr. Eliot of Harvard, and Prof. Ladd of Yale have already discussed them and announced their verdict. We accept their arguments, and so, we are confident, will the American people. We expect to hear a great deal more of the peace talk of which Jacob Schiff, a German-American millionaire from Frankfort, is the latest exponent. The accredited apostles of German Kultur—the financiers with large German interests, journalists of a certain school, and the paficist enthusasts—who think that they can persuade the disciples of Bernhardi to beat their swords into plow shares will not readily let it die.

"It will not perturb us. We know the ends for which we are fighting. We mean to attain them, and we believe that to abandon them would be to incur the merited reprehension and contempt of the world. The Prime Minister set them out with clearness at the Guildhall; they have been reiterated in a letter bearing his signature and the signatures of Mr. Balfour, Lord Rosebery and others, which we published the other day.

"'We shall never sheathe the sword,' said Mr. Asquith, 'until Belgium has recovered all, and more than all, that she has sacrificed; until the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed.'

"'Come what may,' these representative statesmen of both parties further say, 'there must be no weakening, no wavering, no patched-up truce that would expose our children to a revival of the German menace.'

"Those are the terms, and the only terms, on which Mr. Schiff and his friends can suggest peace to us with the slightest prospect of success. There is no room for discussion or for 'rational adjustment' concerning them; they are our minimum. When Germany is ready to accept it, and not before, there may be opportunities for friendly neutrals to tender their good offices.

"Mr. Schiff is speaking, as it seems to us, with the voice of Berlin, though Mr. Zangwill would have us believe that it is the voice of Jerusalem. He boldly claims that for the United States a complete British triumph would be especially disastrous. We decline to regard Mr. Zangwill as the spokesman of British Jewry; and, as for the disaster which the triumph of the British cause would involve for the United States we are content to echo the words of Choate that the contest is 'between the German Empire of the future, that is only to be won by war, and the British Empire, whose chief interest now and in all the future is peace throughout the world'."

The TIMES, quoting also from the arguments of Lodge, Roosevelt, Eliot, and Ladd, adds:

"With these opinions before them, Americans ought not to have much difficulty in seeing through the peace talk. It was originated, as Senator Lodge tells them, by German agents to affect public opinion. It may affect that opinion, but not, we fancy, in the direction desired."

KAISER BLAMES DIPLOMATS.

Said to Have Told Those Accredited to Allies to Seek Another Career.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The German Emperor, according to a dispatch from The Hague to the Exchange Telegraph Company, has ordered Gottlieb von Jagow, the German Minister of Foreign Affairs, to notify all the German diplomatic agents who have hitherto been employed in the countries now at war with Germany that they can consider themselves free to choose another career.

Newspaper critics, the message adds, state that this sequel seems to indicate that German diplomacy is held responsible for the war.

RED CROSS URGES COLLEGE MEN TO AID

WORK FOR COLLEGE WOMEN

Belgian Fund Gains $7,567 and Red Cross $1,496—Mercy Fund Now $43,000.

The Red Cross issued an appeal yesterday to college students. Already college men are giving part of the receipts of football games and have turned in large sums.

In the appeal the students are told that funds are needed for surgeons and nurses, and that the armies are made up mainly of young men of about college student age.

Yale has sent two motor ambulances, costing $650 each, and Princeton is to support a trained nurse as long as the war lasts. Students in women's colleges, it is suggested, can make hospital and other garments.

The Red Cross also gave out yesterday a copy of a letter from Dr. Henry van Dyke, the American Minister to the Netherlands, acknowledging $10,000 for relief of Belgians. Dr. van Dyke says:

Like fugitives from a forest fire, the poor refugees, terror-stricken and helpless, pour across the border into the still peaceful regions of Holland. The women and children and old men form the principal part of the exodus. It is a great task to provide them with shelter, clothing, and food. Therefore the gift of the American Red Cross is most welcome, and I am sure that the people of Holland will appreciate this proof of friendship of the United States very warmly.

Yesterday's Red Cross Gifts.

Contributions to the Red Cross Fund yesterday amounted to $1,496.09, which brought the total to $368,121.41. Subscriptions should be sent to Jacob H. Schiff, Treasurer, 130 East Twenty-second Street, or 52 William Street. In this and all subsequent lists cents are omitted. Yesterday's contributors were:

The American Belgian Commission received cables yesterday from H. C. Hoover, Chairman of the London Commission, on the appalling need of food for the Belgians. Mr. Hoover urges that food be sent as promptly as possible before the possible closing of the North Sea. Conditions are daily changing in the North Sea and it is being more and more closely mined.

John V. Storck, representing a factory at Val St. Lambert, Belgium, called on the commission yesterday and said he feared the 5,000 employes were starving. He sought information as to how best to get food there immediately. He said the firm owed its employes $30,000 and was ready to send money, but thought the money would be of more service if converted into food and shipped to Val St. Lambert. Because of the large cargo shipments the commission is making Mr. Storck was informed that it could not undertake to forward food in separate lots to any place.

Mercy Fund Up to $43,000.

The Committee of Mercy Fund reached $43,000 yesterday. The fund was also enriched by the consignment of a carload of flour, for the use of the starving Belgians, from the Flint, Mich., Chamber of Commerce.

The committee also transmitted $1,250 to the American Women's Relief Committee in London, to help feed the Belgian refugees there; $1,000 was ordered sent to France to buy shoes for homeless women and children.

August Belmont, Treasurer, acknowledged the following contributions:

The Dollar Christmas Fund now totals $16,137. Monday's total was $2,365, Tuesday's $780, and yesterday's $725. Readers of the New Mexican of Santa Fé sent $694; The Duluth Herald further installments of $250, and from readers of The New Era, Lancaster, Penn., $218. Other donations were: Mrs. Robert S. Evans, Boston, $200, and $100 each from the following: Miss May White, New York; Miss Elvine Richard, New York; George C. Smith, New York; K. Kemble, Albany, and Mrs. R. A. Cowing, Wyoming, Ohio. Officers, employes, and enlisted men of Fort Hancock contributed $84, and the Benedictine Monastery, Conception Abbey, Mo., $10. By far the greater number of subscriptions ranged from $1 to $25. In answer to appeals sent out by the Dollar Christmas Fund many persons in New York and elsewhere have offered to "pass the plate" before dinner on Thanksgiving Day in behalf of the homeless Belgians. All donations should be sent to Henry Clews, Treasurer, Broad Street, New York.

Ambulance Hospital Gets $2,027.

Contributions to the fund for the American Ambulance Hospital in Paris, subscriptions to which should be sent to J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall Street, amounted yesterday to $2,027, which brought the total to $183,243.98. These persons contributed:

ISLE OF MAN SHOOTING HAS ANGERED GERMANY

England Fears Reprisals Upon British Prisoners—Chandler Hale Investigates Killings.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The recent shooting of prisoners at the detention camp for aliens on the Isle of Man is causing a disagreeable impression in Germany, according to advices received here from that country—this notwithstanding the shooting was provoked by a riot among the prisoners, resulting from an abortive attempt at escape.

The fact that such a feeling exists in Germany has caused uneasiness in this country and fears are expressed that the Germans may resort to reprisals, according more severe treatment to the British prisoners there than has been the case in the past.

Chandler Hale, the attaché of the American Embassy, in charge of Austrian affairs, today visited the Isle of Man concentration camp to investigate the shooting. His report will be cabled to the German Government by the Embassy and it is hoped that its tenor will assist in allaying the German feeling. All reports from Germany indicate a growing hate for the English, which it is feared will take the form of ill-treatment of English prisoners. The killing at the Isle of Man is calculated to still further arouse German passion.

Mr. Hale is making a round of all the concentration camps, yesterday visiting Newbury, where there are 3,000 prisoners, with Chandler Anderson, counselor of the Embassy. The Embassy today forwarded to Berlin a favorable report on the treatment accorded to the prisoners.

Advices from Vienna indicate that reports of ill-treatment of Austrian prisoners here are being published there. These reports are even more sensational than those current in Germany. The American Government is making every effort to prevent friction over the prisoners of war held by the various belligerents.

SEES LESSON FOR GERMANY

War Will Teach Her to Look After Her Own Affairs, Says Jordan.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 25.—Declaring that the European war, "the worst, the wickedest, the most ruinous thing that ever happened in the world's history," was caused by "military efficiency," David Starr Jordan, President of the National Education Association and former head of the Leland Stanford University, addressing several thousand State teachers assembled in convention here today, maintained that the earnest men of Europe looked to the United States to "reach out the hand of extrication" in the end.

"The greatest good, if any, that can come out of the war will be that Germany will take care of her own affairs," he said. "America's duty is to be absolutely neutral, but not indifferent. Nobody has dared to admit having had anything to do with bringing on this terrible war. There is the victory for the peace advocates. In previous wars, even if he did not have anything to do with it, some one has claimed the responsibility for it, as doing something noble.

"I have heard it said that the war was commenced because of British envy of Germany's trade conquests. Whoever heard of an Englishman who was envious of any one? Whatever the faults of England may be, envy is not numbered among them.

"The war was not brought on by anybody. The thing that will save Europe is democracy. Militarism is anarchy. International law is the way out, because it is worth while to be just and gentle. When nations are armed war is bound to come."

SWISS WON'T URGE PEACE.

German Socialists' Petition for Intervention Deemed Premature.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Nov. 25, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—Bearing out what The Berlin Vorwarts reported a fortnight ago, when it announced that authorized delegates from the German Social Democratic Federation had approached the Swiss Government with a view to inducing it take the initiative for action by the neutral nations in favor of peace, it is said here that it is quite true that the Federal authorities were petitioned on the subject, but that, contrary to what The Vorwarts supposed, they did not entertain the proposal. In common with the rest of the neutral countries, Switzerland considers any steps toward peace would be more than premature at this juncture. Although the suggested intervention received warm support from the Swiss Socialist leaders, no action was taken, nor is any action contemplated.

Meanwhile the Socialist split in Germany, owing to the divergent views prevailing in regard to the war, threatens to wreck the party altogether. The quarrel turns upon whether Socialists shall be Germans first and Socialists afterward, or the opposite.

In Italy the Socialists are squabbling over whether Italy should come into the war or remain neutral, while Belgian and Dutch Socialists are scowling at each other because the former accuse the latter of attempting to oust them from their position in the International Federation. In view of these facts and the further circumstance that the outbreak of hostilities put a snuffer on French Socialism in so far, at any rate, as internationalism is concerned, many here are inclined to believe that the war easily may prove the death blow of Socialism.

Charge Purchases made after Nov. 25th will be billed January 1st.

ROOSEVELT GAINS POINT IN LIBEL SUIT

Appellate Division Grants Him Change of Venue, Reversing Decision of Supreme Court.

TO TRY CASE IN ONONDAGA

Colonel Held That Albany County Would Not Give Him Fair Trial in Action Against Barnes.

ALBANY, Nov. 25.—The Appellate Division, Third Department, today reversed the ruling of Supreme Court Justice Chester, which refused a change of venue for the trial of the $50,000 libel suit brought by William Barnes against Col. Theodore Roosevelt. Justice Howard dissented from the prevailing opinion.

The court ordered the trial to be held in Onondaga instead of Albany.

The Roosevelt attorneys claimed that Mr. Barnes, former Chairman of the Republican State Committee, dominated the politics of Albany County, and that consequently a fair trial could not be had here. The Appellate Court held that "neither party should be compelled to try the action in the county in which the other party resides."

"Jurors are but individuals," the prevailing opinion read, "and are subject to impressions and influences of which often they themselves are unconscious. The fairness of the trial should be above suspicion, and the place of trial should be one as to which neither party shall have reasonable ground for apprehension as to the strict impartiality of each juror."

In his dissenting opinion Justice Howard held that a fair trial could be held in this county. His opinion was a lengthy one.

"Both these litigants," he said, "have grown into proportions far beyond the limits of counties, their fame is wider even than the State—it is national. That a political leader of the stature of William Barnes is a man of tremendous power, wielding incalculable influence, may be admitted. But, unless we assume that the officials of Albany County are willing to lend themselves to the criminal debauchery of the jury system (a proposition which I do not assume, but reject,) how can this power and influence of the plaintiff enter the jury box any more in Albany County than in any other county?

"Unless something more than surmise, suspicion, and innuendo is presented, the citizen who has become powerful and conspicuous should not be driven from his home to litigate when he brings a suit to redress a wrong."

It could not be learned whether Mr. Barnes contemplated carrying the case to the Court of Appeals.

Statements attributed to Col. Roosevelt to the effect that Mr. Barnes's activities in politics resulted from an "alliance between crooked politics and crooked business," and that there was a "bipartisan combination between Barnes and Murphy" were the basis for the libel suit.

W. C. ATCHISON FINED.

Denver Judge Assesses Him for Contempt in Divorce Trial.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Nov. 25.—Censured in open court and told that he never would be able to get a divorce in Denver, William C. Atchison, of New York, was sentenced to pay $25 or go to the county jail for contempt. He decided to pay the fine.

Atchison came here in January and three months ago sued for divorce, alleging that his wife, now living in New York, had deserted him. The court appointed an attorney to communicate with Mrs. Atchison. A letter from her stated that Atchison had written her, telling her what to reply. This angered the court and caused Judge Rothgerber to admonish the plaintiff.

CITY BREVITIES.

Mrs. Oscar A. Gally filed suit yesterday for a separation. She said her husband's clothes were found in a Coney Island bath house in September, and that she went into mourning until she found him on the street three weeks later.

P. J. Gilogly, a carpenter, broke both legs and ankles and injured his spine yesterday when the chimney of his shop at 108 West Thirtieth Street crumbled and he was knocked from the roof.

George W. Whiteside of Whiteside & Stryker, has been appointed counsel for the New York Medical Society to succeed Almuth C. Vandiver of O'Gorman, Battle & Vandiver.

Mario Altieri and Joseph Mayo were indicted yesterday on a charge of arson following an investigation of fire Nov. 17 in the Palace Hotel, Coney Island.

Salvatore Lugi, 30 years old, of Canarsie, was killed yesterday when a shovel crane at Morgan and Maspeth Avenues, Williamsburg, collapsed and fell on him. Seven others were injured.

ZAPATA CHECKS MEXICO CITY RIOT

had been constantly growing, broke up into smaller bodies, and the looting of pawnshops and other establishments in various sections of the city was begun.

The trouble began at 6 o'clock in the evening and at a late hour still continued. All street car traffic was stopped except the Red Cross service, which was taking care of dead and wounded brought in from the fighting around Tacubaya.

At 8 o'clock bodies of civilians and former Federal soldiers were formed. They paraded the principal streets and marched to Police Headquarters and the Brazilian Legation, where they were armed.

It was hoped that this force eventually would be able to control the situation.

VILLA BEATEN NEAR TAMPICO.

Carranza General Drives Back Advance on Oil Port.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Nov. 25.—While the long-feared occupation of Mexico City by the Zapatistas was taking place, Villa's troops were suffering another defeat in the Tampico zone of operations, where Gen. Augustin Servin, with all the available artillery, had moved from San Luis Potosi. He was met at Cardenas by a large force of men under Gen. Caballero, who drove back the advance guard and part of the main column, with heavy losses.

A new development in the eastern theatre of war has been announced in the movements of the gunboat Zaragoza, which was fitted out in Puerto Mexico by Gens. Eduardo Hay and Antonio Villareal and sent to Tampico with men and munitions. The boat will operate in the Panuco River and will command the rebel advances from the east and north.

At Guadalajara, Angeles continues to defend the positions which he was forced to occupy away from the old town.

The evacuation of Mexico City by Carranza is now said to have been a daring ruse to draw Villa into a trap. By allowing Zapata to enter when he left Carranza has forced the two commanders to oppose each other. Zapata had promised his men three days of looting in the capital, Carranza's agents here declare.

The Villa factionalists here say that Col. Vasquez, the former Federal commander of Lower California, had turned over that territory to the convention side.

Cientifico sympathizers awaited the appearance in Mexico City of Gen. Ynez Salazar, the former Federal General, who escaped recently from custody in Albuquerque, N. M. It was said that a strong following of reactionary elements would rally to him wherever he announced himself.

VILLAREAL WILL FIGHT.

Obregon and Hay Also in the Field for Carranza, He Says.

The Mexican Bureau of Information in this city last night gave out a telegram which, it was announced, had been received during the day from Antonio Villareal, in Monterey. The message said:

Please deny that Gen. Obregon, Hay, and myself are under arrest. The rumors published in the papers are false and without foundation. Gen. Obregon is going north while Hay and I are operating in the State of Tamaulipas. Gen. Obregon has his entire army with him. We are loyal to the Constitutionalist leader and his cause and we will continue to fight for the principals of the revolution. I believe that Villa is in league with the enemies of the Mexican people and that his desertion of the First Chief Carranza is rank treachery. Our troops have defeated the enemy at Palmilla and at other places.

Gen. Villareal was Chairman of the convention that chose Gutierrez for Provisional President. It was reported, through Villa sources, that Gen. Blanco had arrested the Carranza Generals mentioned in the telegram.

PREPARE FOR CARRANZA.

Agents at Vera Cruz Confident of Crushing Villa Movement.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 25.—The Government offices are filled with work and are progressing slowly on account of the difficulties of finding documents.

Gen. Auerbach, formerly of the American Hospital Corps, who served in the Spanish-American war, has assumed control of the sanitary forces of the city and expects to keep the city in better condition than before the occupation.

While the Constitutionalists control the Northern States and all Gulf ports, they are confident the Villa movement will be crushed in a short time.

Business houses are open and there is no disorder.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 25.—Gen. Venustiano Carranza will direct from Vera Cruz his campaign for the recovery of the national capital. It is expected that Gen. Carranza will arrive here before the end of the week, probably on Friday. A triumphal arch has been erected in the centre of the city, and Gen. Candido Aguilar's men are preparing to make his entry one long to be remembered.

The headquarters of Gen. Carranza will be the Lighthouse Building, which was occupied by the Twenty-eighth United States Infantry when the Americans were here.

Virtually all the places that were occupied by the Americans have been taken over by their successors, including the positions along the outpost lines. Gen. Aguilar's headquarters is the Government stamp office.

Order continues to prevail in the city, despite the fact that the saloons are open. The soldiers have not been paid off lately, and the drinking places have been patronized only moderately.

There has as yet been no forced loan. The Spanish merchants are reported as saying they will be willing to contribute to such a loan if the present good order continues.

W. W. Canada, the American Consul, today made a formal call on Gen. Fabela, Foreign Minister in the Cabinet of Gen. Carranza.

CAPT. HILL'S DENIAL.

Repudiation of Alleged Interview Received by Secretary Daniels.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—A fuller explanation of the circumstances leading up to the publication of a reputed interview regarding the Mexican situation was received from Capt. Walter N. Hill of the United States Navy today by Secretary Daniels. Capt. Hill's statement of the case is in reply to a telegram sent to him by Gen. Barnett, Commanding General of the Marine Corps, by direction of Secretary Daniels on Nov. 23, asking whether Capt. Hill was correctly quoted in the interview.

According to the explanation made by Capt. Hill, he granted no interview, but the alleged interview was based on statements he made during a conversation on general topics with members of his family at his home in Boston last Sunday afternoon. A neighbor was visiting the house at the time, and Capt. Hill explains that he learned later that this neighbor was the dramatic critic of a Boston newspaper.

"In speaking of Mexico," says Capt. Hill, "I spoke simply from the knowledge I had of the country as derived from newspapers and magazines, and spoke in general about what I had seen in Vera Cruz. I never at any time stated that Vera Cruz would be 'looted and burned' when American troops left. Such statements would have been ridiculous, for it was not my belief. I do not recall all the conversation I had, but I do remember that certain phases of the Mexican situation were discussed, properly and as I had a perfect right to do in my own home, in the presence of my family, and I had no idea that the conversation would be repeated outside of my home, much less misquoted."

Capt. Hill then gives a summary of the conversation, and says his remarks concerned matters that already had been published in newspapers and were well known. He concludes:

"None of these statements charged to me can possibly be quotations, as I have never made statements as such, and the exact facts of how these alleged quotations have been put into print I have already explained."

GARRISON PRAISES FUNSTON.

Secretary Sends Letter of Appreciation of Services at Vera Cruz.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Secretary of War Garrison has written a letter of appreciation to Major Gen. Funston, who commanded the American Army of occupation at Vera Cruz, warmly thanking both officers and men for their excellent discipline and restraint under trying circumstances. The letter, which is expected to reach Gen. Funston at Galveston in time to serve as a Thanksgiving Day greeting, reads:

Washington, Nov. 25, 1914.

My Dear General: Now that you and your command have returned safely to this country, I desire to express to you the great appreciation that I have of the excellent service rendered by you and the men under you while at Vera Cruz.

In many ways the situation there was as difficult, if not more so, as actual warfare. The proper performance of the duty called for self-restraint, judgment, coolness, and discipline in the very highest degree. The fact that during all the months that you occupied Vera Cruz there was not one untoward incident is of great significance. Any laxness of discipline or careless handling of the situation might have precipitated consequences of a most disastrous character. The skill and ability of the officers and the discipline and exemplary conduct of the troops, not only prevented any untoward incident, but reflected the greatest credit upon themselves and the country which they represented.

I desire to convey to you and the officers and men of your command my warmest thanks and sincerest appreciation. Sincerely yours,

LINDLEY M. GARRISON,
Secretary of War.

PLANS TO TRAP VILLA.

Carranza Generals to Operate Around the Capital.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Nov. 25.—Plans of the Carranza forces to trap Villa and Zapata in Mexico City were made known here today in a dispatch said to have been received from Vera Cruz from Isidro Fabela, Carranza's Secretary of Foreign Relations, to the Sonora War Tax Commission.

Carranza forces are distributed in strategic positions around the city, it was said. Gen. Jesus Carranza will hold a position east of Mexico City, Gens. Villareal and Caballero will be on the north, and Gens. Iturbide and Diegues will mobilize their troops west of the capital.

The message from Fabela reiterated the statement that Gens. Obregon and Gonzales evacuated the capital under Carranza's orders.

Seven thousand more troops are on their way to Sonora to join the Carranza forces, according to information by courier today from Agua Prieta. The troops are under Gens. Maclovio Herrerra, Luis Herrerra, Domingo Arrieta, and Mariano Arrieta, who recently renounced Gen. Villa and the Aguascalientes Convention.

FEAR FOR VILLA'S PRISONER.

State Department Moves to Save American from Death.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—American Consul Hostetter, at Hermosillo, has been asked by the State Department to report in detail on the circumstances of the arrest of T. W. Carraway, of Memphis, who, according to private advices, is threatened with execution.

It appears that Mr. Carraway, with J. C. Wilson and J. R. McInery, was arrested about a month ago, on a charge of complicity in the blowing up of railroad bridges. At that time, in response to the suggestions from Washington, Gen. Villa directed his subordinates to release the American if found innocent of the charges against him, but nothing seems to have been done in the prisoner's behalf.

NOGALES, Ariz., Nov. 25.—If investigation shows that the arrest of T. W. Carraway, J. C. Wilson, and J. R. McInery for alleged complicity in dynamiting bridges in Sonora took place on the American side the men will be released, according to Mexican authorities in Nogales, Sonora. The men were brought here from Hermosillo on Monday night and were taken today to the scene of the alleged crime.

PASTOR FINDS COUPLE DEAD

On Errand of Mercy, He Discovers Their Deaths from Gas.

The Rev. Norman H. Thomas of the East Harlem Presbyterian Church, went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Armitage at 2386 First Avenue, last evening with a Thanksgiving basket of food. When he could not get in he called Policeman Farrell of the East 126th Street Station.

The policeman broke in the door and found Armitage and his wife dead of gas poisoning. A jet in the parlor next to the bedroom was turned on, but gas was no longer escaping, as the quarter meter had closed automatically. The windows were plugged up with paper and the police thought at first the couple who were each sixty-five years old, had committed suicide. They decided later the paper had been used to keep the cold out and death had been accidental for Armitage's body was found close to the door, as though he had tried to get it open.

PLOT OF 100 CLUES IN BAFF'S MURDER

Police Find on Every Hand Foes of Man Who Fought Poultry Trust.

THIEVES' GANG SUSPECTED

Many Threats Against Victim to be Traced—Market Men Silent on the Mystery.

Everywhere the police turned yesterday in their investigation of the mysterious murder of Barnet Baff, the poultry dealer, in the West Washington Market on Tuesday evening, they found enemies of Baff, every one of whom had a rankling grievance against him.

The prime cause of the enmity was the attitude of independence that Baff constantly flaunted toward all with whom he came in contact in the management of his business. He fought them all—big dealers, little dealers, wholesalers, retailers, and organized laborers.

What particular group of men conspired for the death of Baff, the police were unable to determine, but many facts pointed to a gang of poultry thieves operating in the freight yards of the Erie and Lackawanna Railroads in New Jersey. These men, it was said, were among those who were employed by the poultry dealers in New York to unload shipments of poultry and deliver them to the markets in the city. Some were organized into unions, while others were independent laborers, and often, it was said, men not employed as laborers got into the yards simply to steal.

Gangsters in Poultry War.

Much poultry is stolen in these yards and many crates are broken open, and it has been remarked about the Washington Market that the "independent dealers," fighting the so-called "poultry trust," have been the chief sufferers from the depredations. Reports that some "trust magnates" have employed gangsters to damage the property and steal the poultry of the independent dealers have been circulated frequently at the market.

Baff was probably the largest independent dealer in the East, and he was one of the chief sufferers from the pilfering in the freight yards. With his usual determination, he fought these men and made several trips to New Jersey to obtain the arrest and conviction of some of them. Months before his death it was known that he and others who had opposed the poultry thieves had been threatened by them. Only a short time ago A. T. Pearson, another Washington Market poultry dealer, who fought the thieves, was attacked within a few feet of where Baff was shot down on Tuesday.

Baff apparently classed all of the poultry laborers together, and made enemies among the union laborers as well as among the gangsters. He kept an "open shop," and on one occasion he so far dared the unions as to import a band of non-union laborers, with the result that threats of violence to himself and fights between his employes and the union men became frequent. The interlopers were driven out, but Baff continued his opposition, and discharged several of his own employes whom he suspected of joining the ranks against him. A great part of the animus of the poultry union's strike of a year or so ago was directed against Baff. While the strike was at its height Harry Baff, the son of the man slain and business partner, was assaulted in front of the Baff market.

Poisoned His Horses.

The bitterness between Baff and the laborers, whether they were union men fighting their own battles or gangsters, increased until the day of Baff's death. Besides stealing his poultry, the yard operators poisoned his fowl and his horses, and broke open his crates.

The police learned yesterday that the last threat against Baff's life had been delivered only shortly before his murder. This knowledge, supported by other facts, convinced Coroner Feinberg that laborers were the slayers.

"I have just received information," the Coroner said, "that Baff was very recently threatened by a member of a poultry men's union. This, I believe, is the most important threat received by the murdered man. It was made shortly after Baff had appeared in Jersey City against several men arrested for stealing poultry consigned to him."

The police admitted, in accepting this theory, that if they traced the murder to the poultry thieves, they next would have to establish the connection, if any, between the thieves and the "Poultry Trust." In searching for a "man higher up" the police will find, according to some, that the thieves have been backed and encouraged by a clique anxious to control the poultry industry in this city.

Baff's differences with the "Poultry Trust" began in 1911, when he furnished information to the District Attorney's office that led to the conviction of thirteen men for fostering a monopoly. He was not a witness against the men, but he had been a member of the "trust" organization and was able, by his inside knowledge, to give information regarding the methods of the poultry men and the lines along which they should be attached. He was referred to yesterday by a man in the District Attorney's office as "the man behind the screen."

Conviction of Trust Men.

The thirteen men were convicted and sentenced to pay fines and serve three months each in prison. Their conviction was confirmed last June by the Appellate Division and is now before the Court of Appeals.

But these thirteen men, it was said, were not all of "the trust." Their places have been taken, according to the police, by others determined to monopolize the poultry industry and more bitter toward Baff than the original "trust." One man predicted that it would be found when the case was cleared up that the men who decreed Baff's death were not the original thirteen.

Another line of investigation taken up by the police and District Attorney's office was in regard to Baff's retail competitors. The theory that the killing was a "business murder" aimed to remove a rival from the retail field was accepted by many, including William Grant Brown, Baff's lawyer.

Many of the retail dealers are organized into the New York Live Poultry Dealers' Association, and in meetings of this body they have aired grievances against Baff and discussed means by which he might be fought. At a meeting last July half a dozen speeches were violent attacks on him.

At this meeting Baff's death was openly predicted, one woman, who said that he had driven her out of business, standing on a chair and shouting that some one certainly would kill him.

The complaint generally voiced was that Baff, as a wholesaler, forced the prices of poultry up for the retailers, and then entered the retail field and undersold his own customers in the trade. He had many markets, and backed butchers who bought exclusively from him. One of his methods, it was said, was to get an ample stock of poultry and then bid up the prices in dealers' auctions so that the dealers would have to pay higher prices for their poultry than those at which Baff sold his stock to consumers. It was agreed at the meeting that Baff was as "big" as the "trust," and for this reason many of the dealers were forced to buy from him.

Slayers Knew the Market.

Many things pointed to an accurate knowledge of conditions and customs in Washington Market on the part of the slayers. The murder was committed on one of the best two days in the year—from the conspirators' point of view.

On the second day before Thanksgiving and the second day before Christmas the market is crowded with customers. Last Tuesday crates of chickens and turkeys were piled high on every sidewalk, and hundreds of automobiles were in and around the market.

On any other day in the year except the second day before Christmas an automobile would have attracted attention, but last Tuesday the automobile in which the gunmen escaped could stand at Thirteenth Avenue and Gansevoort Street for an hour unnoticed. Also, the gunmen could dodge behind the piles of crates in running to their car.

Some one telephoned Baff's stall in the market late in the afternoon and asked if he was there, the speaker saying that he had information about chicken thefts from Baff's Harlem market. By this message, the man who telephoned not only learned that Baff was in his stall, but displayed knowledge that Baff was concerned about chicken thieves. Within half an hour after the telephone call, some one stuck his head into Baff's door and said the dealer was wanted at a stand in Thirteenth Avenue not 100 feet from his place of business.

It was by this summons that Baff was lured to his death, but he accepted it without suspicion because it was not unusual for him to be called to any stand in the market to inspect poultry offered for sale.

These points were explained by Michael Garlich, who has a poultry stand at 11 South Thirteenth Avenue, near Baff's place. Garlich saw Baff only a minute or two before he was shot, while the man was crossing Thompson Avenue, in which his stand was, on his way to answer the death summons. Garlich spoke to Baff in the street, then went into a coffee house, and a minute later heard the two revolver shots.

Finds "100 Loose Strings."

Assistant District Attorney Deuel, Capt. Carey of the Police Homicide Bureau, Capt. Cray of the First Branch Detective Bureau, and Coroner Feinberg spent the day questioning witnesses and directing a search for the murderers carried on by fifty detectives. None of them would give positive information about the work. When questioned Mr. Deuel would say only:

"There are now about 100 loose strings in this case and I haven't tied them all together yet. My investigation has not taken any single direction, and until it does I cannot talk. I don't know where I shall be led, but I shall follow every string until I am led to the murderers."

All of the investigators agreed that it might take weeks to solve the mystery. One line that will occupy their attention is the determination, if possible, of the origin of numerous threats and attacks directed against Baff.

In July, 1913, a bomb was found near Baff's Summer home at Arverne, and last January his market at 417 East 109th Street was set on fire. Last March five men tried to rob the same market and were prevented by the cashier closing the safe door. A bomb was exploded in the market last September, and shortly after another was placed near Baff's home at 76 West 120th Street. These were the more recent attacks.

The police were hampered by the uncommunicative attitude of those in and about the market. Baff was shot down in a crowded street at a busy hour, and yet only one man could be found who would admit having seen the shooting, and he said he did not see the gunmen well enough to describe them. He was Joseph Lisansky, an employe of Baff's, who was held as a material witness on Tuesday night, but released yesterday by Assistant District Attorney Deuel.

It was supposed that the terrorism of the chicken thieves or the power of the "trust" made silence seem advisable. No one could be found who would describe the murderers' automobile fully. The police could learn only that it was a brown car. Several numbers were given for it but none of them was correct.

Harry Baff, the son, who lives at 100 West 119th Street, said that the District Attorney had given him strict orders not to talk. He did not go to the market, but spent the day at his own and father's homes attending to the funeral arrangements. Baff's body was kept at the Morgue for the autopsy. The funeral is to be held this morning from his home.

Blind Parson-Lawyer in Murder Case

The Rev. T. Calvin McClelland, who was stricken blind while preaching at a Brooklyn Church a year and a half ago, and has since studied law and been admitted to the bar, was assigned yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Kelby to defend Martin Brecht, whose trial for murder will begin on Monday. Dr. McClelland has recovered partial sight in one eye, and recently offered his services to Justice Kelby as counsel for some prisoner, who might not be able to retain an attorney. Dr. McClelland was formerly pastor of the Memorial Presbyterian Church and the Washington Avenue Baptist Church in Brooklyn.

CARNEGIE, 79, WANTS AN OPTION ON LIFE

Says It Is Becoming More Delightful and Precious Than Ever Before.

THE WAR IS DISGRACEFUL

Insists Hague Tribunal Should Be Resorted To—Schwab and Dr. Hornaday Birthday Callers.

Andrew Carnegie was 79 years old yesterday. As has been his custom for years on his birthday he received the newspaper men in the afternoon and expressed his views on many matters. He still believes in The Hague Tribunal, despite the war, and incidentally he refuses to blame the Kaiser for bringing on this war. Mr. Carnegie described the Emperor as the "apostle of peace" who has during the quarter of a century of his reign labored unceasingly to make war between nations impossible.

Charles M. Schwab, head of the Bethlehem Steel Company, who returned from Europe a few days ago bringing back, according to well-founded rumors, a pocketful of contracts for war materials, was with Mr. Carnegie when the reporters greeted him. Also present was Dr. William T. Hornaday, Curator of the Bronx Zoological Park, who told Mr. Carnegie that he wanted to have a treaty negotiated among Great Britain, Canada, and the United States to stop the killing of migratory birds.

"I think the proposition a splendid one," Mr. Carnegie told Dr. Hornaday, "but just at the present time I think it would probably be a much better plan to use our time in trying to have a treaty signed to stop the killing of human beings. For the present let the birds soar."

As for Mr. Schwab he was asked question after question concerning the reported big war contracts. He laughed, said something that sounded like "nothing doing," and with a hearty shake of Mr. Carnegie's hand rushed out of the house. Mr. Carnegie said he did not know a thing about Mr. Schwab's reported activities in the war material line, but added jokingly that he would not be surprised at anything that the Bethlehem man might do.

Says War is Disgraceful.

Mr. Carnegie talked abut the war as a most disgraceful and inexcusable affair. England arrayed against Germany, he declared, made the war to a great extent a fratricidal conflict. Mr. Carnegie admitted that the war had shaken his proverbial optimism about the goodness of this world.

"But the truth remains," he added, "that the longer I live on this earth the more of a heaven it becomes to me. The longer I live the more I realize the truth of all this. I still believe that the world is improving and that life is becoming more delightful and more precious than ever before, and if I could get an option on life I would pay a big sum for the option. No, I am glad I am here, and I am not at all anxious to leave."

"But how about this war in Europe? Hasn't that shaken your confidence in mankind somewhat?" Mr. Carnegie was asked.

He thought a moment and then handed out a typewritten statement which he said briefly outlined his opinion of the great war. The statement, which was written in the phonetic form of spelling he favors, reads:

Is this, the most disgraceful, most destructiv, and most uncald for of wars to be the last between civilized nations? It can easily be made so, and the world thus cleard of its greatest crime. Arbitration tribunals hav already pronounst righteous judgment between nations in no les than 627 cases, and not one has been challenged.

It is notable that Great Britain, Germany, France, and the United States (three of these great powers now engaged in the present terrible war) hav all been parties to arbitration before The Hague Tribunal; France, six times; Britain, five; Germany, three, and the United States, three times. One of these disputes involvd no les than twelv nations; another, six. Verdicts all accepted without demur! When such peaceful settlement of international disputes is alredy within our reach, why should not the nations here named, inviting others to co-operate, agree that future disputes shal be settled peacefully, as those wer, and one step further, also resolv that nations refusing to accept such peaceful settlement shal resort to war at their peril? Let them understand that Arbitration has become the guardian angel of World Peace!

Hague Tribunal a Success.

The nations named, with others, hav only to agree that future differences, if any, shal be thus settled, and behold blessed peace ascends the throne; men cease to act like savage beasts and we hav before us the brotherhood of man—War abolisht, Peace enthroned. Some zealous friends urge the creation of a World Supreme Court; we submit that such is The Hague Tribunal, which has been in successful operation for fifteen years.

Touching the present unparalleld upheaval, surely after an armistice between the warring nations is establisht, the majority of enlightend people of civilized lands must realize that the permanent maintenance of world peace is entirely practicable thru a union of a few powerful nations pledged to maintain and enforce it. As nations accepted peaceful arbitration, armies and navies would fade away, being no longer necessary, and the profecy would soon be fulfild that "men shal learn war no more."

Meanwhile let us pity and forgiv those who urge increased armaments for, "they know not what they do." "Preparation for war" by one nation invariably leads to "preparation against war" by the nations endangered, and armies and navies hav no limit to their expansion—as has been amply proven. Let our "preparation" be for peace, "for what can war but endless war stil breed?" askt Milton, poet and profet, three centuries ago, and to this no anser has ever been given!

"How long do you think the war will last?" Mr. Carnegie was asked.

"I am no judge of the duration of wars," he replied, "but I note that Earl Kitchener has stated that it will be a very long one. It is a sad thought indeed that Germany, the motherland of the Teutons, should be arrayed against Britain, her daughter. This part of the conflict is nothing less than fratricidal."

Kaiser "Apostle of Peace."

"Do you think Germany started this war?" was another question.

"There can be no question that a treaty with Belgium was broken," Mr. Carnegie answered, "and for that I can offer no excuse for Germany. But I do draw a very sharp distinction between the Emperor and the military caste that surrounds him. And besides the Emperor was not in Berlin when the war clouds gathered and he did not reach there until he was found by telegraph, previous efforts to reach him by letter having failed. We must remember that the Emperor has been the devoted apostle of peace since he ascended the throne more than a quarter of a century ago."

"Admiral Mahan just before England decided to enter the war," Mr. Carnegie was told, "wrote an article which was printed all over the world in which he suggested that the Emperor being away from Berlin when the war talk started may have been a part of the Austro-German plan."

"It is hard to believe that of an Emperor," Mr. Carnegie replied, "whose great desire seems to have been not to break the peace. He never did during the period that preceded this war. I do not assume, however, to know any of the details of what was done in Berlin. But I do know that I never met Emperor William when he did not applaud peace as the greatest of all objects to be attained. The serious part of Germany's case is of course the breaking of the Belgian treaty. As for the German people, we have too many of them in our country not to know something about them, and I consider that our Republic is highly favored in having so many of them among its citizens. I myself have had something to do with making some of them millionaires."

Gets Many Congratulations.

Mr. Carnegie also talked of domestic conditions and said that some of the aspects, particularly as they affected the poorer classes, were not bright. He said he has had many applications for assistance recently as a result of existing conditions.

Hundreds of telegrams were received by Mr. Carnegie yesterday congratulating him on his anniversary. One of them came from Thomas A. Edison who wired:

Congratulations on your seventy-ninth birthday. Don't let up in talking. Hire another stenographer, and give us more of your experiences and ideas. Whoop it up for the U. S. A. EDISON.

The messages come from all parts of the United States, and included among them were telegrams from all of Mr. Carnegie's former associates in the steel business.

CITY'S FORCE IS TOO BIG.

Tirrell Says Staff Shouldn't Be Increased for Ten Years.

George L. Tirrell and Tilden Adamson, Directors of the new Board of Estimate bureaus, explained the increases in their salaries at the hearing on the 1915 burget appropriations before the Finance Committee of the Board of Aldermen yesterday. Mr. Tirrell of the Bureau of Standards said the Board of Estimate in creating the bureau was in favor of paying the Director $7,500, the same amount that is paid the head of the Bureau of Franchises.

"The Controller opposed this," said Mr. Tirrell, "since both the men who were to head the two new bureaus, Mr. Adamson and myself, were receiving $6,000 in the Finance Department, and the Controller did not think it advisable at that time to have us go to our new posts at an increase of salary. The Board of Estimate, in executive session, however, decided, I am informed, to give Mr. Adamson and myself $1,500 a year more if at the end of six months the bureaus competently exercised those functions for which they were created or that were assigned to them."

"The city has too big a force of employes in the offices," said Mr. Tirrell later. "I don't think any one should be dismissed, but there should be no increase in the office for ten years at least. Where they are now using twenty men on a particular job they should use twelve or fifteen, and turn the other men over to do some other kind of work."

The Finance Committee will have its report ready for submission to the Aldermen at a special meeting to be held next Monday.

MISS DELAFIELD'S WILL.

Members of the Family Share in $300,000 Estate.

The will of Julia Livingston Delafield, aunt of Louis L. Delafield, was filed for probate yesterday. It disposes of an estate of about 300,000, all of which goes to members of her family. Bequests of $28,000 each are made to Robert Hare Delafield, nephew, and Mary Hammond Delafield, niece. Maturin Livingston Delafield, Jr., a nephew, gets $20,000 outright, and Louis Livingston Delafield, Jr., a grand nephew gets $10,000.

Maturin L. Delafield, a brother, gets all the paintings, jewelry, and other personal effects. The residuary estate is divided into twelve equal parts for the benefit of nephews, nieces, and the issue of decedent nephews and nieces. Miss Delafield died on Nov. 10.

CROKER IS TO WED INDIAN MAID TODAY

corps of girl drummers who welcomed Mrs. Pethick Lawrence of England and Gov. Glynn, the speakers of the evening. She is a pretty girl. She looks like an Indian when dressed in her costumes, but in street clothes she does not look like an Indian. She has long braids of dark hair and dark eyes and a tanned complexion."

Miss Edmondson's sponsor in Muskogee, according to some letters on file in the Hippodrome office, is George B. Smith, connected with the Oklahoma Water Power Company. Mr. Smith wrote the manager of the Hippodrome a letter on Aug. 12, 1913, in which he recommended the young woman for work on the stage.

Owns an Apple Orchard.

"She came from one of our best Indian families," he wrote. "She owns an 100-acre apple orchard, is a splendid reader, and possesses a beautiful voice. She can carry any of your audience in 'America' by singing 'The Star-Spangled Banner' in the Cherokee language. Under your direction the girl would be the talk of the town at once."

The manager of the Hippodrome engaged Miss Edmondson in the Fall of last year. She came on the stage on a pony and sang a solo. After four or five weeks of pony riding and singing it was decided to make some changes, and Keetaw Kelantychy Sequoan, as she was called on the stage, was asked to go into the chorus. Declaring that her life was dedicated to art and not to singing in choruses, the Indian maiden left the stage and never returned.

Miss Edmondson was remembered by many guests and employes of the Hotel Gerard on West Forty-fourth Street as having been a guest there in March, 1913. At the time, it was said, few at the hotel knew that she had Indian blood. Several days before the young woman made her appearance a man registered at the hotel as W. D. Ford from Oklahoma. He was about 50 years old, and his appearance led no one to suspect that he was an Indian.

He was followed in due time by Miss Edmondson, for whose arrival he had made every preparation. Ford told clerks at the Gerard that the young woman was his niece, and that he had brought her here so that she might pursue her musical education. She was then supposed to be getting ready to go on the stage. Ford and Miss Edmondson remained at the hotel for more than a month. They gave up their rooms in April, following an accident to Ford, which kept him in a hospital for several days. Ford went back to Oklahoma and Miss Edmondson moved to 54 West Fifty-fourth Street.

No one could be found who could throw much light on the first meeting between Mr. Croker and his fiancée.

Sisters Married Indians.

"Croker was not the only one who wanted to marry her," said one friend of Miss Edmondson's yesterday. "I know of at least two full-blooded Indians from the West who wanted to marry her, and of several other admirers here in New York City. The funniest thing about it was that Miss Edmondson was opposed to marriage. She didn't want anything to upset her art. I heard her declare in her lectures that she would not marry. She certainly surprised us all when we heard of this Croker match. She has two sisters who married full-blooded Indians. They say Croker has a lot of money. Well, Miss Edmondson has some of her own. I know that a relative left her a lot of money. Her parents are still living out in Oklahoma."

Brown Co. Get City Record Job.

The Board of City Record awarded yesterday to the Martin B. Brown Printing and Binding Company the contract for printing the City Record for 1915 at $162,475. William Batter & Co. bid $172,750. A bid was received from the Trow Directory Printing and Binding Company later than the time set for receiving bids. The Brown Company has had the contract for many years. The bid for 1914 was $156,525.

RELIEF DEMANDS INCREASE.

Application Room Crowded to the Limit Every Morning.

At the annual meeting of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor yesterday afternoon Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., President of the Board of Managers, announced that never before in its seventy-one years had the organization been called upon to aid as many destitute families as at the present time. Calls for help were coming in so rapidly, he said, that the staff of fifty visitors and nurses was overwhelmed with work. During the last month there had been an increase of 45 per cent. in the number of new applications for relief compared with the same period a year ago.

"We are having to meet not only the out-of-work situation today," said Mr. Bliss, "but also the aftermath of a like situation of a year back. Our application room is crowded to the limit every morning. Scores of personal applications have been received through the mail, as well as appeals from churches and other social agencies, for rent, food, fuel and clothing for families in need. It is our business quickly to respond to every such appeal and to meet every need that we find to exist. The public expects us to do this, and we are doing it.

"The situation, however, is very grave, for to meet this increase in applications for relief we are not receiving any increase in the number and amount of contributions, upon which we depend wholly to finance the work. Last year our Bureau of Relief spent $245,000, nearly one-half of this going to widows with little children. It looks now as though we shall need twice that amount this Winter, if every legitimate call for aid is answered."

Mgr. Cerretti Sent to Australia.

NAPLES, Nov. 25, (via Rome.)—Mgr. Bonaventura Cerretti, former Auditor of the Apostolic Delegation in Washington, has been appointed First Apostolic Delegate to Australia. Mgr. Cerretti left today on board the steamer Amerika for New York, whence he will proceed to his new post.

DIEDLING QUIZZED ON BEDFORD REPORT

State Board of Charities Examines the Prison Commissioner.

STICKS TO CRITICISMS

Idleness the Curse of the Reformatory, He Insists—Says He Spent Seventy Minutes There.

Dr. Rudolph F. Diedling of Saugerties, a member of the State Prison Commission, who recently made a report severely criticising the management of the Bedford Reformatory, was cross-questioned upon his report for two hours yesterday at a special meeting of an investigating committee of the State Board of Charities.

Dr. Diedling insisted that he spent an hour and ten minutes at the reformatory and went through two of its buildings. He admitted that he didn't know anything about the rest of the reformatory, or how generally conditions he found in those two buildings might prevail in the institution as a whole. The buildings he visited were those where girls were detained when they became hysterical or were undergoing punishment for infractions of the rules. At the request of the Bedford officials the investigation was not concluded yesterday, but was expanded, so that it will take in at another session tomorrow afternoon "all the newspaper attacks upon Bedford recently made and all newspaper comments on those attacks."

The State Board of Charities' special committee consisted of Dr. Stephen Smith, who acted as Chairman; Dr. J. Richard Kevin of Brooklyn and Thomas M. Mulry. It was announced that the State Board of Charities assumed jurisdiction in the matter because the Bedford Reformatory really came under its control rather than the State Prison Commission, to which Dr. Diedling made his report. Secretary Hebbard of the State Board of Charities read the law to Dr. Diedling in order to show him, he said, that he had been in error in assuming that he had a right to inspect the Bedford institution for the Prison Commission.

Dr. Diedling said that neither Gov. Sulzer, who appointed him on the State Prison Commission nor Gov. Glynn, who reappointed him, ordered him to investigate Bedford. He did it, he said, as a volunteer activity because the Bedford institution came in his prison district. He went there in an automobile, he said, and he was sure he spent more than an hour on the premises because when he returned to the automobile some friends who had accompanied him complained about his long stay and told him they had kept his time by a watch, and that it was an hour and ten minutes.

James Wood, President of the Board of Managers of the Bedford Reformatory, said he would be able to show that the investigator was not on the premises more than twenty-three minutes. There was a good deal of peppery crossfire between Mr. Wood and Dr. Diedling, in which Mr. Wood several times questioned the doctor's motives in going to Bedford and questioned all of his statements of facts about conditions at the institution.

Dr. Diedling's report on Bedford was read to him, paragraph by paragraph, and then he was asked by Secretary Hebbard and by Mr. Wood just what investigation he made before coming to each conclusion announced.

Most of Dr. Diedling's attack centred upon the disciplinary building. He found a girl, he reported, locked in a room with a heavy wooden door on it that shut out the light and air. When he was pressed with questions as to whether he knew the cells were scientifically ventilated, he said he did not inquire into that. Mr. Wood then told him that the cell had the big wooden door because it was a "sound proof" cell built for women suffering from hysterical attacks, which led them to scream at night so that unless isolated in a sound proof cell, they would keep 100 or more girls awake.

Dr. Diedling insisted that it would be better to give the hysterical girls hypodermic injections or sedatives rather than to lock them up when they become hysterical. He said he could not bear to think of the idleness of the girls locked in the disciplinary cells.

Spoke to Seven Girls.

"All I found in Bedford," he said, "was idleness, idleness, idleness. Idleness is the curse of the place. It certainly is a shame and disgrace for the State to take honest taxpayers' money and spend it at the rate of $5 per week for the support in idleness of each of the strong, strapping young women in Bedford."

"How many Bedford girls did you speak to while you were there?" put in Mr. Wood.

"Seven," replied Dr. Diedling.

"And then you don't know, do you," retorted Mr. Wood with some heat, "that we have nearly 500 girls in all, and that we conduct dressmaking classes, plain sewing classes, cooking classes, laundry classes, classes in domestic service, and several other kinds of classes as well? You never went through the buildings where that work was going on, did you?"

Mr. Wood and Miss Mary Rebecca Moore, Superintendent of Bedford, inquired especially as to what Dr. Diedling meant by the paragraph in his report, "The work should be done by people who can treat it in a sympathetic way rather than in a cold, harsh, purely scientific manner, and not by persons who assume airs of distant superiority."

"I found a girl in one of these cells," he testified, "who was 18 years old, yet she was on a mattress with hands handcuffed behind her and her feet shackled. She was in a sitting posture. I was told she had been thus handcuffed and shackled for two weeks, and in that time had had nothing but bread and water to eat. Other girls told me of similar punishments and assured me they were not infrequent. The place was like a mediaeval dungeon, instead of a modern reformatory."

A newspaper contribution by Florence Halstead of 258 Riverside Drive, it was stated, would be a special topic for investigation at tomorrow's session of the committee.

LABORER KILLED IN CAVE-IN.

Three Others Hurt When Brooklyn Retaining Wall Gives Way.

One Italian laborers was instantly killed and three others injured yesterday by a cave-in of a twenty-foot retaining wall at Furman Street and the foot of Clark Street, Brooklyn. The men were employed by the Flinn-O'Rourke Construction Company and were engaged in the preliminary work on the caissons for the new tunnel from the foot of Clark Street to the foot of Peck Slip.

While the men were at work parts of the side wall caved in. The large sections of brick work carried tons of earth with them and the score of men were partially buried.

Tony Gitrani, 35 years, of 222 Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, was dead when taken from the débris. The injured were: Pattello Cuttolo, 34 years, of 222 Myrtle Avenue; Romano Raffaelli, 34 years, of 66 Oliver Street, and Joseph Favello, 23 years, of 102 Forsyth Street. Frank D. Manning, Assistant Superintendent of the work, was placed under arrest and held in $2,500 bail by Coroner Wagner.

WOULD LET WOMEN VOTE.

William Jay Schieffelin Also Is for the Teacher Mother.

William Jay Schieffelin told an audience at the Women's Political Union's Suffrage Show at 663 Fifth Avenue yesterday afternoon that it was not only right but wise that women should vote. Municipal afafirs are nothing but housekeeping, he said. He said the ignorant vote would not be increased, that he knew many working women, and they were keenly intelligent and broadly altruistic, and the unfortunate women of the city above all should have the vote as a matter of protection, and added:

Woman could not do worse than man in the matter of the alien labor law which is now holding up the city subway and which should be opposed. It is bad for the city making the subway cost more, which will affect every one, and it is bad for the body politic to force into it people who are not ready to become citizens.

If women were on the Board of Education the scandalous, absurd, cruel, and silly trouble about the teacher mother would not have occurred. The Mayor is right when he said that one simple rule should be made to allow married teachers to become mothers. People who have their minds focused on one thing like this seem to lose their outlook.

John Martin used to be fairly reasonable, and I understand that now on the Board of Education this question is like waving a red flag before a bull to him. I suppose he lies awake nights thinking about it. He ought to. I don't say that if there were all women on a board of forty they could do very much. It needs trimming.

"It is not only right and wise for women to vote," he said in conclusion, "but ethics and morals will be on a higher plane. I will work for the amendment to give women the vote."

21 GUNS ON EVACUATION DAY

Old Guard Marches from City Hall to Battery Ceremony.

Evacuation Day was celebrated at the Battery yesterday, when the Old Guard, with 100 men in line, under command of Gen. Ardolph L. Kline, assembled at City Hall and marched down Broadway. They wore their big bearskin shakos and blue overcoats over their white uniforms.

Two guns from Battery D, First Field Artillery, N. G. N. Y., with fifteen men under command of Lieut. Benjamin Van Raden, had been planted at the Battery seawall, and after Gen. Kline had ordered the Old Guard to "Present sabres" the cannon boomed out a salute of twenty-one guns. The Old Guard Band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" and a park employe ran up a new flag to the truck of the 162-foot staff.

There were more than 1,500 persons gathered at the ceremony. At its conclusion the Old Guard went back to their headquarters by way of the Subway.

Uncle Sam Sends His Soldiers and Sailors

To the Hot Springs of Arkansas, for the Relief and Cure of Rheumatism and Blood Disorders.

(See List Below.)

The great Army and Navy Hospital located here reports ninety per cent. of its patients as being returned to duty. This is a fair indication of the certainty of cure or relief that sufferers may expect.

Many years ago, when Thomas Jefferson was President, the U. S. Government awakened to the fact that the Hot Springs of Arkansas was the most valuable asset in America for the curing of human ailments. So all of these Springs were set aside and became a park reserve, under the direct control and suprvision of the Government.

It is beyond comprehension the thousands upon thousands of lives that have since been saved through the healing powers of these springs.

The waters are so charged with radium—known technically as radio-activity—that they accomplish results in the cure of disease that would under other treatment be considered impossible.

The ailments that most readily yield to these baths are Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Malaria, Locomotor Ataxia, (earlier stages), Bright's Disease (when not too far advanced), Liver and Bladder troubles, Catarrhal troubles, Skin and Blood diseases, troubles peculiar to women, and other troubles of a nature kindred to those above mentioned.

Regarding these Springs as America's greatest gift to the sick, the Government has never allowed them to be exploited for private gain. The prices charged for the baths are strictly regulated—hotel charges are extremely low—and every consideration is afforded the visitor.

The City of Hot Springs is one of the most delightful resorts to be found anywhere in the world, and its visitors are by no means confined to those seeking health.

The best of hotel accommodations, ideal climate the year around, picturesque mountain scenery with drives made beautiful by U. S. expert engineers, all contribute to make this the ideal resort of America.

Splendid facilities for all outdoor sports, excellent tennis courts, one of the finest 18-hole golf courses in America, Base Ball Parks, etc.—lively with the gaiety of thousands of visitors from all parts of the country—Hot Springs offers rest, comfort, enjoyment and health.

Write for information, handsomely illustrated souvenir booklets, Government reports and other interesting and valuable matter.

HELLENSTEIN TELLS OF WEINGART CASE

Did Not Know Suicide Voided Insurance When He Gave Burial Permit.

CORONERS' WORK SUITS HIM

District Attorney Watching Inquiry —Coroner Forced Undertaker on Family.

An effort to put into the records all facts connected with the death of Isaac Weingart, who was found dead in his apartment, 258 Central Park West, on Nov. 6 last, under circumstances that caused companies which had insured him for $310,000 to ask that the body be exhumed and an autopsy performed, was made yesterday when Coroner Herman Hellenstein finally decided to answer questions put by Commissioner of Accounts Wallstein.

Dr. Hellenstein, after consulting with his attorneys, decided not to fight longer against Justice Newburger's order to testify.

The heavy insurance was taken out by Mr. Weingart not long before his death, and a clause in the policies made them void if he committed suicide. Although his body was found in a bathtub half full of water, Dr. Hellenstein decided, without an autopsy, that he had died of natural causes.

Mr. Wallstein brought out that Coroner Hellenstein had received letters from several insurance companies asking that Mr. Weingart's body be exhumed and an autopsy held. He was asked for the names of the companies and replied: "I can't remember them all. One was the Mutual, another was a Hartford company."

Dr. Bodog Beck, called in by the Weingart family, the Coroner testified, reported the case to the Coroner's office as one in which the cause of death was unknown. Dr. Hellenstein had therefore personally examined the body.

The letters from the insurance companies, Dr. Hellenstein said, were received after he had granted the burial permit. He said he was in doubt as to his authority and took the matter up first with Assistant District Attorney Breckenridge, who said: "You acted as I should if there was no evidence of crime."

Next he sought advise from the Corporation Counsel's office and was told, he said, that he did not have authority to order the body exhumed for autopsy. He said he did not know at the time the suicide clause in the policies.

Mr. Wallenstein dropped the Weingart case for the time, but the Coroner will be recalled Monday morning.

The death of a woman in connection with which a physician was made defendant in an inquest by Coroner Hellenstein, was next taken up by Dr. Wallstein. The Commissioner has been investigating the case and not long ago called the physician before him at a private hearing.

"Isn't it true," asked Mr. Wallstein, "that the physician who was questioned by me came to see you the night before he testified and talked over the case?"

The Coroner said he had. He was then asked if the physician had not returned to tell what his testimony was.

"No," replied Dr. Hellenstein. "He sent some one to see me but I would have nothing to do with him. I told him to go away, that I didn't want to talk with him."

In another criminal practice case in which he had summoned a jury Dr. Hellenstein admitted that he had rejected the opinion of Assistant District Attorney Deacon Murphy. He did not at the time, he said, know all the law involved, but he thought that he was competent to act.

It developed yesterday that Assistant District Attorneys Breckenridge and Murphy have taken an active part in the present inquiry and have furnished much information and advice. The office is in close touch with all developments, and will be prepared if any case arises in which the District Attorney might desire to act.

Robert S. Binkerd, Secretary of the City Club, and former Deputy Police Commissioner Newburger testified that former Coroner Henry E. Holzhauser had forced the family of Sigfried Hayman, who committed suicide at the City Club on May 11, 1911, to employ Leon T. Stowe, an undertaker, to avoid having the body sent to the Morgue. A bill of $250 was received by the Hayman family from Stowe. It was paid under protest to avoid publicity.

BOMB FACTORY SUSPECTED.

Three Men Arrested After Explosion at 133 Cherry Street.

The premature explosion at 6:30 o'clock last night of some mixture which contained gunpowder, antimony, and potash, wrecked a room, three by five feet, behind a partly concealed door, on the ground floor of a tenement at 133 Cherry Street. The police think the place may be the factory where many of the bombs used in recent Black Hand outrages have been made. Three men were arrested.

Bombs have been set off recently at the Bronx Court House, in the Tombs Police Court, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, and in St. Alphonsus's Church. Many of the recent bombs have been composed of the same kind of explosive as that found last night.

The prisoners said they were John Vitale of 148 Cherry Street, Francesco Castro of 139 Cherry Street, and Salvatore Gullanazzo of 126 Cherry Street. Vitale and Castro were burned badly about the heads and faces.

The explosion shattered windows in the tenement; yet, when Detectives Barberi and Foley with Inspector Eagan of the Bureau of Combustibles arrived they found no excitement and scarcely anyone in the street. They discovered the three prisoners in a nearby drug store. They were led back to the tenement and into a rear room behind the quarters of the Independent Sons of the City of Mitello, an organization of Sicilians. The prisoners are all Sicilians.

The men protested that something in a stove had exploded. Inspector Eagan found there were cobwebs in the stove and at last he discovered the half-concealed door. The little room behind it contained two and a half pounds of the explosive and seven mortars such as are used to send off fireworks.

ICE FORMS ON SALT LAKE.

Railroad Cut-Off Freshens Water at the North End.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 25.—The Lucin cut-off of the Southern Pacific Railroad, which separates the northern portion of the Great Salt Lake from the main body, has produced so great a change in the character of the north end of the lake that ice floes were noticed there today for the first time in history, although the weather has been unusually mild.

The Bear River flows into the north end of the lake and the water has become steadily fresher ever since the cut-off was built. Hundreds of waterfowl accustomed to living on the lake have perished through being frozen in the ice.

DR. STURM IS HELD FOR HITTING WOMAN

Additional Charge of Larceny Is Placed Against 'Turtle Cure' Advocate in Court.

HAD MRS. BAIRD'S JEWELS

Doctor Produces Them, Telling Magistrate He Held Them for Safe Keeping.

Dr. Maurice Sturm of 237 West Seventy-fourth Street, who gained notoriety as a disciple of Dr. Friedmann and his "turtle cure" for consumption, was held by Magistrate Corrigan in the West Side Court yesterday on charges of felonious assault and the larceny of $25,000 worth of stocks and jewelry belonging to Mrs. Laura Baird, who lives at the Rexford Apartments, at Seventy-ninth Street and Broadway. He spent an uncomfortable night locked up in the West Sixty-eighth Street Police Station, and was released after Mrs. Sarah Stern and Mrs. Fannie Brown, both of 1,858 Seventh Avenue, had put up $3,000 bail.

Mrs. Baird described herself as the widow of a wealthy London manufacturer. She says she met Dr. Sturm two months ago, and that he was very attentive. She turned over to him her stocks and jewelry—at his suggestion, she says—when the physician explained that the valuables would be much safer if left with him than in a hotel. Her visit to the doctor was to get back her valuables, she says.

"I was met by a storm of abuse," she said. "When I went to the telephone to call up my attorney, Benedict M. Holden, the doctor flew into a rage. He picked up a carafe from the table and hit me over the head with it. I fell, and as I struggled to my feet he struck me again, crushing my nose. He also struck me with his fists."

"Why didn't you give this woman her valuables?" asked Magistrate Corrigan.

"She was in no condition to receive them," replied Dr. Sturm. "But I'm ready to return them now."

"Then go and get them," ordered the court.

The physician departed guarded by Detectives Hughes and Hyams, and returned at 2 o'clock. He brought with him a $10,000 pearl necklace, two diamond bracelets, a diamond necklace, three rings, several scarfpins, a pair of cuff links, a certified check for $500, 100 shares of Riker-Hegeman stock, and $600 in cash. These were handed over in court, after which Assistant District Attorney Coleman entered the charge of grand larceny in addition to that of assault against the doctor. Both cases were adjourned until Dec. 1.

Two Hurt as Auto Overturns.

Henry C. Seguine, 58 years old, a merchant of Rossville, S. I., and Miss Mary Lundberry, 33 years old, a school teacher living at the Beverly Apartments at Tompkinsville, S. I., were injured in an automobile accident this morning. Both are at the Smith Infirmary Hospital at New Brighton. Both of Miss Lundberry's hips were badly injured. Seguine is suffering from shock.

Seguine was taking Miss Lundberry to her home from Rossville. On the Bloomfield Road the auto skidded into the Meadows, and toppled over. The occupants fell clear of the car. The machine took fire and burned up.

SING-SONG WON BY JUNIORS.

Barnard Judges Enjoy Digs at Them in New Jingle.

Barnard College turned out in full force yesterday afternoon for the sing-song contest. Each class sang an old Barnard song and the juniors won on the execution of the Barnard chant. Their splendid spirit and well-trained voices won them first place in the singing of the new non-serious song by Mary Powell, '16:

Dr. Crampton has taught us to blame, tra la,
Our parents for all of our sins.
No matter whose fault you may name, tra la,
You can trace it to Eve just the same, tra la,
For that's where the trouble begins.
And so with rejoicing we go on our way,
For what we do now our grandchildren must pay.

We used to be sorry,
But now we should worry,
We know our grandchildren must pay.

The Faculty judges seemed to enjoy these digs at them nugety, and awarded the trophy to the audacious juniors in the person of their leader, Dorothy Blondel. The judges were Dean Gildersleeve and Profs. Baldwin, Braun, Crampton, Maltby, and Perry, and the committee comprised Louise Talbot, L. Jackson, D. Blondel, R. M. Lawrence, and D. Keck.

WHITMAN IN WEST VIRGINIA.

Governor-Elect Will See No Politicians at White Sulphur.

Gov.-elect Charles S. Whitman, accompanied by Mrs. Whitman and their little daughter, left for White Sulphur Springs, West Va., last night. Mr. Whitman expects to remain in the mountains over Sunday and will return to this city on Monday. He said he did not expect to announce any appointments until then. He added that he was going away purely for pleasure and rest, and had made no appointments with either politicians or office seekers in White Sulphur Springs.

State Controller-elect Eugene M. Travis announced yesterday that he would appoint Frederick G. Reusswig, a former City Controller of Utica, Second Deputy State Controller at $5,000 a year.

L. E. Jallade and the Y. W. H. A.

In an account of the dedication exercises of the Young Women's Hebrew Association Building, 31 West 110th Street, printed on Nov. 23, the name of the architect was given as Louis Allen Abramson. This did an injustice to Louis E. Jallade of 37 Liberty Street, who, with Mr. Abramson, planned and designed the new building.

RECALLS CAMPBELL AT BIRTH OF HEIRESS

Her Godmother Says Capitalist's Child Was Born Suddenly at Grand Union.

"HEARTS" FOR CENT A POINT

Benjamin Strong, Jr., Tells How Testator Played with Wealthy Commuters of Greenwich.

Testimony to establish the parentage of Miss Lois Ann Campbell, heiress to a small part of the $16,000,000 estate of James Campbell, railroad, mining, and public utilities man of St. Louis, was given yesterday in the hearings being conducted by a notary, J. J. Tierney, in the law offices of Sullivan & Cromwell, 51 Wall Street.

Nephews and nieces of the capitalist, who are suing to break the will, and his only sister, Mrs. Rosa V. Curtis of St. Louis, who on last Saturday filed a petition in St. Louis to be made a party plaintiff in the suit, allege that Campbell died without leaving "a child or children." They further allege that when he signed his "purported will" he was in feeble health and imposed upon and easily influenced to leave his estate in trust for a Jesuit college, St. Louis University.

Not only did Mr. Campbell introduce Miss Campbell, now Mrs. Elzey G. Burkham, wife of a young civil engineer of St. Louis, as his daughter at two fashionable débuts in New York and St. Louis a little more than a year ago, but he referred to her in his will as his only child, and bequeathed to her and his wife, Mrs. Florence Adele Campbell, equal shares in his estate. He left them the income from the estate, $500,000 to $700,000 a year.

Birth of Lois Campbell.

Mrs. Michael J. Mahoney of 126 West Eighty-seventh Street, who as Annie Mahoney was named, with her brother, Henry Campbell, as godparent for Lois Ann Campbell when she was christened in St. Patrick's Cathedral by Archbishop Corrigan on March 27, 1893, took the stand for the defense yesterday. Mrs. Mahoney, now past seventy, testified she arrived at the Grand Union Hotel two hours after the birth of Lois Ann Campbell. Mrs. Campbell, according to Mrs. Mahoney, was stricken in the street and rushed to the hotel. Mr. Campbell summoned Mrs. Mahoney by a message in which he said his wife was ill. She found Mrs. Campbell in bed, the baby in a crib, and a nurse and physician in attendance. An aged aunt, now dead, also was present, she said.

At the baptism ten days later Mrs. Mahoney also was present, with her brother, and since that time, she asserted, she had seen the daughter several times every year, when her parents came with her to New York. The daughter attended schools in New York and the Ely School at Greenwich and attained some prominence in society in the East.

Mrs. Mahoney was quick to respond to queries and showed an Irish wit under cross-examination. She testified that she knew nothing of Mrs. Campbell's antecedents and little of her life in New York City previous to her marriage to the St. Louis man, other than that Mrs. Campbell once told her that she and her parents "belonged to the '400' in New York."

Mr. Mahoney went with his wife to the hearing and frowned on L. Frank Ottofy, attorney for the plaintiffs, when Mrs. Mahoney complained that he exasperated her under cross-examination and requested him to cease smoking a cigar.

Dr. S. W. Wynne, assistant registrar of the New York Health Department, was called to identify the original birth certificate of Lois Ann Campbell "to James Campbell, 45, and Mrs. Florence A. Campbell, March 17, 1893." The certificate was signed by Dr. Andrew H. Smith, long since dead. A return was made on the certificate March 25. Dr. Wynne also identified photographic facsimiles, as did a photographer, Edward Drivdahl

Mgr. Lavelle a Witness.

Mgr. James A. Connolly of the Church of Our Lady of Good Counsel was recalled to correct a mistake he made on Tuesday in copying his entry in the cathedral records regarding the baptism twenty-one years ago.

Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle, Vicar General of the diocese of New York, testified the entry of the names of both parents demonstrated that, in the eyes of the church, the child was legal. Where a child was born illegally only the name of the mother was entered. He said the church made no investigation, merely questioning the applying parties as to the parentage.

Further details concerning the Greenwich, Conn., "community heart games" resulted from the appearance of Benjamin Strong, Jr., Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and previously President of the Bankers' Trust Company. Edmund C. Converse, another of the colony of wealthy New York men, living along Long Island Sound in the vicinity of the Connecticut town near which Mr. Campbell had his Summer home at Meads Point, first mentioned the "community heart games" at Tuesday's hearing.

Like Mr. Converse, Mr. Strong testified, in answer to a fire of questions under cross-examination, that the games for the most part were played on New Haven trains between New York and Greenwich. But he went much further, with the aid of Mr. Ottofy, and revealed many of the "inside workings" of the little club of commuters. He said they played regularly twice a day, coming from and going to Greenwich, and that the stakes usually were a cent a point, but sometimes, when the players felt generous, "as much as 5 cents a point." The customary losings and winnings in these games, Mr. Strong said, amounted to about a dollar, but "sometimes a little more."

The banker said he would not refer to Mr. Campbell as a habitual player, but that he "played regularly." "Hearts" was a very sociable game and accompanied by much joking, which Mr. Campbell seemed to enjoy. Mr. Campbell was a "fair heart player." The witness explained that when Mr. Campbell first took up his Summer residence at Greenwich, and first was invited to participate in the games, he said he did not know one card from another, but did not object to learning. So Messrs. Converse, Strong, and others instructed the newcomer."

Testator's Mind Keen.

Mr. Strong testified that as head of the Bankers' Trust Company and in connection with the North American Company he had many business dealings with Mr. Campbell. They also were associated on the directorate of the Utah Securities Company and the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad, in the latter of which Mr. Campbell was invested to the extent of several millions.

Mr. Campbell's will was dated Dec. 19, 1913. Mr. Strong said that in the two months previous to this time, and up until the middle of May, or about three weeks before Mr. Campbell's death, the St. Louis capitalist always manifested a clear, keen mind, as a shrewd business man of firm convictions and opinions.

William Nelson Cromwell of Sullivan & Cromwell was the principal witness at the morning session. His testimony was aimed at the refuting of the allegations that the testator was of unsound mind.

"During the early months of 1914, and practically up to the time of his death," Mr. Cromwell testified, "we had occasion to confer in the matter of bond issues and for examination of reorganization plans of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad, and in all these conferences Mr. Campbell debated as learnedly as any lawyer I ever knew. Every aspect of his conduct and mental action was that of an intelligent, able man. In fact, I never knew a man better fitted to look after his affairs. I never knew or heard of any lapse of memory on his part, and I greatly doubt he ever suffered anything of that sort."

CATHOLIC WOMEN TO MEET.

Convention of Alumnae Federation to Open Tomorrow.

The convention of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, under the auspices of Cardinal Farley, will open with an informal reception in the Blue Room of the Hotel McAlpin tomorrow evening. The patronesses' list is headed by Countess Anna Leary and Countess Eleanor Colgan. Among prominent Catholic laymen who will attend are John D. Crimmins, Thomas M. Brennan, Nicholas Benziger, Walter L. Durack, Judge William Carr, Marquis Thomas Hynes, and John F. Cogan.

The Chairman will be the Rev. Michael Reilly of the Bronx, and the speakers will include the Right Rev. Mgr. Bernard Bradley, LL. D., President of Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md.; the Right Rev. Mgr. Edward W. McCarty, LL. D., and the Rev. Matthew J. Flynn.

On Saturday, at 9 A. M., in St. Patrick's Cathedral, the convention will be formally opened by Cardinal Farley, who will celebrate mass. At least 100 priests will assist in the sanctuary.

At 11 o'clock in the Blue Room of the McAlpin the first business meeting of the convention is to be held. Bishop McFaul of Trenton will speak on "The Benefits of Federation." This meeting will be followed by an alumnae luncheon. On Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock the entire Winter Garden of the McAlpin will be used for a sacred concert and farewell reception.

SET FREE BY A SHELL.

American Surety Co. Finally Gets a Fugitive in Mexico.

The story of the escape of a man, wanted in this country on a charge of embezzlement, from a prison near Mexico City after a cannon ball had smashed a hole through his prison cell, was brought here yesterday by a Western agent of the American Surety Company. The man was Richard S. Jackson, 30 years old, who disappeared from his home, in Oklahoma City in January, 1912, after a shortage of $12,000 had been discovered in the accounts of the Mellon Company of that city, for which he had worked as general bookkeeper and office manager. He was bonded for $10,000 by the surety company. After he had been traced through several Western States the $10,000 was paid and the company notified its agents to keep on the lookout for Jackson.

He was found running a pool and billiard room in Mexico City in December, 1912, and arrested. He was placed in the Belem Prison, a few miles from the city. Several months later, according to the record of the case turned in to the New York office of the company yesterday, a force of Carranza's soldiers which carried several field guns, made a raid, and the prison was struck several times. A few political prisoners were released and, according to the report, R. S. Jackson escaped through an aperture in wall of his cell, created by projectile."

About a month ago Jackson was caught a second time, in Vera Cruz. He was sent back to Oklahoma City a few days ago.

ADMITS SHE SET FIRE.

Woman Held for Arson After Tenement Blaze Is Extinguished.

A woman who said she was Maud Adams, 35 years old, of 482 Rogers Avenue, Brooklyn, was arrested near 2,297 Eighth Avenue yesterday morning on a charge of arson. A fire, declared by the police to have been of incendiary origin, was discovered in the ground floor hallway of that house, a six-story tenement near 123d Street.

The police say there were three suspicious fires in this house last Winter. Policeman McCauliffe said he saw the prisoner dart from the entrance this morning, and, looking inside, he saw smoke and flames near the stairway. Tenants put out the fire.

The woman was arraigned before Magistrate Nolan in the Harlem Court and was held in $2,000 bail for examination on Monday. She admitted that she had started the fire in the house in order to warm herself. She said she had no home although she gave the Brooklyn address when arrested.

CIVIL SERVICE LAX, SAYS CHAIRMAN NEU

Domestics and Laborers Sit at City's Telephone Switchboards.

INSPECTOR CAMERON TALKS

Gets $2,850 a Year and Knows Nothing About Masons' Materials —Draws Specifications for Pianos.

At the civil service investigation yesterday George A. Squier of the Bureau of Assessments in the Law Department testified that three lawyers in his bureau were doing work for which they had not qualified. All were computing assessments, and had been doing this work for more than twelve years. The department could not afford to lose them, the witness said.

Anna Fennell said she was acting as telephone operator in the Health Department, although designated on the civil service list as a domestic. She has been eight years in the city's employ as a domestic, entering at $480 a year, which was increased to $600 nine months later.

Dr. Robert J. Wilson, Director of Hospital Bureaus, admitted that in his department there were domestics filling five classes of positions which should be filled by candidates on the waiting lists. The witness said domestics acted as telephone operators at the Willard Parker Hospital, and that domestics and laborers were doing switchboard duty in two other institutions.

Chairman Neu, commenting on Dr. Wilson's testimony, said the local Civil Service Commission had been lax in not calling the attention of the Board of Estimate to violations of the civil service law in respect to misclassified help.

"People are doing work they should not do," he said, "and in most cases they have been paid salaries as high as the qualified candidates would receive, but who are excluded from these positions because the positions are filled by ineligibles."

Caleb W. Cameron, Inspector of Masons' Materials in the Building Bureau of the Board of Education, testified that he had been appointed without an examination at a salary of $2,850 a year and admitted that he knew nothing about masons' materials.

"Then, what was your particular specialty?" asked Commissioner Neu.

"I drew specifications for pianos and organs for public schools," replied the witness.

"What do you know about the mechanism of pianos?" asked the commissioner in surprise.

"I don't know anything about their mechanism," replied Cameron, "but I do know a good one from a bad one."

Cameron also testified that there were about half a dozen Inspectors of Masonry and Carpentery in his department, all of whom rose from the ranks and passed the Civil Service examinations, which he did not, and that these experts received only $1,050 a year. Cameron's brother-in-law, C. B. J. Snyder, is chief of his department.

RESUME PEACE LECTURES.

Four Will Be Given During Winter by Prominent Men.

The New York Peace Society, under whose auspices ex-President Taft gave a series of lectures at Aeolian Hall last Winter, announces a similar course of four lectures by different speakers which will be given this Winter on the general topic "Pan-America and Peace." The lectures will be given on Thursday evenings at 8:30 in Aeolian Hall. Tickets are on sale at the offices of the Peace Society at 507 Fifth Avenue.

The first lecture will be Dec. 10, when Dr. John Bassett Moore, late counselor of the State Department, will speak on "Past and Present Relations of the United States to the American Republics." On Jan. 28 Senator T. E. Burton will speak on "Industrial and Commercial Effects of the Panama Canal, and Their Influence on World Relations." Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan is to be the speaker on Feb. 25, and his topic, "Possibilities of Friendly Co-operation Between the United States and Latin America." The series will close on March 25 with a lecture on "The Western Hemisphere and the World of Tomorrow" by Prof. Franklin H. Giddings of Columbia.

$9,000 Verdict for Ex-Policeman.

Henry J. Peake, who was compelled to retire from the New York Police Force owing to the loss of sight in his left eye in a collision on the Long Island Railroad at College Point on Sept. 22, 1913, got a verdict of $9,000 against the railroad from a jury before Justice Garretson in the Queens County Supreme Court yesterday. Peake has a wife and eight children. He was retired from the police force last February on a pension of $700 a year.

SUES AGED CLERK FOR BAIL.

Woman Demands $5,000 Put Up in Wire-Tapping Case.

Samuel Strauss, a clerk, 67 years old, of 351 St. Nicholas Avenue, was arrested yesterday and held in $5,000 bail by Magistrate House in the Tombs Court on a charge of grand larceny, made by Mrs. Jennie Wyatt of 3,913 Calumet Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Wyatt stated in an affidavit that her husband was indicted in an alleged wire-tapping game in 1905 under the name of Frederick Williams and was held in $5,000 bail. She got cash bail and gave it to Strauss to go on her husband's bond. The money was used for that purpose, she said, and her husband jumped his bail.

A year later the indictment was dismissed, but neither Mrs. Wyatt nor her husband learned of this until recently. She tried to collect the $5,000, and learned that on his application Justice Gerard had ordered the money given to Strauss, she alleged.

TWO COLLEGE FOOTBALL GAMES IN NEW YORK TODAY--BASEBALL--HORSE SALE

LOTS OF FOOTBALL IN NEW YORK TODAY

Games at New York and Fordham Universities and Contests by Schoolboys.

The big college football game on the Thanksgiving Day calendar today is the Cornell-University game at Franklin Field, although New York will have an unusually inviting array of games this afternoon for those who enjoy the popular gridiron sport. The much-heralded Rutgers team will play New York University at Ohio Fild at 2:30 o'clock. The Rutgers eleven has been handling much stronger opponents than the Violet this season, and Coach George Sanford plans to bring about a victory by using many substitutes, although the regulars will all get a chance to get at least a little action. Rutgers does not expect any difficulty with N. Y. U., and is saving its strength to send against Washington and Jefferson on Saturday at the Polo Grounds.

Another local game which will supply some good football is the Fordham-Villanova game at Fordham Field at 3 P. M. Villanova has a team of giants this season. Fordham has hopes of bringing the season to a close with a victory. The Fordham eleven has won six and tied one game out of nine contests played. Villanova has won the past two annual games, and Fordham will make a strong effort to turn the tide.

Pennsylvania will have a chance to make a showing which may partly atone for the poorest season a Quaker eleven has had in many years. It will only be through mere desperation that Penn. will be able to make any kind of a showing against Cornell. On the basis of each team's showing against Michigan, Cornell should win a very decisive victory.

Penn.'s miserable display against Dartmouth showed the Red and Blue team to be in the throes of a disastrous slump. Michigan defeated Penn. decisively, and Cornell scored a great victory over Michigan. The Cornell team this season, after a poor start, has been developed by Al Sharpe into one of the best elevens that has represented the Ithacans in many years. Capt. O'Hearn's big Red team knows the game thoroughly, as was shown in the game in October against Brown at the Polo Grounds.

But it is not supposed that Cornell expects too easy a game, as they have many times before gone to Franklin Field to play Pennsylvania teams which looked hopeless, only to run up against a great surprise. Penn in the past has shown remarkable recuperative powers, and she may display enough today to at least make a showing, in which there will be a little glory, even in defeat.

New York high school boys will have their biggest day of the season. There are four important high school games here and in Brooklyn, and all of the contests will attract large crowds. Up at the Polo Grounds De Witt Clinton and Commerce will have their annual contest, which is always hard fought and close.

There will be a double-header at Ebbetts Field, where Manual Training will play Boys' High and Commercial will play the undefeated Bay Ridge eleven. At Washington Park Polytechnic Preparatory School will have its annual game with Erasmus High. These high school boys are thoroughly drilled in the new open game, and the contests demonstrate just as much good football as many of the college games.

Washington and Jefferson, which plays Rutgers here on Saturday, has a hard game on its schedule with Bucknell at Washington, Penn., today.

FORDHAM PLAYERS COLLIDE

Rice and Riordan Slightly Hurt, but Will Play Against Villanova.

Fordham finished this season's football drilling when "Skip" Wymard closed yesterday's practice with a blackboard illustration in the Maroon gymnasium. The scrub eleven was released a little earlier than usual in order to prepare for their feast in the college dining hall last night to celebrate the breaking of training. The prospects for a victory over Villanova in the annual Thanksgiving Day tussle at Fordham Field today were considerably lessened when Rice and Riordan were injured in practice yesterday. The team was running through signal practice at the time, and, in carrying out a shift play, both players collided while running at top speed. Rice was unconscious for a time, but will start today, despite his shattered condition. Mulcahy was the only regular absent from the final practice, being unable to get up any speed because of a sprained ankle. Capt. "Bud" Wymard was over the ball for the first time in two weeks and appears a trifle stiff and lame, as a result of his former injury.

VARIETY BOXING AT N. Y. A. C.

Leo Elvin, a Title Holder, Loses to Herbert in 108-Pound Class.

The feature which stood out most prominently in the boxing tournament which opened at the New York Athletic Club last night was that of variety. There were a number of good bouts, but, on the other hand, there were some which had little semblance of a fight. In several the decision was obvious through the opponent running across the ring and climbing through the ropes, and one or two would have stood as an interpretation of a new dance. The unexpected came when Leo Elvin, holder of the Metropolitan A. A. U. title in the 108-pound class, was judged second to M. Herbert of the West Harlem A. C. There was not a great measure of superiority displayed, both boys being strong at the end of the three rounds, but a feature that undoubtedly influenced the judges in their decision was that Herbert forced the fighting. The summary:

108-Pound Class.—First Round—Tom Geary, Morningside A. C., defeated Henry De Lucas, unattached. Stopped by referee in first round. Second Round—A. Freedman, Educational Alliance, defeated P. McGovern, Morningside A. C. Referee's decision. M. Herbert, West Harlem A. C., defeated Leo Elvin, unattached, in three rounds. Judges' decision. H. Cohen, Newsboys' Home Club, defeated T. Gerry, Morningside A. C., in three rounds. Judges' decision. A. Berkowitz, New West Side A. C., defeated L. Amberg, Brownsville F. C., who resigned after one round.

125-Pound Class.—First Round—William Moran, St. Bartholomew, defeated Henry Mertzer, unattached. Stopped by referee in first round. Charles Leonard, unattached, defeated F. Gerkey, West Harlem A. C.. Gerkey stopped after one round. T. Grandfield, New West Side A. C., defeated Sam Rubien, Newsboys' Home Club, in three rounds. Judges' decision.

135-Pound Class.—First Round—Leo Wagner, Brownsville F. C., defeated Thomas Smith, unattached, in three rounds. Judge's decision. R. H. Gleason, West Harlem A. C., defeated Bernard Levine, unattached, in three rounds. Judges' decision. Harold Marr, Lincoln Club, defeated Walter Morat, New West Side A. C., in three rounds. Judges' decision.

145-Pound Class.—First Round—L. Reicher, Y. M. H. A., stopped George Giller, unattached, in the first round. Second Round—F. McDonald, New West Side A. C., defeated J. Brenner, who resigned in second round. S. Bechilman, Rutgers Place Gymnasium, defeated E. Martin, Brown A. A., who resigned in the third round. L. Reicher, Y. M. H. A., stopped G. Mittleman, unattached, in the second round. Harold Marr, Lincoln Club, stopped M. Hoolihan, West Harlem A. C., in an extra round.

Welsh's Hand Not Injured.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion of the world, arrived in Syracuse tonight for his bout with Young Brown of New York tomorrow night. Welsh denied the report that he had injured his hand during his bout with Fred Yelle in Boston last night.

Novelty Race at Riding Academy.

A novelty race was the feature of the regular weekly ride at the Central Park Riding Academy last night. This event caused endless merriment to a large crowd of spectators. A part of the duty of the entrants was to dismount, light a cigarette, put on their nightshirts, and race down the ring to a lady, who handed them a dresssuit case, then wheel around and ride back to the starting point. This was preceded by the usual musical ride, in which a large squad of pupils took part.

CORNELL WANTS TO WAGER.

Ithacans Willing to Give Long Odds That Their Team Will Win.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—The Pennsylvania and Cornell football squads held their final drills today in preparation for tomorrow's game on Franklin Field. The Cornell players were divided into two teams and practiced formation at Inlet Park, Atlantic City. Quarter Back Barrett and Left Half Back Collier both got opportunities to call the signals. The two teams faced each other, but no tackling or regular scrimmage work was indulged in.

The Pennsylvania team held its work out at the Whitemarsh Country Club, and tonight nearly half a hundred former Red and Blue gridiron stars took dinner with the squad. Speeches, telling of former elevens that retrieved otherwise disastrous seasons by startling reversals of form in the final contest with Cornell, were made by the graduates, who urged the Pennsylvania players to fight until the end of the last period for victory tomorrow. The line-up, as decided upon by the coaches, will include five players who did not start against Dartmouth.

The advance guard of Cornell rooters arrived here today from Ithaca, anxious to lay wagers at long odds that the Red team will conquer Pennsylvania. The main body of students will arrive tomorrow morning.

SCHOOLBOYS IN SOCCER.

Manual Training and Commerce Victors in Championship Series.

Manual Training High School won a game from Townsend Harris Hall in the High School soccer championship series for the Maxwell Trophy by the score of 3 goals to 1, at Prospect Park in Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon. But for the fact that a protest on the part of Curtis High, still pending, on the result of which depends the standing of that school in the competition, Manual, as a result of yesterday's victory might have made good its claim to premier honors for this season. The protest hinges upon the question whether the games played by Stuyvesant, which team has dropped out of the league, shall count or be canceled. In the event of their counting, Curtis High will be relegated to second place because of the fact that Stuyvesant succeeded in winning a game from Curtis. If the protest is upheld and the Stuyvesant games are canceled, then Curtis High will tie for first place with Manual, necessitating a play off. The line-up:

| Townsend H. | Position. | Manual T. |
|---|---|---|
| Nagelberg | Goal | Whalen |
| Pinkey | Right back | Berthold |
| Schweitzer | Right half | Madden |
| Guida | Centre half | Agar |
| Sachs | Left half | McNair |
| Tyne | Outside right | Rankin |
| Cantrell | Inside right | Clarke |
| Mullen | Centre | Gillen |

Referee—Mr. Hollywood. Linesmen—Messrs. Spoffard and Roberts. Goals—Roache, (2,) Gillen, Manuel Training; Haddock, Townsend Harris. Substitute—Rollhaus for McNair. Time—Halves of thirty minutes.

A hard fought soccer game between Boys' High and Commerce in the high school series at Prospect Park, yesterday, resulted in favor of Commerce, by 1 goal to 0. Near the end of the first half Neginski, outside right for Commerce, sent in a speedy shot, which Goal Keeper Blair at first stopped, but allowed to roll in. Neither side scored in the second half. Both goal keepers, Blair for Boys' High, and Holman for Commerce, distinguished themselves, while Gallagher starred at right back for the winning team. The line-up:

| Boys' High. | Position. | Commerce. |
|---|---|---|
| Blair | Goal | Holman |
| Olsen | Right back | Gallagher |
| Carrol | Left back | Goodman |
| Coles | Right half | Soltar |
| Stellwagen | Centre half | Simonson |
| Campbell | Left half | Robertson |
| Pierson | Outside right | Naginski |
| Mayern | Inside right | Stanislau |
| Spencer | Centre | Jacobson |
| Lipschuetz | Inside left | Keenan |
| Levine | Outside left | Bonaparte |

Durland's Ride and Horse Show.

An unusually large crowd turned out last night at Durland's Riding Academy, where the weekly cotillion ride was held by the patrons and pupils under the command of Charles T. Krauss. For almost an hour, accompanied by the orchestra, the forty riders went through many intricate and interesting evolutions, with the regularity of an army corps. This was followed by a horse show, in which there were five events. The first class was for the best pair of horses 15.2 hands and over, to be driven to a mail phaeton, with appointments, gentlemen to ride. The blue went to Emil Seelig's handsome brown pair, Duke and Prince, the same owner accounting for the yellow, while second was taken by B. F. S. Gregory's Bobby Burns and Volunteer. The judge was J. Campbell Thompson.

Walter Baker's b. g. W. T. W. won the first prize in the saddle horse class for horses over 15.2 hands. Mrs. John Gerken, driving B. F. S. Gregory's Princess and Duchesse, took the blue for the best pair of horses under 15.2 hands, to be driven by a lady to a lady's phaeton. A fine looking chestnut gelding owned by Samuel Russell, Jr., of Middletown, Conn., and trained by W. Carr, captured the event for saddle horses under 15.2 hands.

Sapolio, an old thoroughbred jumper, a veteran of the show ring, exhibited by George Chipchase, landed the blue from a field of thirteen over the sticks. The Chipchase entry was the only one to give a clean performance. The judge was Frederick Van Wyck.

British May Drop Soccer Games.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The prominence given by the English press on Monday to the poor showing the recruiting Sergeants are making, while several thousand able-bodied men watched the soccer games last Saturday, estimated between 300,000 and 400,000 people, has forced the authorities to take some action to stimulate the call to the colors. The English Football Association has called a meeting for Monday next, at which every club in the country will be represented, to further consider whether the games ought to be continued. The general opinion favors the schedule arranged for this season being carried through under certain conditions. Since the beginning of the season on Sept. 1 the Football Association has placed itself at the disposal of the War Office, but the "off day" in recruiting last Saturday gave rise to so much comment that the result of the meeting next week is anxiously awaited by thousands of lovers of this sport throughout the world.

COFFIN SHIFTED TO ARMY'S FIRST TEAM

Tentative Line-up Announced for Game with Navy at Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Except for a light signal drill which will take place tomorrow morning the Army team finished its work for the Navy contest today. The practice this afternoon was short but hard. There were four elevens working on the latest plays and the drill was held up frequently while the coaches worked on the individual positions. The big team as it lined up today in the signal drill was composed of Merrill and Neyland at the end positions, Butler and Weyand as tackles, O'Hare and Meacham, guards; McEwan, centre; Capt. Prichard, quarter back; Coffin, left half back, and Van Fleet, right half back, with Hodgson as full back.

There has been no announcement to that effect, but the watchers confidently predict that this line-up will be the one that will face the Navy at the kick-off on Franklin Field on Saturday.

Coffin's sudden shift from the first string to the 'Varsity back field is due to his splendid work in the Springfield game and in the workouts this week as well as to his punting ability. The first string men worked out today with both Harmon and Oliphant at quarter back. Benedict, Ford, and Oliphant were also used in the scrub back field. The situation behind the line is still unsettled, with the chances of starting against the middies favoring the players who were used there today.

Supporters of the Army team are careful not to underestimate the Navy's strength, and there is not the slightest tendency toward overconfidence in the Army camp. The Cadets have suffered considerably this season through injuries to star players and the "classroom slaughter" has stirred the squad during the last fortnight. The loss of Wynne, Engledinger, and Page on the line and Place, the latter a back field man, who learned football under Coach Juneau at the University of Wisconsin, necessitated the rearangement of the back field situation at least, for Place was being carefully groomed for the Navy contest with every prospect of reaching it in top form.

A noisy demonstration and rally in the stands today led by Cadets Eisenhower and McGuire was intended as a "dress rehearsal" of the battalion's repertoire of songs and cheers for the Navy contest. Leo Leary, Harvard end coach, followed the team today in its workout.

NAVY TEAM PICKED.

Selection of Bates and Failing by Coaches Causes Surprise.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 25.—Practicing again in secret, Navy's football squad got nearly two hours of hard drill and scrimmaging this afternoon. The practice was marked by many shifts during which all of the men likely to get into the Army game were given special attention.

After a meeting of the coaches, Head Coach Howard of the Navy tonight gave out the line-up that will face the Army at Philadelphia Saturday. The midshipmen will start the game in the following order:

Capt. Overesch and T. Harrison, ends; McCoach and Deroode or Ward, tackles; Mills and Jones, guards; Perry, centre; Mitchell, quarter back; Blodgett and Failing, half backs, and Bates, full back.

Considerable surprise was caused over the selection of Bates in place of H. Harrison, a veteran of two years at full back. The selection of Mitchell instead of Miles for the pivotal position probably is due to the fact that Miles still suffers from injuries to his leg, received in the Colby game two weeks ago. Another surprise was the selection of Failing, rather than Craig or Culbert, for right half back. Failing, like Blodgett, his running mate, is big and husky, but not as fast as either of the other two.

Good Bouts at Fairmont A. C.

An excellent card of bouts and one that should attract considerable attention has been arranged for the holiday matinee show of the Fairmont Athletic Club in the Bronx this afternoon. Big and little men will be seen in the two ten-round contests which feature the programme, and, as the contestants in each bout are considered among the topnotchers in their respective classes, some interesting boxing should result. In the main ten-round bout Tom Gibbons of St. Paul, brother of the famous Mike Gibbons, will oppose Billy Glover of Boston, who has gained an enviable reputation as a clever boxer with an effective punch in either hand. In the other bout Phil Bloom, the Brooklyn lightweight, and Benny Leonard of the east side will be the participants. The usual preliminary bouts will precede these two ten-round affairs, and the show is scheduled to start at 2:30 P. M.

Heavyweights at Pioneer Club.

The two ten-round bouts which have been arranged by the Pioneer Sporting Club for the feature of its inaugural show tomorrow night promise to provide the fans with some interesting action. Heavyweights have been matched for the two stellar attractions. Tom Kennedy of the west side, one of the original White Hopes, will box Tony Ross, and Sailor Fred Fritts will oppose Terry Kellar, the San Francisco heavyweight. Kennedy is in strict training for his bout. The injury to his hand, which he suffered recently and which compelled him to cancel several bouts, has entirely healed, and he is working faithfully to get himself into his best physical condition. The other bout should also be a hammer and tong affair.

Matinee Bouts at Broadway.

The Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn will stage three star ten-round bouts this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The bout between Soldier Bartfield, welterweight champion of the United States Army, and Jack Britton, the Chicago boxer, is the feature of the card. Eddie Wallace, the poultry Ghetto featherweight, will meet Frankie Flering, the Canadian champion, in the semi-windup. Marty Allen of East New York and Young Driscoll of Brooklyn will open the show.

Nelson Fouls Smith in Bout.

Frankie Nelson fouled Cy Smith in the second round of their scheduled ten-round bout, at Brown's Gymnasium last night. Nelson hit Smith low and the referee stopped the bout. Joe Kane had a shade on Billie McLean in the ir six-round go.

Dinner of Winter Golf League.

It is expected that a large gathering of the local members of the Winter Golf League of Advertising Interests will attend the dinner which is to be given at the Republican Club tomorrow evening. Among the different topics which will be discussed at the dinner will be the arrangements for the annual tournament which is to be held at Pinehurst during the week of Jan. 11, 1915. Judging from the large number of acceptances which have already been received from the members of the association from the different sections of the country, it is predicted that it will be the best-attended tournament ever given by the association. The dinner will be a sort of a jollification reunion, and will be attended by the prominent members of the association who reside in this section of the country.

GOLF LINKS IN RITZ-CARLTON

Bunkers, Pits, and Greens Planned, with Harry Vardon in Charge.

Harry Vardon, who won the open championship of Great Britain for the sixth time last June, will be located here this Winter to give instruction at a school to be established along elaborate lines at the Ritz-Carlton, unless all reports are in error.

A person in touch with the situation said last night that the idea was to devote a whole floor of the hotel to an indoor course of six holes equipped as nearly as possible like outdoor links, except, of course, in distance and driving facilities. Natural sand bunkers and pits and grass putting greens are planned.

Although Vardon's acceptance of the offer to locate here for the Winter has not been received as yet, it is said that the terms were so flattering that even this one of the "great triumvirate" of British professionals could not refuse. In fact, Vardon was asked to name his own price.

Several American "pros" have been mentioned as possible assistants to Vardon, among them being Elmer W. Loving of Arcola, to whom will be assigned approaching and putting; Harry Vinall of Tuxedo, James Maiden of Nassau, and Otto Hackbarth of Chicago. It is believed that many wamen and children will take advantage of the opportunity afforded by this projected school to obtain unusually good instruction in the royal and ancient game. Should Vardon come over, it will be his fourth visit to this country.

TRAINER M'LOUGHLIN HERE.

American Coach of Danish Athletes Loses Position Through War.

Only a few hours after Al Copland had returned from Austria, "Jim" McLoughlin, the Irish-American A. C. athletic official, who last summer was engaged to prepare Denmark's athletes for the next Olympic Games, also came back home. McLoughlin reached here on Tuesday aboard the Helligoleva from Copenhagen. The American trainer's contract was severed when it became apparent to the Danish authorities that it would be almost an impossibility for Germany to hold the 1916 Olympics in Berlin.

With the return of McLoughlin, only one American coach now remains in Europe, whereas a few months ago there were four, Copland, in Austria; McLoughlin, in Denmark; R. C. Kraenzlein, in Germany, and Ernie Hjertberg, in Sweden. The latter is the only one of the quartet retaining his position.

Although they were never much of a figure in international track and field competition, McLoughlin yesterday said he found some good athletic material among the Danes. Walkers especially he found of a calibre to contest with the best in Olympic sports. One lad, Guinnar Rasmussen, was capable of doing 47 minutes 26 1-5 second for 10,000 metres, a performance worthy of consideration when it is known that it was made on a track heavy and slippery from rain. Rasmussen's best time was recorded in a Danish national championship race, in which he beat the title holder, W. Guiche, in convincing fashion. The latter is considered by McLoughlin the equal of any walker in the United States, and he compared Rasmussen favorably with Eddie Renz, the best of the amateur walkers in this country.

Among the other good men McLoughlin discovered, in his short stay in Denmark, are Carl Broddi, with a record of 133 feet for the discus throw; Ernest Hesuer, a high jumper, whose best performance was 6 feet ½inch; H. J. Erber, good for 22 feet or better in the broad jump; Mike Hanson, timed in 11 1-5 seconds for 100 metres; Olaf Madsin, 1,500 metres, in 4 minutes 12 seconds; Konerup Bang, who finished second in the last English championships in the javelin event, with a throw of 173 feet; and Svend Langaer, whose best mark at the standing high jump is 5 feet 1¼ inches. Of this collection of talent, Bang is the best, for he can hurl the javelin 175 feet. There is no athlete in the United States capable of such a performance.

Smith Wins Van Amringe Cup.

J. G. Smith, a senior at Columbia, and Captain of the Columbia harriers, won the final cross-country run for the Van Amringe Cup yesterday afternoon over a six-mile course on Riverside Drive. He ran from scratch and carried off the laurels in the good time of 30 minutes 10 seconds. W. H. Diekman, 1916, ran a close second to Smith, and made a desperate sprint in the finish on the South Field track to catch him, but crossed the tape 15 seconds behind. By this victory Smith won the cup, which he holds for one year. He won two out of the four runs for the trophy and finished the series with 18 points. W. F. Glimm, 1915, and Diekman tied for second place, with 18 points, and W. V. Meyers, 1917, was fourth, with 20 points. The order of finish: L. G. Smith, 1915, (scratch,) 30:10; W. H. Diekman, 1916, (2 minutes 30 seconds,) 30:25; J. P. Knox, 1917, (1 minute 30 seconds,) 31:00; W. F. Glimm, 1915, (2 minutes 30 seconds,) 33:40; W. V. Meyers, 1917, (2 minutes,) 33:59.

Yale Men in A. A. U. Run.

Frederick W. Rubien, Chairman of the A. A. U. Championship Committee, yesterday received word from E. J. Stackpole, Jr., manager of the Yale University track team, that while it would be impossible for Yale to enter her cross-country team in the junior and senior national cross-country championships on Dec. 5 and 12 respectively, at Van Cortlandt Park, owing to the fact that the cross-country season closes at Yale after the intercollegiate cross-country championship, several individual members of the team would enter.

Winners with the Cue.

The final game of the amateur straight rail billiard tournament at the Morningside Billiard Academy, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue, was decided last night, M. Abrams defeating C. P. Williard by the score of 75 to 37, in forty-two innings.

M. Henry defeated George M. Salisbury in the final block of their three nights' three-cushion carrom billiard match at the Washington Heights Billiard Academy, 181st Street and Broadway, by the score of 50 to 40. This victory gives Henry premier honors of the match, his aggregate score being 150 points, while Salisbury's total was 138 points.

Two matches were played in the second round of the English billiard tournament at Doyle's Academy last night. In the first match J. Knight defeated W. Monahan, 250 to 219. Knight's high break was 16 and Monahan's was 23. In the second match A. Taylor defeated M. J. Milligan, 250 to 181, with Taylor's high run 23 and Milligan's 13. Ninety-nine innings were played before Taylor had made his 250 points.

In the pocket billiard tournament Leo Marsh (25) defeated George Pakulski (10) by a score of 75 to 69.

A rally near the end of the game gave H. H. Smith a victory over Frank W. Boyd last night in the amateur Class C 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at Keeney's Billiard Academy in Brooklyn, the final score being 200 to 188. Boyd maintained a comfortable lead from the start of the contest to the forty-seventh inning, when Smith, having 48 points to tally before completing his string, made two runs of 21 points each, and scored the necessary 3 points in the fiftieth inning.

MARSANS WANTS TO SIGN WITH GIANTS

But Cuban Outfielder and Deserter Is Practically Blacklisted.

Armando Marsans, the Cuban outfielder, who jumped from the Cincinnati Reds to the St. Louis "Feds" and got $7,000 for the leap, has informed his friends here that he has an ambition to return to the ranks of organized ball and play with the Giants. And the Giants will be glad to get him if the deal can be satisfactorily arranged. Manager McGraw has admired the speedy Cuban for the last two seasons and believes that he could be developed into the fastest base runner in the game.

Marsans has been an unruly person to manage and gave Charley Herzog considerable trouble last year in Cincinnati. The Cuban admits that he would be glad to play with New York, but first the club must go to all the trouble of fixing up his many troubles. In the first place, Marsans would want the Giants to pay back the $7,000 obligation to the "Feds." He would also demand a $2,000 bonus for signing. The injunction which was obtained by the Cincinnati club restraining Marsans from playing with the "Feds" is still pending in the courts.

Marsans is playing ball in Havana under an assumed name. The sensational first baseman on the Havana team named Mendiondo is no other than Armando Marsans. Although an outfielder, Marsans is playing a great game at the first bag and is burning up the base paths with his running. The Havana team is just now playing a series of games with the Birmingham club of the Southern Association, although the National Commission frowns on any players of organized ball playing against Federal League players. This violation of the rule may cause the Birmingham barons some trouble.

Palmero, the Giants' young Cuban pitcher, is also playing on this same team and he is likely to receive a rebuke for associating with the contract jumper. Palmero, by the way, has pitched four games and has won them all. Also on the team is Romanach, the Cuban shortstop, who was signed by Brooklyn and refused to report. Gonzales, the Cuban catcher, who was with the Braves for a time last year and also with Long Branch, is manager of the Havana club.

It would require a lot of very diplomatic engineering to land Marsans back into organized ball, for, by his actions in Cincinnati, he has aroused the enmity of the officials of organized baseball more than any other player with the exception of Hal Chase. Ban Johnson has stated that neither Marsans nor Chase would be received back into the ranks under any circumstances. Even though Manager McGraw does want to land Marsans, it is not likely that he will consider the unreasonable conditions under which Marsans wants to join the New York club.

FEDERALS BAG ANOTHER.

Pitcher Hagerman Deserts Cleveland for Chicago "Outlaws."

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Rip Hagerman, a pitcher of the Cleveland American League ball club, today signed a three-year contract with the Chicago Federal League Club, according to an announcement by Charles Weeghman, President of the club. The terms were not made public.

Hagerman had been "in bad" with the Cleveland Club, he said, since Manager Birmingham was told that Federal League scouts had been seen talking with Hagerman. "Birmingham asked me to sign a two-year contract," said Hagerman, "and I refused. If I'd gone back to Cleveland, I'd soon have been sent to Portland." Hagerman formerly pitched for Portland, Oregon, and at one time for the Chicago Nationals.

"Tilly" Shafer Won't Join Feds.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—The attempt of the Federal League to lure "Tilly" Shafer, former Giant, back into baseball has failed. President Gilmore of the Federals received a telegram today from George Stovall at Los Angeles, quoting Shafer as being "done with baseball."

Braves to Train at Macon.

MACON, Ga., Nov. 25.—George Stallings, manager of the Boston Nationals, world's champions, announced here today that Macon had been chosen as the 1915 training camp for his team. He said the players would report the latter part of February.

INCREASE WORLD'S SERIES.

Nine Games to Make Up the Schedule Hereafter, Is Chicago Report.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 25.—Nine games instead of seven will be played when the American and National League pennant winners clash next October in the World's Series competition. Prices will be reduced, and the contesting athletes will share in the receipts of the first five games instead of four, as has been the custom in the past series. The official announcement of this change will be made at the annual meeting of the National Commission in Cincinnati early in January.

President B. B. Johnson of the American League said tonight he had received a communication from Garry Herrmann, Chairman of the National Commission, asserting that the magnates of the parent organization were agreed that at least two games should be added to the series.

"One or two National League club owners seemed inclined to lengthen the schedule to eleven games," said President Johnson tonight, "but nine should suffice. Thousands of baseball followers annually are denied admission to the series under the seven-game arrangement because in recent years the championship problem has been decided well within the limit."

CINCINNATI, Nov. 25.—Chairman August Herrmann of the National Baseball Commission denied emphatically here tonight that he had ever written to President Ban Johnson of the American League advocating that the number of games in the world's series be changed from seven to nine and the prices reduced.

"I certainly wrote no such letter," said Herrmann. "As far as I know the matter has not ever been considered by the National League club owners. Newspaper talk on the subject is the only information I have, and even that is meagre."

When asked if he personally advocated such a plan he said:

"I have never given the matter enough thought to answer that question."

NOT INDEBTED TO EBBETS.

Herrmann Refuses to Give Up $15,000 Part of Deal for Tinker.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 25.—Charles H. Ebbets, Sr., President of the Brooklyn National League team, who has been trying for a year to gain possession of $15,000 which he says is due from the Cincinnati Reds on account of the Joe Tinker deal, will have to keep on demanding the money—at least, so said Garry Herrmann, President of the Reds, today.

"Once more," said Herrmann, "Charlie Ebbets doesn't get any $15,000 off the Cincinnati Baseball Club. In the first place, he isn't entitled to it, and in the second place he did not lose $15,000. The Cincinnati club reinvested $12,500 of his money in Yingling and Moran, and all we have left of his cash is $2,500. All these deals ran coincidentally. If Mr. Ebbets is entitled to the return of his $15,000, then we are entitled to the return of our $12,500, we to hand him back Yingling and Moran, if the latter could be retaken from Boston. Take the deal where we handed to New York Bescher for Herzog and Hartley, and Hartley jumped, for an example. Have we thought of demanding Bescher back because Hartley was never delivered?"

TWO BIG AUTO RACES.

Vanderbilt Cup and Grand Prix to be be Run Feb. 22 and 27.

Entry blanks have been issued for the Vanderbilt Cup Race and International Grand Prix Race to be held in February at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco, Cal. The Vanderbilt Cup event is for the famous trophy donated by William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., as well as $8,000 in gold for the first five drivers to finish. It will be held on Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, 1915. On Saturday, Feb. 27, the Grand Prix will take place, the prize for this being the Gold Challenge Cup valued at $5,000 and donated by the Automobile Club of America, together with $8,000 in gold for the first five placed drivers.

The Vanderbilt Cup will be approximately 300 miles and is a Class E nonstock event, open to any motor car of 600 cubic inches piston displacement or less, minimum weight 1,600 pounds. The circuit, which is inside the exposition grounds, is approximately four miles, and is to be covered seventy-five times by the cars.

The International Grand Prix is to be 400 miles in length, or 100 laps of the course, and is a free-for-all event.

There is a clause in the Grand Prix entry blank stating that if the number of cars entered is too great considering the length of the course, the Contest Committee of the Automobile Club of America may run an elimination contest.

Plans are being perfected to fence off and control the course in such a manner that it will be impossible for any spectator to cross the track while the contests are on. Entries for both races close Feb. 10.

HIGHER PRICES FOR HORSES AT GARDEN

General French and Poinsetta Topnotchers in Old Glory Sale.

Prices were decidely brisker yesterday at the Old Glory sale in Madison Square Garden. The high-water mark was reached for the day, when the two-year-old colt, General French, was brought into the ring. This handsome youngster with a mark of 2:10¾, and champion two-year-old stallion of 1914 was the centre of some spirited bidding. Starting at $200 Auctioneer Bain gradually advanced him to $1,000 and then to $2,000 and he was finally sold to the representative of the Brook Farm of Chester, N. Y., for $2,100. The same establishment paid $2,000 for the mare Poinsetta, by Barongale and 1,000 for Native Judge, who was sired by Justice Brook.

The crowd was much larger than on the opening day and the average prices higher. A number of prominent breeders and owners who did not put in an appearance on Tuesday were on hand yesterday. Among them were: W. B. Dickerman, Harry K. Devereux, President of the Grand Circuit; Dr. Charles Tanner, W. P. Harvey, George Tiplings, J. D. Callary, President of the Pittsburgh Driving Club; Ex-Gov. Horace White and his brother Ernest from Syracuse, J. H. Moore of Washington, Pa., Clem Beachey, Lexington, John R. Townsend, Pierre Lorillard, Jr., Rennselaer Weston, Goshen, N. Y., George D. Conner, Secretary, Detroit Grand Circuit meeting.

Some of the prominent local drivers were: Dr. Ferster, H. B. Clarke, Andrew Crawford, Joseph P. Gibbons, I. V. Hunt, Sol. B. Wolf, Harry S. Alward, Ralph Kelsey, Matt. Dwyer, George H. Huber, J. H. Lawrence, Leo and Max Oettinger. The best prices of the auction follow:

Rochester's Athletic Field.

Alumni of the University of Rochester have taken steps to put the college "on the map of the athletic world" by pledging themselves to sustain an athletic field and college athletic teams. Dr. Rhees, the head of the university, approves the plans of the alumni, as he is heartily in favor of competitive athletics in the university and an advocate of physical training in conjunction with mental training at the institution. He has found a field within fifteen minutes' walk and three minutes' car ride of the university buildings, which can be purchased at a reasonable price, and can be converted into a fine athletic field with at least two football gridirons, two baseball fields, a half-mile running track, ample room for field sports of various kinds, and room for at least a dozen tennis courts, with a commanding site for a field house to contain a plunge, ample bathing facilities and dressing rooms, lockers, and a small gymnasium to supplement the institution's present gymnasium. At the next meeting of the Trustees a proposition will be submitted to purchase the field, and appropriations of $30,000 for purchase of the land and $20,000 for its equipment will be recommended, with the prospect of favorable action on both propositions. Alumni residents in and about Rochester have pledged themselves to raise money for the upkeep of the field and to guarantee the undergraduates against loss in the maintenance of college teams at the various sporting activities in which they will participate as a college.

THE comfort of Ivory Garters is a new sensation—and a pleasant one. It's plain that garters with metal clasps that rust, heavy pads, and garters that bind the leg can't be comfortable—but you don't realize it—custom has made you unconscious of it. But buy a pair of Ivory Garters—feel how light and cool they are—what untold comfort they give—how much more leg-freedom they allow, and see how much longer they wear—then you'll know what you are missing now.

PRINCETON STARTS HOCKEY.

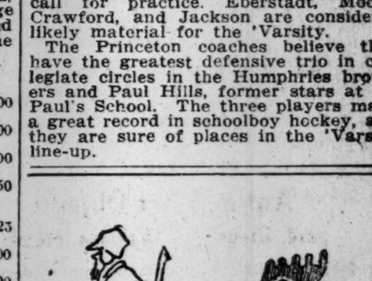
Big Squad Has Its First Workout in St. Nicholas Rink.

Princeton's hockey squad had its first work out on the ice at the St. Nicholas Rink last night. Another practice is scheduled for this morning. The squad was so big that a cut will likely be made in it this week. Most of last year's star team has been graduated, but Manager Church said last night that the Tigers would be represented by a strong seven this year.

Capt. Peacock is the only regular of last year who is on the squad, but Cowan, Haskell, and several other substitutes of last year answered the first call for practice. Eberstadt, Moore, Crawford, and Jackson are considered likely material for the 'Varsity.

The Princeton coaches believe they have the greatest defensive trio in collegiate circles in the Humphries brothers and Paul Hills, former stars at St. Paul's School. The three players made a great record in schoolboy hockey, and they are sure of places in the 'Varsity line-up.



At this season few of us escape the disposition to make a mental inventory of the blessings for which we should be duly thankful.

Some of our own special causes for gratitude are:

1. The ability to maintain a normal working force at full wages through a period of general depression in the "Needle trades."

2. The opportunity to make a further contribution to the common welfare of the City through the erection of our new building at 5th Avenue and 41st Street, thus turning a large sum into the stream of industrial compensation.

3. That in the progress of that large building operation, now approaching completion, not a life has been lost nor a serious accident involving permanent disability.

4. That we are the fortunate possessors of a loyal and competent force of employes devoted to the service of the house and its patrons.

There are many more, but these will do.

Our greetings to the "men behind the clothes" and to the men and boys who wear the clothes.

PRESIDENT'S SHIPPING POLICY.

Washington dispatches say that during his recent leisure the President has given continuous attention to his shipping bill, which Congress shelved, and that he is determined to make it a leading issue in his forthcoming message. The announcement comes just at the time that the European combatants have adopted, each for itself, such variations of the Declaration of London as seem good to them respectively. Therefore there is no binding law regarding the status of ships and cargoes upon the high seas, under conditions of war, and the Government has announced this week that it would look to the general principles of international law for the protection of shipping. The trouble about that is that each nation administers international law in its own courts. England adjudicates its own captures, and so would Germany if it should make any. If there were an international prize court a ship belonging to the United States might have some sort of chance of treatment according to the United States view of international law. At least the United States argument would be heard. But the rules of the game now are subject to daily alteration. The contraband list is a different thing from what it was on the declaration of war, and it will be still different a few weeks hence. Yesterday Germany declared wood contraband. Can the President wish that a Government ship carrying lumber should be subject to the rules of a German court? That is only a timely example of innumerable cases in which it would not be desirable that the Government should have a direct interest in the litigation. A judgment against the ship would be a judgment against the Government. No lover of peace could wish that.

The President persists with his idea, although the practical developments since the proposal was made have weakened it. There is more trouble about cargoes than about ships. Cargoes will not move unless bankers are satisfied with the insurance. A special insurance law was passed, but it does not meet the case, since it covers only cargoes in American vessels. It would seem better to amend the law to cover American cargoes in any neutral vessel, of which there are many, rather than to provide a Government marine to fit the defective insurance law. In like manner British insurance is defective in that it will not insure against British capture, the only sort of capture at all likely. As a provision against an emergency the President's proposal is futile. It is idle to talk of building ships in hope of getting them done before the war is over, and then having them on our hands in an overbuilt market. It is equally hopeless to buy a marine for the Government line, because there are only belligerent ships to be bought, and the law regarding such transfers gives no safety. British courts have annulled transfers in anticipation of this war, and would still less regard as valid transfers actually made during war. There was reported yesterday the case of a vessel flying the United States flag, which had been a German vessel, and which was charged with violation of neutrality by transshipping coal and provisions to German cruisers. It is easy to say that no Government ship would violate neutrality, and it might observe what our Government thought to be neutrality. But there would be no presumption in favor of the Government ships if subject to foreign law.

Least convincing of all is this argument:

> The President believes the Government should take the opportunity offered by the European war to pioneer new trade routes for American ships. He feels certain there are numerous lanes of traffic that would not pay at first, but could be developed into valuable additions to American commerce. Private concerns, he feels, will be slow to engage in ventures along routes that will not yield immediate returns. The Government could and should develop those routes, the President thinks, and surrender them later to private companies if that should be deemed advisable.

There is nothing to support the idea that under equality of conditions the Government could make a profit where private capital would not venture. If there is a fair chance of profit private capital will find it out sooner and more surely than the Government. The only need for the proposal is the fact that the Government has passed laws which make private shipping unprofitable. Now the Government is to assume the task at a certain loss rather than repeal the bad laws. The only result would be that the Government would run the lines at a greater loss than private management, and the deficit would be concealed and transferred to the taxpayers. Cheap freights cannot be desired on such terms by anybody except those whose goods are carried. For every ton carried by a Government ship it is sure that many tons would lack carriage through the discouragement of American and neutral shipping by Government competition on such unequal terms. It is odd that such a proposal of a subsidy in disguise should come from the leader of a party immemorially opposed to a subsidy. Fortunately the President alone cannot pass his bill.

THANKSGIVING.

The recurrence of the old New England festival of Thanksgiving, long since made national, finds the people of the United States in a mood to give thanks to the Power that guides them with a new sense of their blessings. If we have not all we would like to have to be thankful for, all that we felt only a few months ago that we were justified in expecting, we have so much more than many of our contemporaries, and what we have is so substantial, that we must feel the spirit of the festival as strongly and fervently as the colonists of Massachusetts Bay. They dwelt always in the midst of alarms, their existence was full of vicissitudes, but they were gratefully aware of their freedom from many perils of body and soul, of the promise of development held out to them, of their sure escape from the evils that beset them in the Old World. So we, in our turn, may be sincerely grateful, and in a larger sense, for what we have and what we have escaped.

We have escaped the danger of war on our own continent and we have made new friendships with our neighbors which time and opportunity will strengthen and make mutually profitable. We only indirectly share in the terrible affliction that now burdens Europe. The loss it inflicts upon us is not small, but in comparison with that our brothers of France, Belgium, Germany, England, Austria, and other States must bear it is insignificant. We have had a year of great crops, enabling us to keep ourselves in comfort and help to feed the hungry beyond our shores.

We must be grateful that we are Americans and that the outlook for wholesome development in this country was never brighter; because it has been vouchsafed us to realize that we are the forerunners of a new and broader and nobler civilization in which men will not settle their differences of opinion by taking each other's lives. We have met and solved some of the problems which most vexed us and we feel renewed strength to take up, with clearer vision, the others which still vex us. In many years the people of this country have had no Thanksgiving Day in which their thanks for deliverance from evil and the promise of blessings to come could be so heartily expressed.

THE CASE OF HENRY SIEGEL.

It is very probable that in suspending until next June the sentence of ten months' imprisonment which he had pronounced upon HENRY SIEGEL, Justice CLARK felt that if in the interval granted the convicted man were able to restore to the depositors in his "bank" any considerable part of the money they lost, the larger ends of justice would be served better than by the immediate commitment of SIEGEL to jail. The motive is proper and commendable. That, however, in nowise removes the general impression that SIEGEL's punishment is very much too light for his offenses. The result of the trial at Geneseo was in this respect unfortunate, for it naturally tends to confirm the belief so often expressed that the courts have one sort of justice for a rich man, another sort for a poor man.

The Siegel case as disposed of becomes one of that class, very numerous in the annals of jurisprudence, which quite baffle the lay understanding. SIEGEL had been a very successful merchant. He had made a reputation, he had won high standing in the mercantile calling, his counsel declared that he "was looked on as the fore-"most department store man in the "world." It follows that he must have enjoyed the entire confidence of those who had dealings with him. That confidence HENRY SIEGEL and his partner abused. They received from their employés and customers, from the public generally, deposits for their so-called bank, and this money, according to their counsel's statement, they used as their own. They treated the deposits in the bank as loans to themselves, made without security, and they continued to use the money in the business of their stores at a time when immense losses had accrued and insolvency was in plain view. That is the offense which bulks largest in the popular mind, and for that, of course, the fine of $1,000 and a sentence of ten months in jail, afterward suspended by the court, is an altogether inadequate punishment.

But HENRY SIEGEL was not tried for misappropriating the money of the depositors who trusted him with their savings. The charge upon which he was tried and convicted was that of larceny in securing from a bank where he had made a loan by false representations the sum of $684.05. It is alleged that as the State had no supervisory powers over his banking operations it would have been difficult to bring him to bar for the immensely greater offense of making away with more than $2,000,000 of the money of his depositors. Under the new law that kind of banking is no longer possible in this State. It ought never to have been possible. There is something like a travesty of justice in sending SIEGEL to trial upon the check, leaving the unfortunate depositors quite without redress.

Again, the public saw no good reason why the case should have been transferred to Livingston County. Innumerable offenders have been tried in communities where feeling ran strongly against them. SIEGEL might have had a fair trial in the County of New York. The case as tried was one abounding in financial complications and it must have been more difficult to bring it to the clear comprehension of a jury in Geneseo than of one in New York.

Taking all the circumstances into consideration, therefore, it can readily be understood why the almost universal comment is to the effect that SIEGEL got off much too easily, that justice has been defeated. The feeling of disappointment will be a good deal modified if SIEGEL is able to use the interval of freedom granted to him by the court in getting together funds to reimburse in some measure the large number of depositors who lost their money through misplaced confidence in him.

THE BAFF MURDER.

The murder of BARNET BAFF, the poultry dealer, has shocked this community even more than the murder of ROSENTHAL, the gambler, a crime to which, in the police view, it bears a strong resemblance, with this difference, that, while ROSENTHAL was of the very scum of society, BAFF, so far as is known, was an upright and law-abiding man, who had conducted his business honorably and done no more than his duty in incurring the avowed enmity of some of his rivals in trade. If those rivals are not implicated in this cowardly assassination, except in the inevitable suspicions of BAFF's acquaintances, they will do well to publish the proofs of their innocence as quickly as possible. This is not a case in which the excellent rule that every man should be considered innocent until he has been proved guilty is likely to have much weight in the public mind.

The indications that here is another gunmen murder, a killing in a public thoroughfare by hired assassins, are very strong. The police have taken up the matter with energy and there is scarcely a doubt that they will soon run the actual murderers to earth. There are, after all, not so many thugs in this community that our guardians of the peace cannot count them all, with a little effort, and the loyalty of thugs to thugs is always dubious. But it is very doubtful if BAFF had ever done anything to incur the enmity of men of the gunmen type, while he had been threatened and assaulted since he gave evidence upon which some members of the so-called Poultry Trust were sent to jail. There is scarcely a doubt that he has been killed for an act of good citizenship. A thorough investigation of the crime will be demanded. The arrest and conviction of hired assassins will not be sufficient to allay the public indignation and alarm.

That all or nearly all the members of the Poultry Men's Union are responsible for the instigation of this crime is incredible. Resort to murder because of trade enmities is very rare in this country. But a man has been killed in circumstances which throw suspicion upon a body of marketmen, and it will be to the advantage of that body to render all help to the authorities in bringing the guilty persons to justice.

PUBLIC HEALTH.

The condition of the public health in a large city somewhat resembles the condition of the public streets, since it is always being torn up, that is, to make room for improvements. The question of vaccination bears some resemblance to Times Square at Seventh Avenue and Forty-third Street, but the day is coming when we shall find the new subway extremely convenient, and give thanks for the extermination of the pest of typhoid fever. Just now, fallacies in disinfection are making a dangerous hollow in the public road. Disinfectants now in use are proved to be old-fashioned and ineffective. Bichloride of mercury not only kills almost as many as it saves, but it gets on badly with soap, serum, and albuminous matter. Carbolic acid does very little work, formaldehyde is debated, sulphur is superficial. Thousands of lives are lost and thousands of dollars are uselessly spent. But a new bill is to be introduced at the next session of the New York Legislature to regulate the manufacture and sale of all disinfectants, and the standardized product should be at least the best obtainable.

When we learn what disinfectants do disinfect it would be pleasant to use some of them in the Subway stations. These stations are kept neat by sweeping with a long-handled brush that sends clouds of fine dust into the nostrils of the waiting passenger. The only hope for the latter is that so many germs as must be contained in the dust clouds will have all they can do to destroy each other without destroying him. Even if we cannot get effective disinfectants for this purpose, wouldn't tea-leaves or wet paper or some other old housewives' remedy be better than nothing?

Afternoon tea has gained such a vogue here that used tea leaves would be comparatively inexpensive and the saving of them would encourage thrift.

In all seriousness we implore the health officials of the city to offer suggestions. If our theatres are disinfected, why not the theatre of our daily toil?

In commenting upon the refusal of the writ of error to transfer the case of LEO FRANK of Atlanta to the Supreme Court, Gov. SLATON of Georgia said that in case he was asked to grant a respite until the Prison Commission could hear the case and make its recommendations, his procedure would be "to review all the evidence "and examine the arguments and "then reach my conclusions." That is what the case of FRANK demands and in the interests of justice insistently demands. There have been many appearances in court, but the evidence has never been examined and reviewed since the trial which resulted in conviction, and there are the most convincing reasons to believe that that was not a fair trial.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Restrictions Cannot Be Perpetual.

Experience teaches that when conditions change, everything no longer in adjustment to them sooner or later is either readjusted or is abolished, and this is no less true of the so-called "restrictions" on the uses to which real estate may be put than of other agreements and undertakings forever to keep things as they are at any given time. Wherever "business" has seen profit in going, there it has always gone at last, in spite of all the opposition that could be made, and it is certain, too, that no effort by one generation to prevent its successors from building where they choose the sort of houses they want to live in can be permanently successful.

So there can be practically no doubt as to the ultimate outcome of the demand made by the owner of the property at the corner of Madison Avenue and Seventy-second Street for judicial permission to violate the clause in his deed forbidding the erection on it of a modern apartment house. When this limitation was imposed, fifty years ago, it was willingly accepted, just as are like restrictions in many suburban towns. It pleased such residents of the neighborhood as purposed to remain there and enabled those desiring to go away to get better prices for their land. It still pleases some of the present owners, and they are endeavoring to enforce it upon the dissatisfied fraction.

The "case" of the former can be presented in a way to give it seeming strength, since they are standing by a contract voluntarily entered into. The general tendency, however, of the courts, especially in this country, is to loosen the grasp of "dead hands" whenever it becomes seriously irksome to the living, and although this, as in the present instance, may inflict what looks like real hardship and even injustice on individuals, the larger considerations of public policy always prevail at last over the old covenants.

Such controversies are often bitter and expensive, and it might be well if restrictive clauses of the sort mentioned, instead of being phrased with a view to an impossible perpetuity, were conditioned, not on the will of any one owner, or of a minority of owners, but on that of a majority of them in the area covered. That is about what these agreements come to in practice, and it is wise to recognize facts.

They Seem to Like Their Chains.

When the FORD plan of sharing profits with the employés of its inventor was first announced its numerous critics, besides saying much about the disturbance of industrial conditions and relations that would follow the payment of wages higher than those fixed by the sacred law of supply and demand, made another objection that at the time seemed highly plausible. They declared that free-born American workingmen would not long submit to the sort of dictation and control of their conduct and expenditures which this rash innovator purposed to exercise.

The rules laid down as to the uses to be made under threat of discharge of the abnormally large wages paid might be wise and their effects beneficial, both morally and economically, but Americans, it was confidently assumed, would not tolerate such interference with their private, out-of-the-shop affairs and doings, and would prefer less money, with freedom to waste or save it as they pleased.

These prophecies of revolt against paternalism and dictation, like those of industrial confusion, seem to have been based on mistaken beliefs. The pressure of "labor" has been, not to escape from the rules, but to come in under them, and so highly is that privilege esteemed that many workers, for one or another reason ineligible or disqualified for inclusion in the favored but coerced band, have exhausted all their ingenuity in devising tricks for bringing themselves beneath the tyranny they were expected to hate.

Meanwhile home buying and the making of deposits in savings banks, as well as the establishment or maintenance of family life—all ranking high in the stern FORD category of compulsory virtues—have been going on at an amazing rate, and if any of the free-born have been restive, no articulate expression of their discontent has reached the public ear.

Another Sea Mystery.

Considering the heavy loss, or at best the serious disturbance of their business, which the American owners of the steamer Sacramento have suffered from the seizure of her cargo by the Germans, it is more than a little strange that they are not making more fuss about it.

Those highly desirable customers down in Valparaiso who were willing to pay $16 a ton for coal they could get from other purveyors for $8 will be cruelly disappointed by the arrival of the Sacramento with an empty hold, and their consequent irritation can hardly fail to have the effect of making them bestow their precious patronage elsewhere than on their so fortunate—should one say "discoverers" or "inventors"?

Yet no passionate protests to Chile against the violation of her neutrality by the rude Germans have been reported—no vehement appeals for redress and satisfaction have reached Washington. This quiet submission to the modern form of piracy is in mystifying contrast to the resentment which other American merchant adventurers showed when their copper shipments were diverted from the intended destination.

Grand Jurors Again in Trouble.

For a Grand Jury to be itself indicted for plagiarism—and apparently doomed to conviction of that high crime—is a novelty. That presentment against the Charities Commissioner, with its fierce arraignment of his administration for faults and failures for most of which he obviously was not responsible, excited not a little astonishment among those who had read in his own reports and recommendations full accounts of the same evils, but none of us outsiders had suspected the jurymen of borrowing their thunder without making any acknowledgment as to its source. It was assumed that they spoke with knowledge derived from personal observation, but it seems that they only copied a rather ancient document!

That they went so far astray, and exposed themselves to ridicule as well as denunciation, is not as surprising as it was. Such is the usual fate of plagiarists.

THE FRANK CASE.

Two Comments on the Great Issues at Stake in It.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with great interest your articles on the Frank case in Atlanta, and I commend you heartily on the stand you have taken in the matter.

It really seems absurd that in this twentieth century, when our courts are supposed to mete out justice, so much time should be wasted on technicalities which have no bearing on the case whatsoever, especially when human life is at stake.

I am of the opinion that race prejudice and the mob spirit that pervaded the courtroom when Frank was on trial for his life were greatly instrumental in convicting him. I cannot believe that the State of Georgia will allow a blot on its fair name by exacting the death penalty of an innocent man.

SIDNEY A. GOODMAN.

New York, Nov. 24, 1914.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The communication from Leo M. Frank printed in THE TIMES should receive the consideration of the general public, and especially of that portion of the public which is competent to see clearly and to estimate rightly the importance of the Frank case in its relations to our judicial system.

I have read somewhere, I believe, of a Judge who witnessed a murder from his chamber window and later condemned to death a man he knew to be innocent, not feeling called upon in his capacity as a Judge to bring forward the facts which he knew would clear the prisoner condemned on circumstantial evidence.

Is a wearer of the judicial ermine any less to be blamed who refuses to grant a new trial to a man on a mere technicality of law when every circumstance points to the innocence of the man who will suffer thereby?

THE NEAR-SIDE STOP

May Cause Much Inconvenience When Snow and Sleet Arrive.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The near-side stop of the street cars in this city will constitute a serious menace to the convenience, comfort, and health of the traveling public if the practice is continued after the snow falls and the streets are covered with ice or slush. Formerly the stop was made so that the passenger could board or alight from the car at the cleared cross-walk; under the present system the passenger must walk through the snow and slush for some fifty feet, or as an alternative climb over the piled up snow on the sides of the streets or avenues. The consequent wetting of the feet, skirts, and ankles, and the sloppy condition of the car floor will certainly increase the prevalence of the troubles common to our Winter season; also the narrowed streets or avenues between the snowbanks will increase twofold the danger of boarding or alighting from the cars, and may be a much greater cause of accident than the far-side stop is now supposed to be.

This matter should be taken up by the proper city authorities and the near-side ordinance rescinded before the people become exasperated beyond endurance, and I trust the press of the city will have sufficiently at heart the interests of those of our citizens who are dependent upon the street cars for their transit up, down, and across town to voice a general protest against the continuance of the said ordinance.

Organ Recitals Poorly Attended.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was most delightfully entertained last Sunday afternoon by attending an organ recital given by G. H. Federlein at the Society for Ethical Culture, Sixty-fourth Street and Central Park West. The auditorium is a beautiful one, the instrument a modern one, and the performer skilled in his profession.

There was but one detraction—the number of empty seats. Dr. Leipziger, who was present, remarked upon all these things, saying, and quite truly, that it was a pity that in these distressing times the public was not aware of the delightful hour's entertainment in store for it if it would but go and listen to this beautiful music.

These recitals are given under the joint auspices of the Board of Education and the society. Dr. Leipziger stated that his public lecture fund was low, but that with proper appreciation and attendance upon the part of the public the recitals would be continued, but that if not so appreciated they would have to be discontinued.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am reading with very great interest copy of the "White Papers" issued by THE NEW YORK TIMES. It is a curious thing that no English paper had the enterprise to think of or carry out such a useful work.

Commends the Pictorial War Extra.

From The Cortland Standard.

The most attractive pictorial publication which the present war has developed is THE NEW YORK TIMES MID-WEEK PICTORIAL WAR EXTRA printed by the new rotogravure process which THE TIMES is making famous in its Sunday edition. The eleventh number was issued Nov. 19, and in its twenty-four pages contains the finest double-page portrait of the Kaiser which has been issued, and is a top-notch sample of rotogravure work. For those interested in illustrations of scenes connected with the war nothing can take the place of this MID-WEEK WAR EXTRA. It is valuable not only for its present illustration of the news, but also as permanent history.

GIBBONS ON THANKSGIVING.

Recalls That Today Is Doubly Important to Roman Catholics.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 25.—Cardinal Gibbons today issued the following Thanksgiving Day message:

"The soul united to God in strong bonds of love makes every day one of thanksgiving to God for the numberless blessings that flow uninterruptedly from Him. But it is well to unite often in public thanksgiving that we may teach the minds of the forgetful children of the Father their duty of gratitude.

"We thank Him first for having given us natural life. How precious it is. How delightful it is to cross the boundary that separates nothingness from existence, to spring from darkness to light, to breathe the air of heaven, to contemplate the starry firmament above us, to commune with our fellow-beings. If we are indebted to Him for having made us men, how much more so that He has clothed and adorned man with the bright robes of Christianity. If we should be grateful for our bodily sight, which enables us to behold the works of creation, how much more thankful should we be for the light of Christian faith, by which we can contemplate the illimitable expanse of the spiritual world and the glory of the heavenly Jerusalem.

"We are indebted to God not only for our material and spiritual life, but for their preservation and continuance, for as only an Almighty hand could have created us, so none but an Almighty power can sustain us. We owe a debt of gratitude to the Giver of every perfect gift not only for the blessings we receive directly from Him, but for the favors bestowed on us by the hands of men. What are our parents, our friends, and benefactors but the agents of God's mercy, the stewards of His bounty, the instruments of His providence? Who was it but God that inspired them with benevolence toward us?

"President Washington issued his first proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe a day of general thanksgiving, Nov. 26, 1789, and it was by a happy coincidence that at the same time, month, and year that the Catholic Hierarchy was established in the United States, with the Right Rev. John Carroll, D. D., patriot, priest, personal friend, and ardent admirer of President Washington, its first Bishop.

"It is a source of great satisfaction to every devout Christian that the Chief Executive of the nation as well as the Governors of the States are accustomed once a year to invite the people of the United States to return thanks to God for His blessings to the country. The public act of our Chief Magistrate in proclaiming the supreme dominion and providence of our Creator cannot fail to exert a salutary influence on our citizens throughout the country, and to secure for us a continuance of Divine favors.

"JAMES, CARDINAL GIBBONS."

RED CROSS WORKERS.

Prof. Mather Asks If Rules Permit Them to be Armed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your illustrated section of Nov. 15 reproduces a photograph showing a squad of German Red Cross workers each of which is armed with a Mauser and bayonet. As a member of the Red Cross, may I ask:

If Red Cross field nurses and orderlies are supposed or permitted by the Red Cross rules to carry arms?

If soldiers retaining their ordinary arms are properly assigned to Red Cross service?

In all appearance the Germans in your picture are ordinary infantry, prepared to fight, but also ready to do incidental ambulance service with the wounded. If such a situation is tolerated by the Red Cross, it clearly sacrifices pretty much all claims to being a neutral organization. If its orderlies are contingently fighting men, or fighting men contingently its orderlies, the facts at least ought to be known.

This letter is intended to elicit information both as to the exact use of Red Cross aid by Germany and the policy of the organization as regards the bearing of arms by its field workers. Recently Germany has requested that Red Cross aid be sent her only in cash, and large sums have been sent. If the equivalent for such gifts is merely the attachment of a Red Cross armband to a certain number of infantrymen who serve the wounded when not fighting, or fight when they should be tending the wounded, it behooves Red Cross members to know such facts. We ought also to know which nations arm their ambulance corps and which do not.

SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE.

A Rare Opportunity to Wrest It from Europe.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Nov. 20 I read with pleasure a very important news article about the unique opportunity now presented of capturing the great South American trade almost monopolized at present by Germany, England, Italy, and other European countries.

The way to profit permanently by the situation now existing is to build a railway running north and south from Panama to Cape Horn. I believe that nearly all the existing South American railroads merely run from east to west, back and forth, or from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean.

A tremendous work to suggest, but nothing is too great for the American capitalists of today. THE TIMES has a great opportunity to commend such an enterprise to our men of nerve and means. Will you begin the good work?

American Inconsistency.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would like to second the letter sent to THE TIMES and printed last Sunday in regard to the country's firms that are shipping war supplies to Europe.

Where is the consistency of sending shiploads of clothing to the homeless in stricken cities if at the same time shiploads of shrapnel, horses, and other war supplies are sent to prolong the war and increase the number of homeless who need our clothing?

Where is the consistency in praying for peace and marching in peace parades, and then without a word of protest allowing war materials to be sent to Europe?

What good does American money do in Europe for the relief of human distress if with it go American war materials to increase that distress?

The City Coroner's Office.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The work of the city Coroner's office should be transferred to the municipal Department of Health, where it could be made a bureau of the present able administration of Commissioner Goldwater. The Department of Health has expert medical men under Civil Service rules to do this work without corruption or criticism, and there would be great gain not only in economy of administration through consolidation with existing offices, but a distinct advance in scientific effectiveness through co-operation with the research and diagnosis laboratories of the Department of Health.

THANKSGIVING—A JUBILATION.

Fling all the church doors open wide—
Let creed and creedless ones today
Come stand like brothers side by side
Beneath the wings of Peace to pray.
Ring, bells, ring!
And let your brazen tongues declare,
A peaceful nation is at prayer.

Come all the people and rejoice
For all your blessings in increase;
But loudest raise your grateful voice
For that chief blessing, blessèd Peace.

Sing to the Lord a thankful song
For the rich harvest of your field;
Rich harvests make a nation strong,
And Peace, the fairest fruit they yield.

For mine and engine, mill and mart,
That answer prayer for daily bread—
For schools and homes, for science, art,
That keep Peace brooding overhead,

For this wide country, all our own,
That God has given us of His grace,
With all the joys of every zone,
Let us be merciful in place.

O country fair—"thou Promised Land,"
To freedom pledged from sea to sea,
Forever keep thy outstretched hand,
And greet all peoples, "Peace to Thee."
Ring, bells, ring!
And let your brazen tongues declare,
A mighty nation is at prayer.

GLADSTONE AND NEUTRALITY OF BELGIUM.

Torn From Its Context, Sir Edward Grey's Quotation Was Not Illuminating—The Events of 1914 a Real Cause for War.

By GEORGE LOUIS BEER,
Historian, Winner of First Loubat Prize, 1913.

IN the course of his solemn speech of Aug. 8, 1914, in the House of Commons, Sir Edward Grey quoted some remarks made by Gladstone in 1870 on the extent of the obligation incurred by the signatory powers to the Quintuple Treaty of 1839 guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium. Shorn from their context as they were, these sentences are by no means illuminating, and it cannot be said that their citation in this form by Sir Edward Grey was a very felicitous one. During the paper polemics of the past months these detached words of Gladstone have been freely used by Germany's defenders and apologists to maintain that Great Britain of 1870 would not have deemed the events of 1914 a casus belli, and that its entrance into the present war on account of the violation of Belgium's neutrality was merely a pretext. During the course of this controversy Gladstone's attitude has in various ways been grossly misrepresented, Dr. von Mach of Harvard even stating in the columns of THE NEW YORK TIMES that Gladstone had declared the Treaty of 1839 "to be without force." But, apart from such patent distortions, Gladstone's real position is apparently not clearly defined in the mind of the general public, which is merely seeking for the unadulterated truth, regardless of its effect upon the case of any one of the belligerents.

Shortly after the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war in 1870 the Prussian Ambassador in London informed Gladstone, then Prime Minister, that some time prior to the existing war France had asked Prussia to consent to the former country's absorption of Belgium, and that there was in the possession of the Prussian Government the draft of a treaty to this effect in the handwriting of M. Benedetti, then French Ambassador at Berlin. This communication was obviously made, as Lord Morley tells us, with the object of prompting Gladstone to be the agent in making the evil news public and thus of prejudicing France in the judgment of Europe. Gladstone thought this "no part of his duty," and very shortly thereafter, at the direct instance of Bismarck, this draft treaty of 1866-7 was communicated by Baron Krause of the Prussian Embassy in London to Delane, the editor of The Times. On July 25, 1870, it was published in the columns of that paper and aroused considerable anxiety in England.

It immediately became imperative upon the British Government to take some action. As Gladstone wrote to Bright, the publication of this treaty > has thrown upon us the necessity of doing something fresh to secure Belgium, or else of saying that under no circumstances would we take any step to secure her from absorption. This publication has wholly altered the feeling of the House of Commons, and no Government could at this moment venture to give utterance to such an intention about Belgium. But neither do we think it would be right, even if it were safe, to announce that we would in any case stand by with folded arms and see actions done which would amount to a total extinction of the public right in Europe.

A simple declaration of Great Britain's intention to defend the neutrality of Belgium by arms in case it were infringed seemed to Gladstone not to meet the special requirements of the case as revealed by the proposed treaty of 1866-7 between Prussia and France. His main object was to prevent the actual execution of such an agreement, by means of which the two belligerent powers would settle their quarrels and satisfy their ambitions at the expense of helpless Belgium. Hence, on July 30, the British Government opened negotiations with France and Prussia and within a fortnight had concluded separate but identical treaties with each of these powers. According to these treaties, in case the neutrality of Belgium were violated by either France or Germany, Great Britain agreed to coöperate with the other in its defense. The preamble of these treaties states that the contracting powers > being desirous at the present time of recording in a solemn act their fixed determination to maintain the independence and neutrality of Belgium, as provided in the Treaty of 1839, have concluded this separate treaty, which, > without impairing or invalidating the conditions of the said Quintuple Treaty, shall be subsidiary and accessory to it.

Article III. further provided that these treaties of 1870 were to expire twelve months after the conclusion of the existing war, and that thereafter the independence and neutrality of Belgium would "continue to rest, as heretofore," on the Treaty of 1839.

These documents tell a plain tale, which is amply confirmed by the proceedings in Parliament in connection with this matter. On Aug. 5, 1870, while the negotiations leading to the abovementioned treaties were still pending, questions were raised in the House of Commons about the recently published abortive Treaty of 1866-7 between Prussia and France. In reply, Gladstone stated that > the Treaty of 1839 is that under which the relations of the contracting powers with Belgium are at present regulated; and that, while he could not explain the intentions of the Government "in a matter of this very grave character in answer to a question," he hoped to be able to communicate some further information in an authentic manner. Three days later, as these treaties with France and Prussia had been virtually concluded, Gladstone was able to satisfy the anxiety of the House and outlined their terms. He explicitly stated that, after their expiration, > the respective parties, being parties to the Treaty of 1839, shall fall back upon the obligations they took upon themselves under that treaty.

After Gladstone had finished speaking, the leader of the Opposition, Disraeli, took the floor and pointed out that, as a general proposition, > when there is a treaty guarantee so explicit as that expressed in the Treaty of 1839, I think the wisdom of founding on that another treaty which involves us in engagements may be open to doubt.

But he accepted Gladstone's statement > as the declaration of the Cabinet, that they are resolved to maintain the neutrality and independence of Belgium, I accept it as a wise and spirited policy, and a policy, in my opinion, not the less wise because it is spirited.

Gladstone then replied, saying that the reason the Government had not made a general declaration of its intentions regarding Belgium was that much danger might arise from such a declaration and that inadvertently they might have given utterance to words > that might be held to import obligations almost unlimited and almost irrespectively of circumstances.

We had made up our minds, he continued, that we had a duty to perform, and we thought a specific declaration of what we thought the obligations of this country better than any general declaration. Referring to the two treaties in process of ratification, he concluded:

> We thought that by contracting a joint engagement we might remove the difficulty and prevent Belgium from being sacrificed.

The policy of the Government continued, however, to be criticised, mainly on the ground that the Treaty of 1839 amply covered the case. On Aug. 10, Gladstone defended his policy in the House of Commons in a speech pitched on a high moral plane, in which he dilated upon Belgium's historic past and splendid present and on Great Britain's duty to this little nation irrespective of all questions of its own self-interest. With genuine fervor, he exclaimed:

> "If, in order to satisfy a greedy appetite for aggrandizement, coming whence it may, Belgium were absorbed, the day that witnessed that absorption would hear the knell of public right and public law in Europe." * * * "We have an interest in the independence of Belgium," he continued, "which is wider than that which we may have in the literal operation of the guarantee. It is found in answer to the question whether under the circumstance of the case this country, endowed as it is with influence and power, would quietly stand by and witness the perpetration of the direst crime that ever stained the pages of history, and thus become participators in the sin."

What Gladstone had in mind was the scheme of 1866-7, by which France was to absorb Belgium, with Prussia's consent and aid. He distinctly stated that the treaties of 1870 were devised to meet the new state of affairs disclosed by the publication of this incomplete treaty. It was in order to prevent the revival of such a conspiracy that Gladstone made separate and identical treaties in 1870 with France and Prussia. They were a practical device to secure an effectual enforcement of the treaty of 1839 under unforeseen and difficult circumstances. The agreement of 1870 was, as Gladstone said, a cumulative treaty added to that of 1839, and the latter treaty > loses nothing of its force, even during the existence of this present treaty.

During the course of this speech defending the Government's action against those critics who claimed that the Treaty of 1839 adequately met the situation, Gladstone made some general remarks about the extent of the obligation incurred by the signatories to the Treaty of 1839. Naturally, he did not refer to their bond not to violate the neutrality of Belgium—that was self-evident—but solely to their duty to prevent such action by any one else. He said:

> It is not necessary, nor would time permit me, to enter into the complicated question of the nature of the obligations of that treaty, but I am not able to subscribe to the doctrine of those who have held in this House what plainly amounts to an assertion that the simple fact of the existence of a guarantee is binding on every party to it, irrespectively altogether of the particular position in which it may find itself at the time when the occasion for acting on the guarantee arises.

It is, of course, impossible to state precisely what were those unuttered thoughts that passed through Gladstone's mind as he spoke these characteristically cautious words, but what in general they were can be satisfactorily gleaned from a letter that he had written six days before this to John Bright. The recommendation advocated in opposition to the policy adopted, he stated therein, is:

> That we should simply declare we will defend the neutrality of Belgium by arms in case it should be attacked. Now, the sole or single-handed defense of Belgium would be an enterprise which we incline to think quixotic; if these two great military powers [France and Prussia] combined against it—that combination is the only serious danger; and this it is which by our proposed engagements we should, I hope, render improbable to the very last degree. I add for myself this confession of faith: If the Belgian people desire, on their own account, to join France or any other country, I for one will be no party to taking up arms to prevent it. But that the Belgians, whether they would or not, should go "plump" down the maw of another country to satisfy dynastic greed is another matter. The accomplishment of such a crime as this implies would come near to an extinction of public right in Europe, and I do not think we could look on while the sacrifice of freedom and independence was in course of consummation.

TO HEAR WAR-NAVY HEADS.

Garrison and Daniels Will Meet Committee on War Preparedness.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—To a letter from Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, inviting the Secretary of the Navy to appear before the House Committee on Rules, which is to consider Mr. Gardner's resolution directing an investigation into the preparedness of the United States for war, Mr. Daniels replied today that he would be glad to appear upon the receipt of an invitation from the committee. Secretary Garrison also has let it be understood that upon receiving an invitation from the committee he would appear.

Mr. Daniels today told an amusing story of one of his callers who had referred to the scarcity of torpedoes in the American naval supply.

"We have such-and-such torpedoes," Mr. Deniels replied, naming a particular type.

"Oh, they are no good," replied the caller.

"That may be," interposed an Admiral who was present, "but they are the same kind of torpedoes that sank three British cruisers in the North Sea."

EDUCATION BOARD TOO BIG.

Special Committee Says 46 Members Should Be Cut to 7 or 9.

A report saying that the present Board of Education is unwieldy, that its many committees do not efficiently co-operate, and that legislation should be passed reducing its forty-six members to seven or nine, was submitted at yesterday's meeting by a special committee consisting of Vice President Greene and Messrs. Flexner and Barrett. What was needed, the special committee said, was a small deliberative body whose members would be able to meet around a table, and a business department which would take over many of the administrative and executive functions now lodged in committees. The report was laid over for future action.

The proposal to designate the public schools by names was opposed by Gen. George W. Wingate and Joseph Barondess, but the board adopted it by a vote of 23 to 7.

The Committee on Elementary Schools handed in a report disapproving a leave of absence without pay until May 1, 1915, to Louise M. Drew, a teacher in Public School 105, Brooklyn, for the purpose of caring for her mother, who is dangerously ill. The report was referred to the Committee on By-Laws and Legislation.

FOUR BUDS MAKE BOWS TO SOCIETY

Miss Roxana W. Bowen Is Introduced by Her Mother at a Home Reception.

MISS BATTIE IS GREETED

Dance at Sherry's for Miss Anna Ballard and Reception for Miss Anne J. Woodin.

Society paid homage to the débutantes yesterday at various coming-out teas and receptions. There were also several dinners given for the buds last night, with theatre parties and dancing afterward.

Mrs. Clarence Winthrop Bowen introduced her daughter, Miss Roxana Wentworth Bowen, at a reception held at her residence, 5 East Sixty-third Street. Mrs. Bowen and her daughter had a number of young girls receiving with them, who were the Misses Hope H. Colgate, Helen Ridgely Morgan, Sylvia Holt, Olivia Erdman, Helen W. Lambert, Noeline Haskins, Marian Woodward of Wilkes-Barre, Penn., and Miss Melville Silvey of Duluth, Minn. A dinner for the receiving party and an equal number of young men followed the reception, and from the dinner the party went to the play. Mrs. Bowen will give a dance for her daughter on Jan. 22 at Sherry's.

Mrs. W. Whittingham Battie of 375 Park Avenue introduced her daughter, Miss Dorothy Battie, who is a granddaughter of the late Edward Whittemore Bartow, yesterday afternoon at a reception at the Plaza. Mrs. Battie and the débutante, in white and silver, and carrying white orchids and valley lilies, had in their receiving party the Misses Marietta Chapin, Eunice Clapp, Eleanor Bartlett, Emmalena Sizer, Katharine Hill, Anna Ballard, Frances Ballard, and Mrs. Frederick P. Humphreys. After the tea a dinner for those receiving and a few additional guests took place at the Plaza, and later the party went to the dance for Miss Anna Ballard at Sherry's.

Mrs. George B. Phelps of 147 West Seventy-fourth Street entertained at Sherry's last night with a dance to introduce her daughter, Miss Anna Ballard. The dance was held in the small ballroom, beginning at 10, and a supper was served at midnight. Mrs. Ballard, in black velvet, and Miss Ballard, in pale pink satin trimmed in silver, received at the ballroom entrance.

The guests, who numbered between two and three hundred, included the Misses Constance Peabody, Kathleen Macy, Virginia Scully, Katharine Flagg, Caryl Hackstaff, Helen Ridgely Morgan, Eunice Clapp, Emmalena Sizer, and Eleanor Baxter, and also Amory L. Haskell, Frederick Alexandre, Frederic R. Coudert, Jr., Matthew Looram, Bache Brown, Vivian Palmieri, Robert and Cord Meyer, Carroll Alker, and Ryland Sizer.

Mrs. William H. Woodin gave a reception yesterday afternoon at her residence, 127 East Sixty-ninth Street, to introduce her daughter, Miss Anne Jessup Woodin. In the receiving party were the Misses Mary Woodin, Janet Adriance, Eleanor Cutler, Madge Dunnell, Olivia Erdman, Dorothy Haight, Kathryn Lyon, Helen Morgan, Adelaide Parker, Frederika Peterson, Isabel Stettinius, Barbara Thaw, Margrette White, Christine Jessup of Scranton, and Alexandra Ewing of Washington. The reception was followed by a dinner and informal dancing.

FIRST OF TWO DANCES HELD.

Patronesses Receive the Young Members at Hotel Gotham.

The first of the subscription dances, known as the Two Dances, was given last night in the ballroom at the Hotel Gotham. The patronesses held a reception before the dance, fifteen young men acting as ushers and introducing the young members of the dance, numbering about a hundred. Dancing began at 9:15, and supper was served at small tables in the balcony of the ballroom at midnight.

The patronesses included Mrs. Michael J. Mulqueen, Mrs. Ernest J. H. Amy, Mrs. Louis D. Conley, Mrs. Joseph Conron, Mrs. Andrew J. Connick, Mrs. James A. Farrell, Mrs. Edward J. McGuire, Mrs. Thomas E. Murray, Mrs. Joseph J. O'Donohue, Jr., and Mrs. John J. Radley.

The second dance is to be given on Monday evening, Dec. 28.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mrs. Edward Gerry Tuttle of 61 West Fifty-first Street will introduce her daughter, Miss Kathleen Harriet Tuttle, at a reception at her home on Saturday, Dec. 5.

Mrs. Brooks H. Wells will give a tea dance to be followed by a small dinner at her home, 523 Madison Avenue, on Dec. 21.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French, (Miss Beeckman,) who were married at Goshen, N. Y., on Tuesday, are at the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, Mass., on their honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed, whose daughter, Miss M. Symphorosa Bristed, is a débutante of this season, will take possession of the house which they have leased at 165 East Seventy-first Street on Saturday. They are now at their place at Lenox, Mass.

A luncheon will be given by Mrs. T. Halsted Myers at her home, 59 West Fiftieth Street, on Saturday, Dec. 5, for her débutane niece, Miss Sarah Floyd-Jones Williams.

Mrs. Charles H. Pope of 247 Fifth Avenue will entertain this evening with a small dance.

Mrs. Robert Ryland Sizer of 53 East Seventy-third Street will give a tea dance on Dec. 29 at Sherry's, to introduce her daughter, Miss Emmalena Sizer.

The Thursday Supper Club will hold its first meeting this season tonight at Sherry's.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"What It Means to a Woman" will end its engagement at the Longacre Theatre on Saturday night and next Wednesday night H. H. Frazee will present in that theatre a new play by Willard Mack, "So Much for So Much." Mr. Mack will himself be seen in the leading role.

Native Indian music symphonized and arranged for a full orchestra is to be a feature of the presentation at the Casino Theatre beginning next Monday afternoon of Edward S. Curtis's epic film drama of North Pacific Indians called "In the Land of the Head Hunters."

Jesse L. Lasky, President of the Lasky Feature Play Company, who has been out to California at the moving-picture studios of his company, will return to New York today.

The management of "The Law of the Land," at the Forty-eighth Street Theatre, has extended the time limit in its poster contest to next Tuesday.

Arrangements were completed yesterday for the appearance of Montgomery and Stone in "Chin Chin" in San Francisco during the Exposition.

When the prize play, "Children of Earth," is produced by Winthrop Ames on Jan. 4 Olive Wyndham will be in the cast supporting Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon.

Next week will be the last of "Papa's Darling" at the New Amsterdam Theatre. When that musical piece starts on tour on Dec. 7 Charles Dillingham's musical show, "Watch Your Step," will come into the New Amsterdam.

Arthur Albro, who was with "Gypsy Love" and later with the Chicago Grand Opera Company, has been engaged for the tenor role in "Lady Luxury," which will be produced here in December.

Three hundred Vassar undergraduates arrived here on a special train from Philadelphia yesterday afternoon, and last night attended the performance of "Daddy Long-Legs" at the Gaiety Theatre in honor of Jean Webster, author of the play, a Vassar graduate.

Mrs. Madison Bass, retiring President of the American Playgoers, gave a farewell box party to the members of that organization at the Punch and Judy Theatre last night.

A big vaudeville act with many mechanical effects called "The Slave Ship" is being staged by Ned Wayburn, and will be presented for the first time at Hammerstein's on Dec. 7.

On account of mechanical difficulties in the production the opening of "The Garden of Paradise," set for last night at the Park Theatre, was postponed until Saturday night.

BANDBOX, NEWEST THEATRE

Actors to Reopen Remodeled Adolf Philipp Playhouse Dec. 22.

The New York Play Actors, Inc., announced last night that on Dec. 22 the company would open the Bandbox Theatre. The company has taken over and remodelled the Adolf Philipp Theatre in East Fifty-seventh Street, and renamed it.

The Bandbox is to be an actors' playhouse, according to Douglas J. Wood, who is the head of the venture, and a new play will be presented each month. The plays are to be selected from dramas which would not ordinarily lend themselves to production in the larger theatres of the Broadway district, and most of the seats will be sold by subscription.

The first play to be produced will be Jerome K. Jerome's "Poor Little Thing," an adaptation by the English writer of Jules Lemaitre's French story, which Guitry presented in Paris for a run of several months last season.

N. R. BECKER WEDS ACTRESS

Assistant Tax Commissioner Marries Miss Nan J. Brennan.

Niles R. Becker, Assistant Tax Commissioner, and Miss Nan J. Brennan of 501 West 111th Street were married yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Ascension, West 107th Street, near Broadway, the Rev. Father Duggan officiating.

Earlier in the day Mr. Becker and Miss Brennan took out their marriage license. No previous announcement had been made of their engagement.

Miss Brennan, until a short time ago, was on the stage. She appeared in "Hop o' My Thumb," and was also an understudy to Blanche Ring. She has been living with her two sisters, the Misses May and Belle Brennan, at the West 111th Street address. She is twenty-five years old.

Mr. Becker, who is 32 years old, was formerly a member of the Board of Aldermen. In August, 1913, while Alderman of the Fifteenth Assembly District, he wrote to Mayor Gaynor demanding that the Mayor issue a call for a special meeting of the Aldermen to investigate alleged newsstand graft, to which the Mayor had referred in a speech.

Only a few relatives and friends attended the wedding. A supper was given afterward at the Hotel Astor. Mr. Becker resides at 345 West Seventieth Street.

WEDDED AT RITZ-CARLTON.

Miss Ethel Meyer Married to J. A. Frank by Rev. Dr. Silverman.

The marriage of Miss Ethel Meyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison D. Meyer of 139 West Eighty-sixth Street, and Jerome Adrian Frank, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Frank of this city, took place last night at the Ritz-Carlton. The Rev Dr. Joseph Silverman performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Miss Dorothy Thalmesinger as maid of honor, and four bridesmaids, including the Misses Frances Levy, Edith Reinheimer, Rosalie Nathan. and Florence Buttenwieser. Little Margaret L. Spiegelberg was the flower girl.

William B. Heller of Portland, Ore., was best man, and the ushers included Simon C. Bernstein, Arthur G. Frank, Charles H. Meyer, Dr. Sydney L. Spiegelberg, Walter J. Rose, and Jeffry H. Engelhard.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank are to spend their honeymoon in the South, and on their return will reside at 302 West Eighty-seventh Street.

Miss Nast, Bride of Otto A. Samek.

Miss Heloise Nast, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Nast of 160 West Ninety-fifth Street, and Otto Arthur Samek were married last evening at 6:30 o'clock at the St. Regis, the Rev. Dr. Calish of Richmond, Va., officiating.

The bride, who wore a gown of white crêpe trimmed with tulle and silver lace, and a veil of tulle, was attended by Miss Irene Saperstan of Buffalo as maid of honor, and the Misses Blanche Samek, Dorothy Harris, Jean and Stella Eisenberg, and Stella Pizer as bridesmaids. Arthur Samek was best man.

A dinner and dance for about eighty guests followed the ceremony. The couple left later for the South on their honeymoon.

Winston-Brackenridge Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Marcia Brackenridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Brackenridge, and Frederick Hampden Winston took place yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Transfiguration, Richmond Hill, L. I. The Rev. William P. Evans, rector of the church, officiated.

The bride's father was formerly Commissioner of Public Works of Brooklyn. The bridegroom is a son of Mrs. Frederick S. Winston of Chicago. The couple first met when Miss Brackenridge acted as a bridesmaid and Mr. Winston as an usher at a wedding in Chicago a year ago. They will reside in that city.

Miss Foote to Wed J. S. Baker.

Special to The New York Times.

Foote of this place, to John Stewart Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Baker of 8 East Seventy-fifth Street, New York City, was announced tonight at a dinner party given at the Morris County Golf Club. Miss Foote's father is President of the National Iron Bank of this place. Mr. Baker is a Princeton graduate. His father is President of the Bank of Manhattan Company of 40 Wall Street, New York.

Paymaster Wm. B. Rogers Marries.

The wedding of Paymaster William B. Rogers, U. S. N., and Mrs. Raymond von Palmenberg of 266 West Ninety-first Street, took place at 6 o'clock last evening in Old Trinity Church. Only a few friends attended the ceremony. Mr. Rogers and his bride have known each other for many years. Both have traveled extensively. After a short wedding trip they will live in Norfolk, Va., where Paymaster Rogers is stationed.

Rue-Van Siclen Engagement.

The engagement of Miss Florence Rue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Rue of Garden City, L. I., to James Vanderveer Van Siclen, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Van Siclen of Jamaica, L. I., has been announced. Miss Rue was a debutante of last season, and is a granddaughter of ex-Judge Charles E. Teale of Brooklyn.

DAVIDS—TALLMAN.

The marriage of Miss Hazel Tallman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Tallman, to Walter Irving Davids, son of Cortlandt I. Davids of this city, took place last evening at the home of the bride's parents, 199 Edgecombe Avenue. The ceremony, which was followed by a large reception, was performed by the Rev. Dr. Paul S. Lembach, pastor of the Hamilton Grange Reformed Church.

Miss Viola Tallman acted as maid of honor for her sister, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Maybel and Ruth Cleland.

Frank B. Tallman, Jr., acted as best man. Chester C. Beekman and William Archibald were the ushers.

Today's Weddings.

The wedding of Miss Sadie Gertrude Fischel, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fischel, and David Kass, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Kass of this city, will take place this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the Hotel Astor. Today is also the wedding anniversary of the bride's parents. They will reside at Eighty-sixth Street and Park Avenue.

Miss Helen Goldsmith, daughter of Mrs. Solomon Goldsmith of 515 Cathedral Parkway, and Sol Smith Rudolph are to be married this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the West End Synagogue, 158 West Eighty-second Street. The Rev. F. de Sola Mendes is to perform the ceremony. The couple will go to Florida and Cuba on their honeymoon.

MIRACLE DRAMA AT THE CENTURY

"Pilate's Daughter" by F. L. Kenzel Produced Here on the Scale of a Spectacle.

NO MEN IN THE BIG CAST

Play Was Written for a New England Parish and Has Been Repeatedly Acted There by Amateurs.

PILATE'S DAUGHTER, a miracle play, in five acts and seven scenes. By Francis L. Kenzel. At the Century Opera House.

Wife of Pontius Pilate........Marion Barney
Pilate's Daughter, (first act)........Violet de Biccari
Pilate's Daughter, (ten years later)........Constance Molineaux
Leah........Sara Biala
Rebecca........Agnes Mapes
Afra........Margaret Vryling
Rubia........Ethel Gray
Servia........Eleanor Russell
Stella........Nina Derby
Agrippina........Marion Barney
Premiere Danseuse........Domina Marini

"Pilate's Daughter," a miracle play conceived and written in our day and done by professional players for the first time this season, was presented to New York last evening on the great stage left vacant by the departure of the Century Opera Company for Chicago. It sets forth in spoken verse and stage picture the story of Claudia, daughter of Pontius Pilate and follower of Christ, who goes to Rome with Peter, guarded by a rose that the Messiah had touched and who, at last, suffers a martyr's death before the throne of Agrippina, wife of Tiberius Caesar.

An interesting story is being told as to the origin of this miracle play. According to the account which preceded the play itself to New York, "Pilate's Daughter" was written ten or twelve years ago by a priest in Roxbury, Mass., to be given as a Lenten pageant by the women of his parish. It has been repeated there on several occasions, attaining something of the institutional character of the play done by the folk at Oberammergau. In due time came the suggestion that it be put into the hands of professional players and given like any other play within the walls of a commercial theatre. Philadelphia has seen it, and last evening it reached New York, with the reopening, after a brief interval, of the playhouse in Central Park West.

Such interest as is aroused by the play is derived entirely from the religious values of its subject matter, for at none of its contact with the art of the theatre does it call for serious consideration. It is a play that in its substance harks back to the period when the developing English drama was not so very far beyond its liturgical beginnings and something fine and deeply interesting could be done by a playwright who would turn his skill to such reversion. "Pilate's Daughter" is mediaeval enough in its conception, but the verse of its text is as innocent of poetry as the elaborate and painstaking staging of the play is innocent of theatrical competence.

One visit to this miracle play at the Century, however, does serve to suggest how rich an opportunity awaits the writer for the modern theatre who would bring the gifts of dramatic instinct and poetic imagination to all the treasures of material that lie in the sacred legends of early Christianity.

The scenic effects are generally pretentious, and one startling picture is achieved at the close of the first act, when, by the glare of flashing lightning, the cross is shown upon the summit of Calvary.

The performance of "Pilate's Daughter" calls for the services of a large number of persons, all of them women, from principals to supernumeraries. The playing is appropriate to the text and the general quality of the production. There should be a closing word of admiration for the charming dancing done in the last act by Domina Marini.

ARRIGO SERATO'S RECITAL.

Italian Violinist Plays a Serious Programme in Carnegie Hall.

Arrigo Serato, the Italian violinist, who made his first appearance here recently as soloist at one of the Philharmonic concerts, gave a recital yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall. The programme was a dignified and interesting one, and neither the programme nor his performance of it showed the traits that are conventionally associated with Italian musicians and Italian musicianship. It may be that our notions of these things have been formed upon insufficient knowledge and experience. Italian opera singers are not, after all, especially in this day and generation, the only representatives of Italian art, nor their ideals the only Italian ideals.

Mr. Serato began with the long and somewhat severely archaic chaconne by Vitali that violinists have played frequently in recent years, and a sonata in E minor by Bach, with accompaniment for piano (extended from a figured bass) that violinists very rarely play. In these the dignity and breadth of his style were to be admired; his performance of them was sincere, and was a serious attempt to represent their style. But there might be a little more amelioration of the severity of Vitali's long series of variations than he permitted by reading into them a little contrast, and there is unquestionably more poetical feeling in Bach's sonata, especially in the adagio, than Mr. Serato found there. In a word, his style is cold and repressed, and this impression is intensified by the coldness of his tone. It is a large tone, with carrying power, but it has little appealing quality, and sometimes discloses a rough edge. Mr. Serato's technique is ample and can be brilliant, as he showed in Wieniawski's D minor concerto, especially, and his playing most rarely offends the ear through lapses from correct intonation. He is an artist whose accomplishment and evident high aims are worthy of much respect, yet he is not one, so far as he has yet shown his powers, to exercise a great charm or to stir the deeper feelings of his listeners.

"Watch Your Step" on the Stage.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Charles Dillingham presented his latest assembly of musical comedy stars here tonight in Irving Berlin and Harry B. Smith's musical show, "Watch Your Step," which had its first public production on any stage. The cast, headed by Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle and Frank Tinney, includes Brice and King, Elizabeth Murray, W. C. Fields, Renée Gratz, Dama Sykes, W. J. Halligan, Harry Ellis, and Harry Kelly.

Germans Act a New Comedy.

"Als ich noch im Flügelkleide," ("While Still I Was in Schoolgirl's Dress,") a new German comedy by Albert Kehm and Martin Frehsee, was presented for the first time last night by the stock company at the Irving Place Theatre. The scenes of the play are laid in a fashionable boarding school and the piece calls for a large cast. Director Christians, who appeared in the comedy, introduced a number of new women members of the stock company.

Southern Society Dinner Dec. 9.

The Southern Society will have its annual dinner at the Waldorf on Wednesday evening, Dec. 9. Speakers will be Attorney General Thomas W. Gregory, ex-Attorney General George W. Wickersham, Controller of the Currency John Skelton Williams, and Congressman Swager Shirley of Kentucky.

DR. CLINTON WAGNER DEAD.

Founder of New York Laryngological Society Succumbs in Switzerland

Dr. Clinton Wagner, formerly a well known physician of New York, and founder of the New York Laryngological Society, the first society of laryngology in the world, died yesterday in Geneva, Switzerland. Dr. Wagner was born in Baltimore, Md., in 1840, and was a student of medicine when the civil war began. He became Surgeon in Chief of the Second Division of the Fifth Army Corps of the Army of the Potomac. He established the first floating hospital on Western waters, and served until the close of the war.

After spending two years in the study of laryngology in London, Paris, and Vienna, Dr. Wagner returned to New York and established himself as a specialist in that department of medicine, and soon distinguished himself as a teacher as well as a practitioner. He established the Metropolitan Throat Hospital and made it a model institution, which became famous among those desiring advanced instruction. Dr. Wagner devised many new instruments and surgical methods and his rare skill enabled him to attempt with success operations upon the throat and neck which few specialists were in the habit of undertaking.

In 1882, Dr. Wagner was elected First Professor of Laryngology and Rhinology of the New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital. He founded the New York Laryngological Society in 1873, and five years later the American Laryngological Association was organized chiefly through his inspiration. Dr. Wagner retired from active practice several years ago, and had since lived most of that time in the West and in Europe. He is survived by his widow.

BRIDE DIES ON HONEYMOON.

Mrs. J. C. Emmitt Was Married in Brooklyn Eight Days Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Nov. 25.—Mrs. Lillian Emmitt, the seven days bride of J. Charles Emmitt, Albany, N. Y., died at the Chamberlin Hotel, Old Point Comfort, this morning of pneumonia, contracted on the honeymoon trip from New York. The body, attired in the bridal robes, will be sent to New York City, where interment will be made in the family burying ground.

Mrs. Emmitt, who before her marriage was Miss Lillian McKaeg, married Mr. Emmitt at the home of her parents in Brooklyn last Wednesday. She contracted a slight cold on the trip from New York on the Old Dominion liner.

Gideon Powell.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Nov. 25.—Gideon Powell, who for more than sixty years was in the retail shoe business in New York City, died at his home here tonight, at the age of 87 years. He had lived a retired life since 1899 with his daughter and son. Up to the time of his retirement Mr. Powell was head of the firm of Powell Brothers Shoe Company of New York. Mr. Powell was born in Rockville Centre, N. Y. He entered the employ of French Brothers, shoe dealers in New York City, in 1854 as a traveling salesman, and in 1860 he became interested in the firm and later with his brother took over the business.

"LA GIOCONDA" AT OPERA.

Caruso and Mmes. Destinn and Ober in Enjoyable Performance.

La Gioconda........Emmy Destinn
Laura Adorno........Margarete Ober
Alvise Badoero........Andrea de Segurola
La Cieca........Maria Duchene
Enzo Grimaldo........Enrico Caruso
Barnaba........Pasquale Amato
Zuane........Bernard Begue
Un Cantore........Vincenzo Reschiglian
Isepo........Pietro Audisio
Conductor, Giorgio Polacco.

Ponchielli's "La Gioconda," which opened the season of the Metropolitan Opera Company last year, was brought into the répertoire of the institution's current season by a performance last night in which several of the important members of the company took part. There was a large audience and its signs of enjoyment were many. This opera is becoming most useful as a display piece for brilliant singers, a provider of operatic bustle and movement, and an opportunity for the ballet, rather than for what it has to offer the sensitive musical ear and the perspective accurately adjusted to the modern music drama.

A performance as good as that of last night carries with it the justification for continued hearing of the work. In its essentials it was a brilliant and interesting setting forth of what the composer has provided. The second act seemed to lag a little and be somewhat lacking in the vitality that characterized the rest of the performance. Even the most reliable singers of the cast seemed affected here, and the audience heard the amazing sound of Caruso's voice below the true pitch in the duet with Laura, an event so rare as to be noteworthy—although it remains to add that they had just before this heard him sing his "Cielo e Mar" with exquisite finish and beauty of tone, and he recovered himself completely in the next act.

Mmes. Destinn and Ober were both in good voice and gave notable performances, as did Mr. Amato. Andrea de Segurola made an interesting figure of Alvise, as usual, and Mme. Duchene, with Messrs. Begue, Reschiglian, and Audisio, contributed worthily to the ensemble. The ballet distinguished itself in the Dance of the Hours. Mr. Polacco conducted admirably.

GABRILOWITSCH RECITAL.

Pianist and Contralto Wife Appear Jointly in Aeolian Hall.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch was for several years a frequent visitor to New York, and established a reputation for himself here as one of the most excellent of the younger pianists. He has spent several years uninterruptedly abroad, and had not been heard here for some six years before last evening, when he and Mme. Clara Gabrilowitsch gave a recital jointly in Aeolian Hall, which was well filled with a friendly and expectant audience. Mr. Gabrilowitsch has refined and matured in his art; he has gained in poise, in refinement of sentiment, in tenderness and poetic imagination. His playing last evening was that of an artist sensitive to the finer and subtler appeal of music, yet not lacking in fire, in vigor and brilliancy.

His best qualities were engaged by the pieces on his programme. Beethoven's sonata, Op. 81, called "Les Adieux, l'Absence et le Retour," is not so often played as some of the others, yet Beethoven himself thought highly of it. The hint of a "programme" in the title refers to the going and coming of his friend, pupil, and patron, the Archduke Rudolph. The music is true Beethoven. Mr. Gabrilowitsch played it with an evident fondness, with grace and tenderness, with dash in the last movement. There was the youthful ardor in his performance of Schumann's G minor sonata that so signally characterizes this work, to which Florestan and Eusebius both contribute with full hands. It is another of the sonatas less often heard, and is equally true Schumann. Mr. Gabrilowitsch played also half of Chopin's set of preludes, Op. 28, with all the varying resources of imagination and characterization that they demand. His tone now has singular beauty and variety of color, his touch clarity and crisp articulation, and there is abundance of definitely determined rhythm, as well as of subtlety of dynamic in his playing.

Mme. Gabrilowitsch's contralto voice was heard a few times, but not many, in New York before her marriage and departure hence, when she was Miss Clara Clemens. It has developed obviously somewhat in power; perhaps also in quality; but Mme. Gabrilowitsch's resources, both in voice and in technique, are somewhat limited. She was plainly nervous when she first came on to sing, and no doubt this nervousness prevented her from doing full justice to herself in Beethoven's long concert "scena ed aria," "Ah perfido." She sang also four of Brahms's gypsy songs, and songs by Fauré, Debussy and Henschel. Her husband, with rare conjugal devotion and chivalry, played all her accompaniments, and it need not be said that they were such as few singers are privileged to have. Both Mr. and Mme. Gabrilowitsch were given much hearty applause and were left in no doubt of their welcome.

Dr. Charles Wood McMurtry.

Dr. Charles Wood McMurtry, 42 years old, died yesterday at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George J. McMurtry, at 812 Fifth Avenue, following an operation for appendicitis. He was a skin specialist and had been connected with the Vanderbilt Clinic and St. Luke's Hospital. Dr. McMurtry was born in Pittsburgh and was graduated from the Harvard Medical School in 1899. Following this he went abroad and spent eleven years in Breslau, Germany, in the course of his profession. His father is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the American Sheet and Tinplate Company, one of the sub companies of the United States Steel Corporation.

TROUBLE WITH EVICTIONS.

Charity Officers Point to Difficulty in Investigating Cases.

Representatives of three prominent charitable organizations gave out a statement yesterday in which attention was called to the difficulties which would be met by a committee formed to investigate all cases reported to it of impending evictions with the purpose of aiding those who deserved a helping hand.

"If the charitable organizations which have been doing this work effectively for years will be generously supported with funds," the statement reads, "all forms of distress will be adequately relieved. Not only will families be provided with money for rent, but also for food, clothing, fuel, and other necessities. And above all the societies will, as they have been doing, painstakingly work out the problem of placing the distressed family in the position where they can help themselves."

Attention is called to the fact that the Commissioner of Accounts, who made an investigation, reported that out of 89,973 eviction cases begun in 1913 only 1,475 came to trial, and in but 1,113 were warrants of eviction issued. In many of these cases the warrants were not executed and tenants moved voluntarily into other quarters, paying rent with money supplied by charitable societies.

Letters were sent yesterday to the clerks of the municipal courts, calling attention to the fact that the societies were usually informed of worthy cases from various sources. The clerks were asked to write on cards the names and addresses of any family believed to require assistance in eviction cases.

The statement and letters were signed by Bailey B. Burritt, General Director, New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor; Morris D. Waldman, Manager, United Hebrew Charities of the City of New York, and W. Frank Persons, Director of General Work, Charity Organization Society of the City of New York.

NEW LONDON MUSICAL PLAY

Shuberts to Produce "Tonight's the Night," with George Grossmith.

Arrangements have been completed between the Shuberts and George Grossmith and Edward Laurillard for the production in this country of "Tonight's the Night," a musical piece which has played in London with success. The English company will sail from Liverpool on the Baltic Dec. 2, and the New York opening will take place about two weeks later at a theatre yet to be announced.

George Grossmith himself will head the cast of "Tonight's the Night," and among others in the company will be Emmy Whelan, Maurice Farkoa, and Iris Hoey.

PEARY STILL HOLDS ARCTIC LAND THEORY

But Is Ready to Admit That Crocker Land Possibly Deceived Him.

MANY CHANCES OF ERROR

Must Put Foot on It to be Sure, He Says—Cites Explorers' Many Mistakes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Rear Admiral Peary, the discoverer of the north pole, in a formal statement prepared for THE NEW YORK TIMES, today expressed his pleasure at the safe return of the MacMillan expedition from the regions that he traversed in his dash for the pole. The Admiral is not at all disconcerted at the apparent failure of the MacMillan expedition to find Crocker Land in the place where he thought it was. It is an axiom of polar exploration, he said, not to be sure of land until your foot is on it, and he gave illustrations to show how experienced explorers had been deceived by mirages or other optical illusions.

Admiral Peary thinks, however, that there probably is land not far from the place where he thought he saw it. He expressed his eagnerness to read the full report. The Admiral's statement follows:

"I am much interested in the news from MacMillan and shall await with still more interest the full account of his journey and his other discoveries. If he has traversed the locality where I saw the summits of Crocker Land from the tops of Cape Colgate and Cape Hubbard, he has settled the matter for that locality, though both physical indications and theory still point to the existence of land somewhere in that region between MacMillan's route and that of Stefansson to the westward.

"It is almost an axiom in arctic exploration that one can never be entirely sure of what he sees until he has put his foot on it.

Riddles of the Arctic.

"Seen from a distance, an iceberg black with earth and stones, may be taken for a rock, a cliff-walled valley filled with fog for a fjord, and the dense low clouds above a patch of open water for land.

"The history of arctic exploration is full of instances. Ross, nearly a hundred years ago, made Baffin's Bay a closed body of water, omitting Smith, Jones, and Lancaster Sounds. Later Perry opened up Lancaster Sound and Inglefield entered Smith Sound. Morton of Kane's expedition saw the 'open polar sea' from Cape Constitution. Hayes saw it from Cape Lieber, considerably further north.

"Hall, navigating the same region, could not find it at all, but saw land north of Greenland, which in turn the British expedition did not corroborate. The Lady Franklin expedition showed Bache an island instead of a peninsula, as it really is, and showed a large sound (Hayes) which does not exist.

"There are other instances in other localities, as Payer's Land, northeast of Franz Joseph Land, which Nansen found when he traversed the region, was not there. Also Keenan Land, northwest of Point Barrow, which Bartlett's recent drift in the Karluk appears to have eliminated, at least from its assigned locality.

Land Discovered by Accident.

"On the other hand, in some instances arctic lands have succeeded in concealing their existence in a surprising manner. Franz Joseph Land was discovered by Payer's ship drifting in sight of it during the long Winter night. And there is the new Russian Land just north of Cape Chelyuskin, only recently discovered by Capt. Willitski, though both Nordenskjold in the Vega and Nansen in the Fram passed not far from it.

"The fact that MacMillan thought he saw Crocker Land during two days, combined with his reference to young ice, appears to indicate the existence in that locality of a persistent polynia (area of open water) associated possibly with the 'Big Lead' which I found north of Greenland and Grant Land, and with the edge of the Continental Shelf. Probably MacMillan's soundings will throw light on this.

"It would appear that MacMillan and Green narrowly escaped the fate of the Duke of the Abruzzi's supporting party, which was lost by the breaking up of the ice north of Franz Joseph Land. I am glad that the energy and interest of the American Museum of Natural History has resulted in this region's being explored and the conditions there determined. And I am particularly glad that MacMillan and Green accomplished their hazardous journey and returned in safety, instead of having the protracted and, as it may yet prove, fatal experience of Stefansson further to the west.

"It is very gratifying to note how MacMillan's traverse into the unknown, with Bartlett's drift in the Karluk, and Stefansson's dash west of Banks's Land, are steadily increasing our knowledge of the North Polar Basin."

The news that the MacMillan expedition failed to find Crocker Land in longitude 100 west and latitude 83 north was much discussed yesterday by students of the Polar Regions.

Anthony Fiala said yesterday that he believed that even an explorer of Admiral Peary's experience could be deceived as to the nature of an object which he saw at such a great distance.

Admiral Peary fixed the situation of Crocker Land at 100 degrees west and 83 degrees north by triangulation. His calculations were made possible by his two views of the supposed mountainous region from Cape Thomas Hubbard and Cape Colgate.

He made his observation from Cape Thomas Hubbard at a height above the sea level of between 1,400 and 1,500 feet. The land, which he believed he saw at a distance of 130 miles, must have been more than 2,000 feet above the sea level or the curvature of the earth would have sunk it below his horizon.

The news from the Crocker Land Expedition indicates that Bradley Land, which Dr. Frederick A. Cook asserts that he sighted when he was in latitude 84 north and longitude 96 west, does not exist. Dr. Cook does not tell in his book from what point he saw the land, but asserts that it was in a westerly direction, and that there seemed to be an interrupted coast of fifty miles which might be said, be mainland or an island.

The partial account of the expedition received at the Museum came in a letter from Knud Rasmussen. He was to have taken MacMillan's full account by motorboat from Etah, Greenland, to his own station at Thule, where it would be sent to Copenhagen and then to this country. Because of storms Rasmussen was not able to make the trip to Etah, but in August he met W. Elmer Ekblaw, geologist of the expedition, who was hunting for the party's Winter supply of provisions near Rasmussen's station. Rasmussen sent a letter of his own to Dr. Hovey telling of the failure of the party to find land, and inclosed a short letter written by Ekblaw telling something of the party's plans.

Will Lecture on Latin America.

Four lectures on inter-American subjects will be delivered in Aeolian Hall. On Dec. 10 Dr. John Bassett Moore will discuss "Past and Present Relations of the United States to the American Republics," and on Jan. 28 Senator T. E. Burton, "Industrial and Commercial Effects of the Panama Canal." Secretary of State Bryan will speak later on "Possibilities of Friendly Co-operation Between the United States and Latin America," and Prof. F. J. Giddings on "The Western Hemisphere and the World of Tomorrow."

AMERICAN ARMY HEALTHIEST OF ALL

No Peril Now in Holding Large Bodies of Men in the Field, Says Surgeon Gen. Gorgas.

FEVER MENACE REDUCED

And Rate for Alcoholism Lower Than It Has Ever Been Before—Higher Pay for Medical Corps.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—In his first annual report as Surgeon General of the United States Army, Brig. Gen. William C. Gorgas says the time has come when the United States can be assured that it can maintain a state of hygienic competence that will warrant the holding of large bodies of troops in the field indefinitely. Figures submitted by Gen. Gorgas indicate that of all the armies in the world that of the United States is the healthiest.

The report further shows that the percentage of disease in the United States Army is the lowest it has ever been and that since 1912 this rate has been decreased approximately 18 per cent. in the United States proper, while the rate is also lower than at any previous time among the troops on duty beyond the continental limits of the country. It is interesting to note that at no time in the history of the Army has the rate for alcoholism been so low.

"It is especially satisfactory," says Gen. Gorgas, "in view of the extension of white races toward the tropics, to state that the rates for malarial fevers are the lowest since 1908, when our troops were first permanently stationed in the tropics."

The Hospital Corps of the Army, the Surgeon General says, should be made more attractive, because under present conditions there is little inducement in the pay to draw to it men of intelligence that are necessary to perform efficiently its many and specialized duties. Pharmacists, surgical, laboratory, and sanitary assistants, expert nurses and cooks can get better pay as well as better hours out of the Army than in it, he says.

"The reorganization of several new field hospitals and ambulance units during 1914," Gen. Gorgas continues, "only in part remedies the glaring defect observed in the shortage of mobile sanitary units. Our present personnel permits only one-half of the regular army in the field to be served by the sanitary units prescribed by field service regulations. In view of the great battle losses to be expected in modern wars, it is a serious responsibility to rely upon improvised units that must serve at the front. This matter does not require Congressional action.

"The great reduction in the amount of preventable disease foreshadows great economies to the Government as practical application is developed. Until comparatively recently the duties of medical officers were almost entirely confined to the care of the sick and wounded. In keeping with modern tendencies, specialization has developed and to their former duty is now added that of sanitary science with the practice of preventive medicine in the field and garrison, the handling and disposal of the sick and wounded in campaign, and the various specialties of the civilian physician and surgeon. All this requires preparation and training unknown in past years. The Medical Corps is the only portion of the Army not included in the plan of education of the Army instituted when Senator Root was Secretary of War.

"It seems time that a comprehensive scheme was adopted to keep medical officers trained and abreast of the times in both their medico-military and strictly professional duties.

"For some years it has been necessary to constantly employ from 90 to 100 members of the Medical Reserve Corps with troops. It is desirable that the Medical Corps be large enough to perform all the duties required in peace, and any reserve of trained medical officers be effected in other ways. In time of war there will be demands for medical officers that the corps will be unable to meet. A sufficient number to meet requirements in peace is the best preparation to meet the demands upon the medical department in mobilization and war.

"Appeals are made during great public disasters for the services of medical officers and for medical property by the National Red Cross. It is desirable that plans be perfected whereby they may become available through the authority of the Secretary of War. Legislative enactment is necessary to modify the present restrictions upon granting this help."

Under the caption "Influence of Race" Gen. Gorgas says that the statistics show that the colored troops in the army had the highest non-effective and the second highest death rate. The white troops had the lowest admission rate and the Philippine troops the highest death rate. The constant non-effective rate per 1,000 were, colored 39.27, white 23.97, Philippine 18.21, and Porto Rican 24.58. The death rates were, colored 5.83, white 4.80, Philippine 9.17, and Porto Rican 3.37. The rates for total losses were, white 18.05, colored 10, Philippine 18.34, and Porto Rican 11.79. The highest rate for alcoholism was among the white troops, the highest rate for malaria was in the ranks of the Philippine Scouts, while the highest tuberculosis rate was among the Porto Rican troops.

DOGS BITE FOUR CHILDREN.

One Brooklyn District Has Three Angry Animals in Night.

Four children were bitten by unmuzzled dogs at about 6 o'clock last night in the same Brooklyn district. Edna Moulderstad, 12 years old, of 61 Lorraine Street, was bitten in the left thigh by a dog belonging to Mrs. Taylor of 850 Hicks Street. The wound was cauterized by Dr. Harleson of Long Island College Hospital, and a summons has been issued for Mrs. Taylor.

A few minutes later a dog kept by Dominick Jacarino of 366 Columbia Street bit Vincent Cara, 5 years, of 28 Luqueer Street, in the left leg, and Charles Basardo, 8 years, of 3 Commerce Street, in the left hand. They were treated by Dr. Brown of Brooklyn Hospital, who had just finished dressing them when he was summoned to attend Joseph Denayo, 7 years, of 79 Rappelyea Street, who had been bitten at Rappelyea and Hicks Streets by a stray dog.

A summons for keeping an unmuzzled dog was served on Denayo, and his dog was taken to the S. P. C. A. shelter in Butler Street for observation. None of the children was severely hurt.

JOHN H. LYON'S WILL FILED.

Woolen Merchant Leaves $57,000 to Methodist Institutions.

The will of John H. Lyon, head of the woolen importing firm of John H. Lyon & Co., of 236 Water Street, at the time of his death on Oct. 29, was filed for probate yesterday. Of an estate in excess of $150,000, $57,000 is bequeathed to religious and charitable institutions. The widow, Mrs. Minnie D. Lyon, of 535 West 113th Street, gets $50,000 and one-half the residuary estate. Mrs. Kate L. Diggs, a sister, gets $25,000. There are bequests of $5,000 each to nine nephews and nieces and to Nellie M. Martin, a friend.

The public bequests include: $25,000 and one-half the residuary estate to the Brooklyn Methodist Episcopal Home; $10,000 each to the Brooklyn and Long Island Church Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Brooklyn Methodist Episcopal Hospital; $5,000 to the East Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and $2,000 to the De Kalb Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church of Brooklyn.

WOMAN DUPES CURB IN JUMBO MINE DEAL

"Col." Wilkinson's Wife Sells 15,000 Extension Shares on Telegraph Order.

BROKERS LOSE THOUSANDS

Stock Jumps from 83 Cents to $1.75 in Four Days — Queer Rumors Out Early.

The name of "Col" George Wilkinson, promoter of the Central Tennessee Development Company, which went on the rocks last June, has bobbed up again in a curious financial transaction, this time in connection with a sale of 15,000 shares of mining stock on the Curb. It happens, however, that Wilkinson's wife is the one directly connected with the deal, and the promoter himself is involved only to the extent of holding in his name some of the stock which Mrs. Wilkinson sought to sell.

Incidentally, a prominent Stock Exchange firm which sold a part of the 15,000 shares on a telegraphed order from Mrs. Emma B. Wilkinson of Ashland, Wis., and has not been able to get the shares for delivery, is waiting for news from the West before closing an entry in its profit and loss account.

Gossip which had seethed on the Curb for days about a weird deal in Jumbo Extension Mining stock turned into facts yesterday when it was learned that Mrs. Wilkinson attempted last Friday to sell by wire something like 20,000 shares and succeeded in disposing of the bulk of them.

The Stock Exchange firm, which desires to keep in the background until certain investigations are completed, made public most of the incidents, and admitted that it had sold for the woman's account 7,100 shares, while a Boston brokerage firm disposed of 7,900 on the New York market. At least two Curb firms here were also approached with selling orders from the Wisconsin town on the same day, but refused to execute them.

When the Stock Exchange firm learned that there was something queer in the transaction, it communicated with Bishop's Service, an agency which looks into exceptional operations, and was informed that there was no doubt of the identity of the seller. It was said that Mrs. Wilkinson had traded for some years in mining stocks on her own account.

These are the details of the distribution of Jumbo Extension shares as recounted by a member of the Stock Exchange firm:

The Chicago office of the house on Friday received from Mrs. Wilkinson an order to sell the stock. The telegram said that certificates calling for the full amount were on deposit at a national bank of Ashland, and would be forwarded immediately. The selling order was wired on to this city to the firm's main office and duly executed on the Curb.

The firm, it was stated, had had other dealings with Mrs. Wilkinson, and nothing had gone amiss before. In 1913 she bought 20,000 shares of another low-priced mining stock in the Chicago office, paid for them, and took them away. One day last year she appeared at the New York office, and this time produced certificates for 12,000 shares of still another stock, and asked that they be sold. The transaction was put through without a hitch, and because of these dealings of substantial size the firm considered the woman one of their bona fide customers.

Last Saturday, when the mail failed to bring to the office in Chicago the certificates, an inquiry was made of the Ashland Bank to find whether the 7,100 shares were there to Mrs. Wilkinson's account. The bank replied that all the Jumbo Extension in their hands to the woman's credit was 100 shares in the name of George Wilkinson. The manager of the Chicago office immediately started for Ashland to investigate, and the home office is waiting his report.

The firm was "short" the stock and was liable to take a large loss if purchases to cover the commitment were made, as Jumbo was decidedly strong. The stock was sold at 83 and 84 cents a share on Friday, but by Saturday afternoon, when the house discovered something was wrong, the price had leaped up to about $1, and heavy buying lifted the quotation on Monday to $1.75. The firm declined to decide that it had been victimized until news could come from the Chicago office, but when word came on Monday that there was much to be explained by Mrs. Wilkinson, the stock was "covered" and the house stood to take a large loss.

In the meantime, however, members of the firm had made inquiries about other Wilkinson accounts in the Street and found that several Curb firms had dealt with Mrs. Wilkinson recently. One was holding some stock to her credit. The Stock Exchange house took over this account as an offset to its apparent loss on the Jumbo Extension deal, and the Chicago office was able also to take similar action in case of several accounts in Mrs. Wilkinson's name with different brokers. Transfer of stocks owned by the woman was stopped. It is said that if they should be sold the Stock Exchange firm would be behind to date no more than $5,000.

The Boston firm, it is learned, decided to charge its part of the sale to experience and covered the stock as soon as it found that irregularities existed. The two houses are working together to get on the inside of the transaction, and legal developments are expected.

Members of the local firms say that they have found factors in the situation as singular as the sale itself. One of them said last night that a Curb broker had since informed him that a rumor was heard on Saturday that the Stock Exchange house was "short" about 10,000 shares of Jumbo Extension. This was before the telegram had come from the Chicago office that a hitch had occurred in the Wilkinson transaction, and the firm did not know anything was irregular. The Curb authorities are looking into this rumor, and are also endeavoring to unravel other matters connected with the sale from the West.

MAY TRY SIEGEL AGAIN.

District Attorney Not Satisfied with Outcome at Geneseo.

Henry Siegel may have to stand trial on another of the thirteen indictments still untried, or may face an entirely new charge in the State courts, independent of action the Federal authorities may take because of misuse of the mails.

District Attorney Whitman is said to be dissatisfied with the result of the trial in Geneseo. He has directed Acting District Attorney Delahanty, as soon as Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train has returned with the records from Geneseo, to confer with Assistant District Attorneys William D. Embree and Robert S. Johnstone, and go over the situation with them. They may decide to take up in Geneseo one of the old indictments under the change of venue granted by Justice Blanchard, or they may seek a new indictment in this county in the hope that he will not be able again to avoid trial in New York.

All but two of the indictments under which Siegel still rests allege similar offenses to the one on which he was tried, that by false statements he obtained sums ranging from $24,000 to $100,000 from various banks. The last two indictments allege that Siegel received deposits in his bank after he knew it was insolvent.

It was only possible to make the Siegel offense a misdemeanor because of an amendment to the law made long after the Siegel failure. Mr. Whitman said he had made no inquiry as to who was responsible for the amendment of the law and had never heard that any one interested in the Siegel case had advocated the change.

Meanwhile several groups of depositors are considering what they can do to get some of their money. One group will meet tomorrow night in the University Settlement.

POOR TO HAVE SHARE IN THANKSGIVING

Many Remember Those in Hard Luck or in Prison on the Day of Feasting and Cheer.

GIVE SHOW TO PRISONERS

Actors Will Visit the Island—A. C. James Entertains Bowery Y. M. C. A. and W. W. Astor the Newsboys.

Thanksgiving will bring out the usual large number of dinners to the poor, the homeless, the ill-fed, and the unemployed, in a year when the ordinary amount of benevolence has been largely increased by the emotions stirred by the European war.

At city, county, and State charitable and penal institutions the usual turkey dinners will be served and everything done to make the inmates feel as far as possible the cheerfulness of the day. At the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island, according to the usual custom, a vaudeville performance will be put on in the afternoon by professionals, and at the penitentiaries up-State various programmes will be given.

Eight hundred men will be the guests of Arthur Curtis James at dinner at the Bowery branch of the Y. M. C. A. This branch of the Y. M. C. A. furnished 300,000 meals last year, 78 per cent. of which were paid for, but today everybody is Mr. James's guest, and his party will be one of the largest in New York.

Charles H. Harris, a glass dealer, of 142 West Twenty-fourth Street, will give a dinner to all the inmates of the Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases, at 1,913 Madison Avenue, of which he is one of the Trustees. He has been doing this for several years. A custom of still longer standing which he is continuing is the distribution of twenty-five baskets, each containing a large dinner and a dollar bill for good luck, to families who apply for them at his office.

Newsboys will be entertained at dinner by William Waldorf Astor at the Brace Memorial Newsboys' Home, at 14 New Chambers Street. In the evening there will be games, music and more refreshments. The newsboys' celebration will last several days, for tomorrow night they and their friends will be the guests at the Palace Theatre, and on Sunday Vincent Gilroy will address them in the assembly hall of the Home on "America, the Poor Boy's Opportunity."

The Rescue Society has invited over a thousand men, women, and children at 6 P. M. to its twenty-second annual dinner at the Midnight Mission in the old Chinese Theatre at 5 and 7 Doyers Street. A Victrola lent for the occasion by John Wanamaker will furnish the music. Supt. Thomas J. Noonan has arranged with a large number of speakers and singers for a religious service, which will begin at 7 P. M. and last until midnight.

All day yesterday school and college students were passing through town on their way home for the festival. Many who live too far away have come to New York instead, and at the Belmont and the Waldorf it was said yesterday that many parents living in the West and South had arrived to spend the short holidays with their children who are in school near here.

At both hotels many family Thanksgiving dinners have been ordered for today—some to be served in private apartments, but most in the main dining rooms. One woman has invited fifteen girls from nearby schools who cannot get home to dine with her at the Belmont.

STEVENSON CURIOS SOLD.

Books and Relics of the Novelist Bring In $47,291.

The sale of the Robert Louis Stevenson relics was ended by the Anderson Company yesterday. The day's receipts were $6,536, making a grand total of $47,291.50.

A number of curios, picked up by the novelist in the South Seas, were sold yesterday. Seventeen clusters of white hair, with a yellow tinge, from the heards of old men of the Marquesas Islands, bound togetner with native grass twine, brought only $7. Most South Sea Islanders cannot raise beards and they pass in the South Sea Islands as currency. A necklace of 210 human teeth, strung in a double row on plaited grass, was bought by Mrs. P. Whiting for $27, and two corselets, given to Stevenson by "King Tembinoka of the Island of Apemama, one of the Gilbert group, were knocked down for $38 to the University Museum of Philadelphia.

A Tapa cloth blanket, given to Stevenson by Tati, High Chief of the Tevas, Tahiti, Society Islands, when he and Stevenson were made brothers of the Terii Clan, was obtained by Mrs. Whiting for $65, and an old Hawaiian amulet of human hair and bone was sold to the University Museum, for $69. A Samoan bowl for kava, the national drink, went to W. G. Walker, for $95, and two charts, made and used by the South Sea Islanders, were sold for $190 to the University Museum and R. H. Lowie.

Mr. Wendell gave $237 for the rare original edition of "Deacon Brodie," by Stevenson and W. E. Henley, with Henley's autograph signature and inscription on the title page.

Mr. Wendell paid $225 for a first edition of "Beau Austin," a play in four acts, by Stevenson and Henley. Dr. Rosenbach of Philadelphia gave $500 for "The Silverado Squatters," in the original wrappers, and $110 for Stevenson's copy of "New Arabian Nights." Mr. Wendell obtained for $22 a first edition of "Father Damien: An open letter to the Rev. Dr. Hyde of Honolulu." Mr. Drake gave $500 for the privately printed first edition of "The South Seas, a Record of Three Cruises," with corrections and marginal notes in Stevenson's autograph.

George D. Smith obtained for $310 a sketch book of Stevenson with drawings, and for $325 another sketch book used by Stevenson on his trips in France in 1878. C. B. Shephard gave $255 for a sketch book of Stevenson when a child on his first trip to England. Unbublished "Notes About Robert Louis Stevenson," by his mother, was bought on order for $400.

KILLED AND HOME BURNED.

Bodies of Florida Lawyer and His Daughter Found in Ruins.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 25.—A. A. Boggs, a lawyer, and his daughter Marjorie, 18 years of age, were found murdered early today in the charred ruins of their country home near here. The residence, which was one of the most costly in this section, had been set on fire with the evident intention of concealing the crime. The bodies were found by neighbors, who had been attracted to the scene by the flames.

The skulls of both victims had been crushed by some heavy blunt instrument and both bodies were found in the hall near the front entrance.

Miss Boggs had attended a party in the neighborhood, returning home shortly after midnight. Her father, who was 45 years of age, had been connected with a number of important cases in this State.

GOULD IN MARKET FOR MOFFAT ROAD

His Attorney, Chadbourne, Prominent in Denver Conferences Now Being Held.

TUNNEL'S STRATEGIC VALUE

Would Pierce Rockies and Cut 100 Miles Out of Transcontinental Railroad Distance.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 25.—Control of the Denver & Salt Lake Railroad (the Moffat road) and the Moffat Tunnel right of way, the latter carrying with it mastership of the transcontinental railroad situation, is involved in a conference of financiers now being held here with George J. Gould as the probable purchaser. This conference, attended by several prominent New York and Chicago financiers, has been in progress several days. Today—what had been reported before—it became known that Newman Erb, head of the syndicate which now controls the Denver & Salt Lake, was to be eliminated as the result of a breach with Frederick H. Prince, head of the banking firm of F. H. Prince & Co. of Boston and a member of Erb's syndicate. Another eventuality regarded as almost certain is the withdrawal from the syndicate of Dr. F. S. Pearson, generally believed to have been Erb's backer in this and other financial enterprises.

Erb, who sought to carry out the tunnel project, has been practically eliminated from the road already, it is said, and the only question now to be solved is whether his interest shall be taken over by a new syndicate headed by George Gould and Prince, or by a local syndicate led by Charles Boettcher, Vice President of the Great Western Sugar Company, who already is interested in the road to the extent of $100,000.

The rupture between Erb and Prince is so serious that Prince has sent to Denver Thomas L. Chadbourne of New York, personal counsel to George Gould, presumably in the latter's interest, and W. A. Bradford, President on the Monon Route when it was under the control of the Prince firm. In addition, several practical railroad men are with the party to make a study of the prospects of the property and report upon its management and earning power.

Capture of the Moffat Railroad by men with sufficient money would mean that those men could exert a tremendous influence upon railroad affairs between the two oceans. The Moffat Tunnel, projected by the late David H. Moffat and almost made a reality by Erb, is considered the most important railway project since the first line was built across the continent. With its eastern entrance forty-two miles from Denver, it will bore west through that part of the Rockies known as James Peak, and will cut out of the continent approximately one hundred railroad miles.

The Moffat road has the right of way, and the competing lines must either buy that road or beat its project to have the people of Denver vote it the right to build. Heretofore, the big trunk lines, represented by the Gould, Harriman, and Hill interests, have fought the tunnel project at every step, from its inception in the Legislature to the bond election last February, when the people voted $3,500,000 to build the tunnel in conjunction with the Moffat road, only to have it declared illegal because the city charter prohibits the city entering into a partnership with any corporation or individual.

Dies of Burns from Exploding Lamp

Special to The New York Times.

GREAT NECK, L. I., Nov. 25.—Mrs. Joseph Novak, caretaker on the estate of Mrs. A. M. Booth here, lit a lamp this evening. It exploded and, in trying to get it out of her cottage, she set her clothing afire. She rushed into the yard, and her husband rolled her on the turf and wrapped his coat around her. He quenched the flames, but not before his wife was terribly burned and he was badly burned also. Dr. L. A. Van Kleet rushed both of them in his automobile to the Nassau Hospital in Mineola. Mrs. Novak died there, and Novak is in so serious a condition that he has not yet been told his wife is dead.

PIERCE STATUE UNVEILED.

New Hampshire Pays Belated Honor to Only Presidential Son.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 25.—Forty-five years after his death, the memory of Franklin Pierce; the only New Hampshire man ever elected President of the United States, was honored today by the dedication of a memorial statue in the Statehouse Park. Opposition on the part of many citizens who believed that President Pierce showed too active sympathy with the South in the days immediately preceding the civil war frustrated several previous attempts to provide such a memorial. Last year the Legislature appropriated $15,000 for the purpose.

Clarence E. Carr of Andover, a member of the commission appointed by Gov. Samuel D. Felker, to arrange for the erection of the memorial, was chosen to preside at the dedicatory exercises. The honor of unveiling the statue was given to Miss Susan H. Pierce of Hillsborough, a great-granddaughter of the President. The programme included addresses by Frank P. Carpenter of Manchester, Chairman of the commission; ex-United States Senator William E. Chandler of Concord; Gov. Felker, and Judge Edgar Aldrich of the United States District Court.

The statue, designed by Augustus Lukeman of New York, is bronze, and stands on a granite base with an inlaid bronze border of laurel leaves. It shows President Pierce in civilian garb with the exception of a military cloak, hinting at his service in the Mexican War.

COTTON GROWERS UNITE.

Plan $100,000,000 Corporation to Effect Economic Reforms.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 25.—Plans for organizing a $100,000,000 corporation, to be known as the Cotton Products Company, were completed here today by the Executive Committee of the Southern Cotton Association. The corporation, which will have as its chief object the stabilizing of cotton values, will begin business, according to an announcement, as soon as $1,000,000 of stock has been subscribed. Harvie Jordan, President of the Cotton Association, in a statement concerning the corporation, said tonight:

"The company will be chartered under the laws of Louisiana, and will maintain headquarters at New Orleans. It will be organized by the Southern Cotton Association, co-operating with the Farmers' Union and allied organizations. Subscriptions will be taken in cash or cotton at 10 cents per pound, middling basis.

"The first object of the company will be to retire from the market as much of the surplus of the present crop as possible, and its first business after organization will be to secure loans on negotiable warehouse receipts on cotton held in storage. The temporary officers of the company will be the present officers of the Southern Cotton Association.

"The company will construct modern warehouses, issue negotiable warehouse receipts, and attempt to bring about many economic reforms in marketing and handling the cotton crop."

WILSON AT WILLLIAMSTOWN

Arrives to Spend Thanksgiving Day with Daughter and Mr. Sayre.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 25.—President Wilson arrived here at 4 o'clock this afternoon to spend Thanksgiving with his daughter, Mrs. Francis Sayre, wife of the assistant to the President of Williams College. The visit had added significance because today is the first anniversary of Mrs. Sayre's marriage.

The President was greeted at the station here by Mr. Sayre and practically the entire population of Williamstown. On his arrival the President saw his first snow of the season. He expects to go sleighing as much as possible during his stay.

During his stop at Troy, N. Y., the President shook hands with several thousand people, patted several children on the cheek, was presented with a linen collar made in Troy and waved his hands to hundreds of women employes of a shirt and collar factory, who leaned out of the windows to see him.

"That is a good Republican," shouted a man as a prominent Republican shook hands with the President.

"I am glad to hear it," replied Mr. Wilson. "I want as many of them as possible with me."

Several hundred children waved American flags and cheered as the President's train passed through Hoosick, N. Y.

The President plans to take a complete rest while here, and will see no callers aside from personal friends. President Garfield of Williams, son of the late President Garfield, paid a short visit tonight.

ALBANY, Nov. 25.—President Wilson was at lunch when his train arrived here shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon. Upon seeing the crowd about the station he left the table, came to the rear platform, and gave a brief greeting. The arrival of an engine to switch his car cut this short. Mr. Wilson himself warned the crowd of the approach of the engine.

ARREST SURETY CO. AGENT.

Says He Kept Checks Given by Banker to Cover His Commissions.

D. Clinton Mackey of 25 Eighth Avenue, Brooklyn, was arrested yesterday on an indictment charging larceny of $5,100 from the Illinois Surety Company, of which he was formerly agent. He was released under $10,000 bail.

It is charged that Raymond Guarini of Guarini & Cardella, bankers, sent two checks to the surety company to cover a bond. When Guarini failed to get his money back he notified the company, who, after an investigation, complained against Mackey.

Mackey said yesterday that the money was due him for commissions. When he left the employ of the surety company, he said, the company took charge of his books and he was not allowed to balance them. He said that there is a suit now pending against the surety company for commissions due him.

Appraisers' Decisions on Duties to be Paid on Imports.

A dispute between the Government and A. Jacobson & Co., regarding the classification of ermine tails was decided yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers adversely to the importers. Collector Malone assessed the articles at the rate of 20 per cent. ad valorem, under the act of 1909, as dressed furs on the skin. Free entry was claimed as undressed furs. Other claims also were made for duty exemption or rates lower than assessed. Judge McClelland holds that the importers' witnesses failed to show that the tails were not dressed.

The question of the classification of blankets capable of use as automobile rugs, which recently was the subject of a decision by the board in favor of importers, came up again yesterday in the case of several importers. Some points regarding the Government's practice in determining the line of demarcation between ordinary blankets and auto blankets, not brought out in the earlier decision, are enunciated in the opinion filed yesterday by Judge Brown. The merchandise involved in yesterday's protests was all classified under the Act of 1909, either as manufactures of wool or as wool cloth. It was claimed to be properly dutiable at 35 cents per pound and 40 per cent. ad valorem as blankets.

Among the witnesses appearing at the trial was the Customs Examiner of blankets. The Government's position as thus outlined amounts to this. The material concerned is concededly blanket material and, when in the shape to use on beds, is properly classified as a blanket. When, however, it has a round binding or corner, rendering it unfit for use upon beds and is used as a carriage or automobile rug, it must pay duty as a "manufacture of wool"; and, if in its unfinished state minus any binding but cut into the same size as before, it should pay duty as "wool cloth." In sustaining the protests, Judge Brown says he cannot agree with any of the reasons advanced by the Examiner, and holds that a blanket remains a "blanket" regardless of its use. The importers included Bollentin & Thompson, O. Hofmann, and J. J. Gavin & Co.

Koons, Wilson & Co., Philadelphia, lost in protests relating to the customs tax on women's hats trimmed with lace. Duty was taken under the old tariff at the rate of 70 per cent. as articles made in part on the Lever or Gothrough machines. Lower rates were claimed, but the board holds that the importers failed to substantiate their claims. The American Express Company also was overruled in protests affecting the duty rates on laces assessed at 70 per cent. as made on the machines named above. Lack of proof was the board's reason for taking adverse action.

William H. Thornley, San Francisco, imported a product returned by the Appraiser as crude wool grease. It was classified under the Act of 1909 as wool grease, crude, not refined or improved in value or condition, duty being taken at one-fourth of 1 cent per pound. Free entry was claimed as a grease fit only for making soap or for stuffing or dressing leather. As the importer's evidence was not conclusive, the board affirms the assessment.

EDUCATION NOTES.

The trial of Henrietta Rodman, teacher in Wadleigh High School, on charges of "gross misconduct and insubordination," was to have been held by the Committee on High and Training Schools on Dec. 1, but at the request of counsel it has been postponed until Dec. 15.

An additional class will be established in the Hebrew Infant Orphan Asylum, University Avenue and Kingsbridge Road, the Bronx, and will be made an annex to Public School 26.

Charles Feist has been reinstated as an architectural draughtsman in the Bureau of Buildings, subject to the approval of the Municipal Civil Service Commission.

Permission has been granted to the Principal of Public School 83, Manhattan, to collect money in his school for milk sold to pupils attending his school after regular school hours. The charge will be 2 cents a glass.

An additional teacher will be appointed in Public School 115, Brooklyn, on Nov. 30, and five days during December.

Permission has been granted to the Board of Superintendents to assign to the Washington Irving High School one teacher in training in excess of the number allowed by the by-laws.

The salary of Charles T. Moore, Assistant Professor of Chemistry in Hunter College, has been fixed at $2,520 a year, with annual increments.

Marie K. McKenzie has been appointed as a kindergartener in the Model School or Training Dept. of Hunter College at $720 a year.

The appointment of a successor to Walter E. Hervey as a member of the Board of Examiners was again laid over at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Education.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company.

All creditors of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company are hereby notified that the District Court of the United States, Southern District of Ohio, Western Division, in the cause wherein Bankers Trust Co. is plaintiff and the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Co. is defendant, numbered in Equity No. 41, on the second day of November, 1914, ordered that:

"All persons, firms or corporations having claims or demands against the defendant, the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company, other than those secured by mortgage or conditional sale duly filed or recorded, are required, on or before the first day of January, 1915, under penalty of thereafter having said claims disallowed in the discretion of the court, to file the same with Judson Harmon and Rufus B. Smith, Receivers herein, which said claims or demands shall be supported by affidavit and shall set out the amount and nature of any security or lien held by the claimant or to which the claimant is entitled, and also any claim to preference in payment from the assets in the hands of the Receivers or the earnings therefrom in priority to the bonds secured by the mortgage to the plaintiff, Bankers Trust Company, of New York, bearing date July 1, 1909, and known as defendant's First and Refunding Mortgage, or to any other creditors of the defendant."

Pursuant to the above, claims should be filed with the undersigned Receivers at the following address:

JUDSON HARMON,
RUFUS B. SMITH,
Receivers of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Co.,
56 Carew Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The pressure distribution in the last twenty-four hours has changed but little, except that the Northwest depression is increasing somewhat and now appears north of the Dakotas.

Except for Eastern Texas and the Coast of Washington, no rain has fallen in any part of the country in the last twelve hours.

Temperature is generally above the seasonal average, especially over the Northeastern Rocky Mountain Slope and the Upper Missouri Valley.

A continuance of fair weather with moderate temperature is indicated for all parts of the country during the next forty-eight hours, except on the North Pacific Coast.

Winds along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate southwest Thursday and Friday; Middle Atlantic Coast, light to moderate southwest; South Atlantic Coast, light and variable.

FORECASTS: TODAY AND FRIDAY.

New York, New Jersey, New England, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Thursday and Friday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

FORECLOSURE SALES.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE SALE. IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the Southern District of New York.—CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Complainant, against CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Defendant.—Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of a decree of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, made and entered October 10, 1914, in the above entitled suit, the undersigned Special Master will offer for sale, without valuation, appraisement, redemption or extension, at the north entrance of the County Court House, County of New York, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, Southern District of New York, on the 24th day of November, 1914, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, 713,535 shares of stock of the par value of $100 each of The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company. Said shares of stock will be offered for sale in one block or parcel. The undersigned will receive no bid from any one offering to bid who shall not first deposit with the undersigned as a pledge that he will make good his bid in case of its acceptance, the sum of $350,000 cash or by certified check on some national bank or trust company of the City of New York, made or endorsed payable to the order of the undersigned as Special Master, or in lieu thereof $5,000,000 face value of the Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the defendant Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company issued under the Trust Agreement dated August 1, 1902, between said Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company and Central Trust Company of New York as Trustee, if in coupon form accompanied by the coupon maturing May 1st, 1914, and all subsequent coupons, and if registered accompanied by sufficient transfers; such deposit, however, may be made partly in cash and partly in bonds and in the above relative proportions. The undersigned will accept the highest and best bid received when offered as aforesaid, and will knock down the property sold to such bidder, subject to confirmation of the sale by the Court. On the acceptance of any bid by the undersigned, the bidder whose bid shall have been accepted must forthwith deposit with the undersigned, in addition to the cash or bonds deposited in order to qualify him to bid, the additional sum of $1,000,000 in cash or by certified check on some national bank or trust company of the City of New York, made or endorsed payable to the order of the undersigned, as Special Master, or in lieu thereof, $10,000,000 face amount of the Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the defendant, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company, secured by the trust agreement dated August 1, 1902, if in coupon form accompanied by the coupon maturing May 1, 1914, and all subsequent coupons, and if registered accompanied by sufficient transfers; such additional deposit, however, may be made partly in cash and partly in bonds and in the above relative proportions. The deposit received from any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him when the property shall be struck off. The deposits received from the successful bidder will be applied on account of the purchase price. In lieu of any deposit of Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds as aforesaid with the undersigned, he may accept the certificate of any national bank or trust company having its principal office in the Southern District of New York that it holds, subject to his order and direction, the amount specified in said certificate of said bonds with coupons or transfers thereof as aforesaid. Any owner or holder of any of the Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds issued under said trust agreement may bid and purchase at said sale. The right is reserved to the Court to reject any or all bids received and to confirm and direct the consummation of any sale in accordance with the provisions of said decree. In case any bidder shall fail to make good his bid upon its acceptance, or shall fail after such acceptance to comply with any order of the Court relating to the payment thereof on the completion of the purchase, then the sums deposited by such accepted bidder as hereinbefore provided, whether in cash or by check or by Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds, will be forfeited as a penalty for such failure and will be applied towards the payment of the expenses of a resale and toward making good any deficiency or loss in case the property shall be sold at a less price on any such resale and to such other purposes as the Court may direct. If the Court shall not confirm the sale the deposits made by the accepted bidder will forthwith be returned to such bidder. The purchaser must on confirmation of the sale by the Court make such further payment or payments in cash on account of the purchase price as the court may from time to time direct. So much of the purchase price as may not be required by the Court to be paid in cash may either be paid in cash, or the purchaser may satisfy and make good such residue of his bid, in whole or in part, by turning over to be cancelled or credited, as hereinafter provided, Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the defendant, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company, secured by the trust agreement dated August 1, 1902, and matured and unpaid coupons. The said purchaser will be credited on account of the purchase price for Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds and coupons turned in as aforesaid with such sums as would be paid in cash upon such Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds and coupons out of the proceeds of sale, if the whole amount of the purchase price had been paid in cash. The right is reserved to the Court to retake and resell the property upon such notice as it may direct, at the risk and cost of the purchaser, in case the purchaser shall fail or omit to make any payment on account of the purchase price within ten days after the entry of the order requiring such payment. The purchaser or his successors and assigns will not be required to see to the application of the purchase money and shall have the right to enter his or their appearance in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York and to become a party to this cause.

For a more detailed statement of the terms and conditions under which said sale will be made, reference is hereby made to the above-mentioned decree, the original of which is on file in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, and copies of which may be obtained from the undersigned upon application to him at his office, 32 Liberty Street, New York City.

Dated New York, October 22, 1914.
BRONSON WINTHROP, Special Master.

Referring to the above notice, notice is hereby given that the sale therein referred to has been adjourned until the 8th day of December, 1914, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, at the north entrance of the County Court House, County of New York, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, Southern District of New York.
DATED, NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 24, 1914.
BRONSON WINTHROP, Special Master.

Special Announcement
The Marlborough-Blenheim,
Atlantic City, N. J.,
in order to accommodate its increasing regular Fall and Winter patronage, and also those Americans and Canadians who are prevented by the European war from being abroad, will keep both the Marlborough side and the Blenheim side of the house open this winter, instead of closing one side during November and December, as heretofore.
This will enable the supplying of a private bathroom with hot and cold salt and fresh water with every room, and for these bathrooms no extra charge will be made during the Fall and Winter Season.
The house occupies two blocks of ocean front, and its heated parlor solariums overlooking the Boardwalk and the sunny south ocean exposure are most attractive. Exquisite music every evening throughout the year.
White Service in both the ala Carte and the American plan dining rooms.
Atlantic City
with its invigorating, bright Fall climate, is particularly attractive over week-ends at this season. Golf, roller chairs, theatres, and countless recreations and amusements.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Active Day in Listed Stocks—Bond Prices Improve—Money Ease Increases.

A larger business was done in stocks through the clearing house of the Stock Exchange yesterday than on any day since the Exchange closed; bond trading was active at improved prices and such of the listed stocks as are still being traded in in the New Street market showed in a large majority of instances advances over the previous day. These were the signs which the security markets themselves furnished of a growth in the cheerful sentiment which has found reflection in many quarters of the financial district. Still other signs of improvement were afforded. Sterling exchange reacted after its advance of the previous three days, money was easier and the accumulation of loanable funds was so large that bankers expressed the confident belief that the call money market would very soon be in normal working order again. So rapidly have the clearing house certificates taken out in August and September been retired that bankers were looking yesterday for an early announcement that all these loan certificates had been paid off.

It was estimated yesterday that as much as 25,000 shares of stock passed during the day through the clearing house of the Stock Exchange. Inasmuch as no trading is permitted there at less than the closing prices of July 30, with an adjustment for the first dividend paid after that date, this volume of trading was looked upon as offering striking proof of the great betterment which has come about in the conditions governing the security markets. These are regarded now as having been relieved to a very large extent of the pressure which was due to the money crisis arising from the war and of being in a position to reflect the ordinary current of events. The course of prices of late in both stocks and bonds shows how favorable an interpretation has been put by the majority upon recent events. Sight has by no means been lost of the possibility of foreign liquidation, but bankers have assured themselves that there has been much exaggeration about the probable amount of selling from abroad. Moreover, so far as the bond market is concerned, it is not believed that the mere passage from unquoted to quoted transactions in bonds will serve to increase the volume of European selling.

Prices are to be restricted when trading in bonds is resumed on the floor of the Exchange on Saturday, but just what method would be adopted to determine minimum prices had not been decided yesterday. Trading in listed bonds has all along been under the supervision of the Stock Exchange Bond Committee, but the fact is that most bonds now being traded in are selling at higher prices than the lowest figures at which trades were approved by this committee. This simplifies considerably the task of safeguarding the market upon the resumption of public trading.

A further decline in commercial paper rates yesterday may fairly be attributed in part to the influence exerted by the fact that rediscount facilities now exist which give a more liquid character to a bank's holdings of commercial paper. This increases the willingness of the banks to employ their funds in that form of investment. Apart from that the accumulation of funds is increasing the competition for prime commercial bills.

GOLD BAR COST ADVANCES.

Assay Office Announces Increase from Four to Five Cents.

The local Assay Office, acting under instructions from Washington, has advanced the premium on gold bars from 4 to 5 cents for each $100 worth of bars sold. The 4 cent premium had been in force for several years. It was said that recent pressure on the establishment because of the demand for gold for export purposes had increased expenses and brought about the rise of the premium.

Because of the additional cost of bars the value of gold in this form in foreign exchange operations was raised close to a parity with gold coin. It will now cost practically as much to ship bars as coin to Canada in course of liquidating debts abroad.

Mutual Companies' Dividends.

The State Insurance Department has written to all mutual companies engaged in writing workmen's compensation insurance that dividends to policy holders will not be permitted until at least a year has passed since the individual concerns began business. The letter stated that the department had learned that some of the companies desired to distribute a dividend at the end of six months. Dividends will not be approved, furthermore, until a departmental examination has been made of each company applying for leave to distribute a portion of its earnings.

MAY FIGHT THE WAR TAX.

Trust Company Attorneys to Consider Levy of $1 on the $1,000.

Attorneys for the leading trust companies will meet tomorrow at the office of Frederick Geller, counsel for the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, 26 Exchange Place, to pass finally on the recommendations to be made to the institutions they represent as to whether or not they should pay the tax of $1 on each $1,000 of capital, surplus, and undivided profits that is laid on banks and bankers by the War Revenue act.

At preliminary conferences the general opinion has been that the law does not apply to trust companies, although forms have been sent to them by the Internal Revenue Bureau, on which they return their capital, surplus, and profits for the tax.

The tax is laid specifically on capital, surplus, and undivided profits "employed in the banking business," and the point is made that, so far as concerns banking operations, which are defined in the law itself, none of them is employed by trust companies. Their banking operations, it is contended, are carried on with the money of their depositors, on which no tax is laid by the act. The State law compels trust companies to invest their capital in securities of certain specified kinds, so that only the surplus and undivided profits would be involved in any case. The fact is said to be that the amount so invested by each of the trust companies in this city is fully as much as capital, surplus, and undivided profits combined.

The present tax is exactly similar to that imposed in 1898, except that the former did not apply to undivided profits. Many trust companies paid that tax without question, but then the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company raised the point now under discussion, and after making the payment under protest took the matter to the United States courts. Its contention was upheld and some $20,000 was refunded.

The returns are to be made, under heavy penalties, not later than next Monday, so that the trust companies must be finally advised this week.

MORGAN IN RESERVE ADVISORY COUNCIL

Directors of Local Federal Bank Make Selection and Get His Acceptance.

OUTLINE OF BODY'S DUTIES

Will Advise with the General Board on Business Needs and Conditions.

The Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank, at their weekly meeting yesterday, elected J. P. Morgan the member of the Federal Advisory Council for this district. A committee, composed of Pierre Jay, Henry R. Towne, and George Foster Peabody, notified Mr. Morgan of his election and received his acceptance.

It has been suggested that the reserve banks be represented on the Council by their Governors, but the point was made that the authors of the law had in mind that the Council should be an independent body of bankers, who should consult with the Federal Reserve Board from the broadest standpoint, rather than as representatives of the interests or opinions of the several federal reserve banks, and this view prevailed in the choice of Mr. Morgan. Mr. Morgan has retired within the last year from the boards of several banks of which he was a director.

The Federal Advisory Council is to be composed of one member from each Federal Reserve district, to be elected annually by the directors of each of the twelve reserve banks. The members receive no compensation, but may be reimbursed for actual necessary expenses.

The meetings of the Council are to be held in Washington at least four times a year, and oftener if called by the Federal Reserve Board. The Council may also hold such other meetings in Washington, or elsewhere, as it may deem necessary, may select its own officers and adopt its own methods of procedure.

A majority of its members will constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. Vacancies in the Council are to be filled by the individual reserve banks, and a member selected to fill a vacancy is to serve the unexpired term.

The Council is empowered, by itself or through its officers, to confer directly with the Federal Reserve Board on general business conditions, to make written or oral representatives concerning matters within the jurisdiction of the Board, to call for information, and to make recommendations in regard to discount rates, rediscount business, note issues, reserve conditions in the various districts, the purchase and sale of gold or securities by reserve banks, open-market operations by the reserve banks, and the general affairs of the reserve banking system.

BANKS IN RESERVE SYSTEM.

Large Number of Applications Brings Up Question of Rules.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Applications from about 100 State banks and trust companies for admission to the Federal reserve system have brought up the question before the Federal Reserve Board as to the regulations to govern their admission. If easy rules are adopted it is thought the number of applicants will steadily increase. It was said at the Treasury Department this morning that representatives of the applying State banks would soon be called confer with members of the board on the subject. An important question that must be settled relates to the loans of State banks on real estate.

The board is also suggesting that it is about time that members of the Advisory Council of Bankers be named so that a meeting could be held here in January. Under the law each reserve bank can name one member of the Advisory Council.

COFFEE EXCHANGE TO OPEN.

Resumes Business on Monday Without Restrictions.

The Board of Managers of the Coffee Exchange voted to reopen next Monday. No restrictions will be placed on trading. The matter of initiating dealings in sugar futures is still being considered by the Law Committee, and it is not believed that operations will start in sugar for some days.

Brokers say that the coffee situation is clear of difficulties which might tend to unduly depress prices. When the Exchange closed on July 30 there was a large outstanding interest in December contracts, but the "long" contracts of this month have been nearly all liquidated. In the process of closing out the December contracts prices declined no more than 1¾ cents a pound.

CUSHMAN STORES COMBINE.

Twenty-five Put in Consolidation Capitalized at $6,000,000.

The consolidation of the six bakeries and twenty-five stores of the Cushman baking companies into a $6,000,000 concern was announced yesterday by the Max Oscher Company, Inc., of 60 Broadway. The new company will be known as Cushman Sons, Inc., and will consist of these separate concerns: S. Cushman & Sons, Inc; Cushman-Globe Company, Cushman Bread Company, N. A. Cushman, S. Cushman & Sons, and the N. A. Cushman Company of White Plains. The officers will all be members of the Cushman family and the stock will be taken up by them.

The $6,000,000 is to be divided into $2,000,000 7 per cent. preferred and $4,000,000 common. Part of the capital will be devoted to the installation of new sanitary features in the manufacture of bread.

STEEL TRADE IMPROVEMENT.

New Bookings and Inquiries Show More Cheerful Sentiment.

Steel trade reports this week indicate slight improvement of buying in some directions. The Iron Age says:

It has been found that the better sentiment of the past three weeks has not kept prices from yielding, and it is evident that the policy of important steel producers will now be to sell freely for the first quarter of 1915 at the best prices that can be obtained. This may result, as in the closing weeks of 1911, in a more active market and make December, as is being predicted, the best month for bookings in the final quarter. Prices are now close to the well-remembered level of those of three years ago.

The sales of pig iron at Buffalo in two weeks have been close to 250,000 tons, and by some authorities those of the past week are put as high as 200,000 tons.

November orders in finished lines have been less than the October average with some producers. The Steel Corporation's bookings, including export business, have averaged about the same as for last month and in the past week have been slightly better. Its ingot production is now at 38 per cent. of capacity, after having been considerably less early in the month.

The Iron Trade Review says:

With pig iron leading, the iron and steel industry more broadly is beginning to do a better volume of business, and developments of the past week more clearly have demonstrated this betterment. Both the Steel Corporation and leading independent producers have enjoyed a modest expansion of new bookings and of inquiry, which apparently shows that more cheerful sentiment lately discernible among buyers is bringing results. Foreign business in iron and steel is coming along better and a heavy inquiry for various products continues. The mills and the buyers abroad now are close together on the matter of prices and the outlook is that a heavier volume of business will be obtained.

SECURITY TRADING STRONG.

Yesterday Was Heaviest Day Since Exchange Closed.

The Committee of Five of the Stock Exchange considered yesterday three possible methods of establishing minimum prices to be set for bonds when trading reopens on Saturday without selecting a definite plan. It was learned that final action will not be taken until tomorrow. Numerous bonds already have advanced above the final prices of July 30, and in case of others that have lost ground, slight recessions from July 30 figures are expected to be allowed.

Yesterday's business in bonds and stocks through the Clearing House of the Stock Exchange was the heaviest for any day since the Exchange closed. The committees in charge of dealings were fairly swamped with work. The Clearing House Committee continued to withhold from public announcement the prices of the day, and extent of business, but it was learned that security quotations were strong.

The Stock Exchange issued a notice to its members that on and after Dec. 1, 1914, all deliveries of stock must be accompanied by a "sales ticket" covering the tax due under the War Tax measure.

PHILADELPHIA'S SECOND SALE.

Stocks Bring Almost Same Prices as Paid Before Exchange Closed.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—The second public sale of stocks and bonds since the Philadelphia Stock Exchange closed its doors on July 30 last, held at noon today, showed that investments and securities are considered to be worth almost the same prices that prevailed before the war forced the closing of the markets.

Of the stocks and bonds that were sold at the auction, nearly all brought virtually the same prices as were paid at the last auction sales held before the Exchange closed. More than half of the stocks and bonds that had been advertised were withdrawn from sale, because the bids did not come up to the minimum placed upon them by the Special Committee of the Stock Exchange, but all of the bids that were made for these stocks and bonds were only slightly below the minimum prices.

TO DEAL IN ALL STOCKS.

Unrestricted Trading Will Be Resumed on Chicago Exchange.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—It was decided today by the Rules Committee of the Chicago Stock Exchange that beginning Friday unrestricted trading will be resumed on all stocks listed exclusively on the Chicago Stock Exchange which closed at $15 or under July 30. The following stocks are affected: Chicago Brewing, common and preferred; Chicago City and Connecting Railways, Chicago Railways, series three and four; Corn Products, Lindsay Light, common and preferred; Rumely, Street Stable Car and Western stone.

Trading on the local Exchange was more active today, with prices firm. Harvester of New Jersey led in the advance with two points over the close of yesterday, while quotations on American Can increased 1¾. Fractional gains were registered by Peoples Gas National Carbon, Swift and Union Carbide. Commonwealth Edison was off 1 point as compared with the close of yesterday. American Can rising ⅞ above yesterday's close in the early trading dropped off ⅛ of a point at the close, while Swift, after opening ¼ of a point below yesterday's close, recovered and closed ⅝ of a point to the good.

Sales and the range of prices on the Chicago Stock Exchange today were:

WOOL MARKET STILL STRONG

Although Supplies Are Running Out, Causing Fewer Sales.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

The wool market continues its unabated strength, though the sales for the week are much less than for some time past, aggregating 3,000,000 pounds. One of the chief reasons for this marked falling off in the transactions in the local wool market is that supplies of the wool most in demand are at an extremely low ebb, the domestic wools having been largely absorbed either by domestic manufacturers or by foreign factors.

The woolen goods market is rather quiet, with sales below normal for this time of the year. One reason for the unsatisfactory condition of affairs is the abnormally small number of duplicates now coming forward. Several manufacturers have been successful in obtaining orders for various military cloths for the belligerent powers and by this means have kept their entire organization in full operation, or even have been forced to employ double shifts.

There is every reason to believe that the relatively high price of combing wools will place worsted fabrics on such a high price basis that the manufacturer of woolens and manipulated fabrics will obtain a greater share of the business than has fallen to him for several seasons.

The cotton goods market is rather unsatisfactory as yet, sizable quantities of goods being sold, but nothing like a sufficient amount to absorb the quantity of goods being turned out by the mills.

The worsted yarn market is but slightly changed from conditions prevailing last week; quoted prices are unchanged, though in some instances spinners are inclined to accept orders at slight concessions because of lack of forward contracts. This does not apply to the trade in general, several of our best-known spinners turning down business offered under their prices. It would seem that quotations must advance in the near future in the same ratio as the increase of raw material.

Cotton yarns are not active, and present conditions are far from encouraging.

PAISH THINKS CITIES SHOULD INTERTRADE

Bond Deals Here Regardless of London Exchange Suggested by Expert, Who Sails.

TO SHORT-CIRCUIT GERMANY

How England Expects to Recoup Losses After War—H. P. Davison Goes with Financier.

Sir George Paish, financial adviser to the British Treasury Office, who has been here six weeks studying economic conditions, sailed for Liverpool yesterday on the White Star liner Adriatic accompanied by Henry P. Davison of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., who is going on a business trip to London and Paris. Mr. Davison said:

"I feel very optimistic for the first time in many months. The country was never in a better condition for an extended trade, and the future looks very bright. But to take advantage of these prospects we must face the situation calmly. We do not expect any more Government attacks on capital, and we do expect everything to be settled on a satisfactory basis."

J. P. Morgan, who was at the pier to see his partner away, said to Sir George Paish that if there was anything the New York banking house could do to improve the situation action would not be denied.

Sir George said that, in his opinion, the opening of the New York Stock Exchange on Saturday would not cause any flurry. "The demand for bonds," he continued, "is now exceeding the offerings and there will be no trouble on the Exchange. As to its opening for other business, the steps toward that end are bound to be gradual and carefully planned.

"There is no reason why your American cities should not intertrade without any reference to the London Exchange. There is plenty of business here for that purpose."

"Do you think that the United States will be benefitted by the war?" he was asked.

"No misfortune that falls upon a great number of people can benefit any other for any length of time," he replied. "During the war the United States will have great prosperity. Your misfortunes will come later.

"The world is now consuming its seed corn, which will mean nothing but loss. If this had been consumed for normal purposes there would have been a profit in the expenditure, but as it is, the suffering will last a decade, possibly a generation.

"After the war England will be able to reduce her expenses for defense, thus saving in a few years all and more than the war will have cost us.

"No peace can be made until there is an assurance that militarism is crushed forever. Before the war our expenses on defense were $400,000,000 a year. After its close this drain will be reduced 50 per cent. Commerce will go on in spite of the war, but after hostilities close the nations, to use an electrical phrase, will short-circuit Germany."

In Sir George's opinion, English holders of American securities will not injure this market by selling. He added that England expected to pay the entire cost of the war by the growth of her capital following it.

The Adriatic had 130 first, 71 second, and 325 steerage passengers.

DUTY ON ROYALTIES.

It Is Held That These Are Properly a Part of the Price.

Royalty paid for the use of an article is an item of dutiable value, according to a decision handed down yesterday by Judge Fischer in a reappraisement proceeding affecting the value of stone-breaking machines manufactured by a Swedish firm. The appeal before the General Appraiser was made by the Wern Machinery and Engineering Company of this city, the importers of the machines. The importer paid the Swedish manufacturer the sum of $325 for each machine, and, in addition, paid $100 per machine to the owner of the patent in Germany, the patentee being the Aktien Gesellschaft Boenhoemer Gremttwerke of Hamburg, Germany.

The invoice states the price for each machine as $325, but at the foot of the invoice appears this notation: "This price does not include royalty to the patentee." When the machines reached this city Appraiser Sague added the amount of this royalty to make market value, his action being indorsed by Collector Malone, who exacted full duty at the rate of 25 per cent. ad valorem on each machine on the valuation of $425. The importer thereupon appealed for a reappraisement.

The affidavit of the manufacturer stated that his regular price for one of these machines was $325. The importer seemed to rely on this statement to sustain the entered value of the machines. In overruling the protestant, Judge Fischer says:

"This statement is but half of the truth, for it is admitted that in addition to the payment of $325 to the manufacturer, the purchaser must pay $100 to the owner of the patent. The payment of $325, therefore, is not full payment for the machine. Before absolute ownership thereof can be claimed the purchaser must pay the additional sum of $100 for the use, or a total sum of $425 as the out-and-out purchase price of said machine. The advance is accordingly sustained."

SOUTH PICKING UP.

Some Evidence of Better Business Conditions There Now.

That Southern business is showing a decided improvement is the assertion of Max Lobenstein, a well-known business man, in a letter written to the Knoxville, Tenn., Journal and Tribune from this city. In part, the letter says:

"Jobbing buyers are coming to New York later than usual, but those I have met are much more optimistic than they were two months ago, which is about the time most of the jobbing buyers are in New York, when business conditions are normal.

"This morning we received letters from jobbers doing business in four different Southern cities, ordering their goods shipped as soon as ready, the orders being originally placed for Jan. 1 to 15 delivery, which indicates that jobbers are wanting merchandise.

"From information I get in the New York market, some buyers will not realize until it is too late that they made a mistake in delaying the placing of their orders. On some lines, however, silks and cotton goods are cheaper today than they were earlier in the season.

"A well-known Richmond jobber was in our place yesterday and remarked that the business situation is greatly improved and predicts that within six months we would enter upon a period of the greatest prosperity in our history."

Bearing out Mr. Lobenstein's assertion of improved business in the South comes the information, given to a TIMES representative yesterday, that very recently a well-known retail dry goods concern in Houston, Texas, had a clearance sale in which $53,000 worth of assorted merchandise was disposed of in five days. It was contended in reference to this sale that if all of the consumers of the South were as hard up as they have been painted this volume of merchandise could not have been sold in so short a time.

WHITRIDGE'S POLICY SOUND, SAYS M'CALL

Commission Opposes Dividends Except from Unincumbered Profits.

SELF-PAYING BONDS ONLY

Complaint About Paving and Snow Cost Arising Out of Unforeseen Conditions.

Chairman McCall of the Public Service Commission was asked yesterday for his views on a doctrine as to dividends and security issues laid down by President F. W. Whitridge of the Third Avenue Railway Company in his annual report. This is what Mr. Whitridge said:

I think I should reiterate the views heretofore expressed that dividends should only be paid when the money is in the bank with which to pay them and there is no prior claim upon it, and also that no additional bonds should be issued by the company except for the acquisition of entirely new property which will earn rather more than legal interest on the par value of the bonds issued to acquire it.

Mr. McCall said that the view expressed by Mr. Whitridge was "absolutely sound."

"I don't see," he added, "how anybody with an ounce of gray matter could dissent from it. I hold no brief for Mr. Whitridge, but I will add that nobody but a man who held views of such soundness could have accomplished what he has in taking the Third Avenue in the condition it was in at the time he was made receiver and bringing it up to even its present condition."

Commissioners Williams and Maltbie, who were present, concurred in the Chairman's unqualified approval of the principles stated by Mr. Whitridge.

The report antedated the movement initiated by A. E. Cottier to induce or compel the Third Avenue to pay dividends on its stock, but the statement quoted having a direct bearing on this situation, Mr. Whitridge was asked to apply it to Mr. Cottier's proposal.

"We have earnings enough," said Mr. Whitridge, "with which to pay a dividend, but the money has to be used for other purposes, such as street paving. These expenditures must be paid out of what are called net earnings or by the issue of new securities. I asked Mr. Cottier if he didn't think we had enough bonds out and he agreed we had but said we could issue stock to meet these payments. We can't sell stock below par and the question is who would buy the new stock at par.

"A railroad is a perishable property and portions of it have to be replaced from time to time. What should we do—issue new securities or have the money saved for this purpose? To issue bonds for the purpose means nothing less, within a measurable time, than bankruptcy.

"The newspapers say Mr. Cottier intends to bring suit to compel us to pay dividends. If he brings such a suit, I am willing to contribute out of my own pocket a considerable sum in the hope that the court or somebody will be able to tell us where the money he wishes to pay away in dividends can be found."

In his report Mr. Whitridge said on the subject of paving:

"There have been during the year very heavy expenditures for paving and other expenses caused by the heavy snowstorms in February and March. Roughly speaking, those storms cost the company upwards of $300,000 for the actual removal of snow and in the loss of receipts. It is too early to undertake to submit an exact statement of what will be necessary during the year ending June 30, 1915, but it may be expected that a very large amount of money, more than enough to absorb all the net income, must be expended on the property, especially for pavements required by the city, particularly in the Bronx, where the whole community is changing from a rural or suburban character to that of an urban district. The burden imposed upon the company by these paving charges is very great and it is a fair question whether, under the entirely changed conditions which are now prevailing in this city, the railways should not be relieved of the burdens imposed upon them when their charters were obtained."

Commission Declines to Postpone Investigation Into Colorado Mine Troubles.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—The suggestion of Gov. Ammons of Colorado that the investigation of the United States Commission on Industrial Relations into the coal miners' strike be postponed was declined today. Frank P. Walsh, Chairman of the commission, sent the following telegram to Gov. Ammons:

"Your telegram received. It will be impossible to postpone the hearing of the United States Commission on Industrial Relations set for Dec. 1 at Denver. Please be assured that no action will be taken subversive of the maintenance of peace and order, or which is not in full accord with the public welfare. I trust that the commission may have the privilege of co-operating with you to that end."

NO GAS MAIN TRESTLES.

Board of Estimate Approves William Street Subway Contract.

When the protest of the William Street property owners concerning the placing of trestles for gas mains along that thoroughfare in connection with the new subway work came yesterday before the Board of Estimate Leroy T. Harkness, assistant counsel of the Public Service Commission, said the property owners had had full opportunity to express their views before the commission at the hearings on the form of subway construction contract.

President McAneny assured the property owners that, if possible, no trestles would be used for the gas mains, and that they would be carried along the curb, except at the intersecting cross streets. The board then approved of the contract, the city's share of which will be $1,913,016.

Pennsylvania Road's Building Never Has Been Assessed.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 25.—That the Pennsylvania Railroad Company never has been assessed for its office building here was disclosed today by an examination of the books of the State and local Boards of Assessors.

A few days ago Richard Barlow, owner of a hotel opposite the railroad's Clinton Street Station, complained that his property was assessed at $175 a front foot by the city board, while the State board assessed the station property, conceded to be far more valuable, at only $7 a front foot. This led to the investigation.

MEXICO STILL GETS GERMAN MACHINERY

Carlos Hering Says Most Factories in Fatherland Continue to Operate.

SHIP BY WAY OF ROTTERDAM

Reports of Immediate Invasion of England Premature, He Asserts—Battle Losses Heavy.

Mexico is already beginning to look good again to some German dealers in machinery, according to Carlos Hering, who until two years ago lived in Mexico, handling German machinery and engaging in the mining business. Since then he has been living in Germany. He has just returned to New York on his way to Mexico.

"I could not get any reliable news in Germany as to the situation in Mexico," said Mr. Hering at the Wolcott yesterday. "I find here in New York, also, it is difficult to get accurate reports. I have cabled Mexico and Guadalajara, where my business was, and am awaiting replies before starting south.

"There is no trouble getting machinery out of Germany by way of Rotterdam. I have sent pumping machinery out already. But the whole of Rotterdam is practically piled up with German goods awaiting transport. The factories in Germany, except those which usually manufacture articles of luxury, are working hard. It is noteworthy that in every town street improvement work is under way on a large scale, so that if some of the factories shorten their work their employes may be kept busy at something. You would not know Germany was at war. Of course, the gay life of the cities is not the same, but the theatres are running.

"In Germany the feeling is that the war will be long, but we are absolutely confident of victory. We know only three things: We shall win, we will win, we must win. That we have had big losses is undeniable. I have had opportunities of talking with soldiers who have come back from the front, and these say. 'Yes, our losses have been heavy, but the others have lost twice as many.'

"I may tell you that the reports you get from the other side about an invasion of England being in immediate preparation are premature. We must have Calais and Dunkirk as bases before such a thing can be attempted. As for the reports you get that a base has been established at Zeebrugge for the putting together of submarines, I am perfectly sure that no sections of submarines have been sent to Zeebrugge by train. Any sensible person who can figure out what one of the modern German submarines weighs, and tackle the idea of transporting it, even in sections, would pronounce that impossible.

"About the only article of food in Germany in which there is a shortage is wheat bread."

New Service to Havana.

The United Fruit Company announced yesterday that a ne wweekly passenger service between New York and Havana would be inaugurated on Dec. 5 by the steamship Tenadores, arriving in Cuba on the following Tuesday. The other steamships on the route will be the Calamares, Pastores, and Metapan.

Designers to Hold Exhibition.

The Clothing Designers' Association of America is making preparations to hold a style and model exhibition, which the clothing manufacturers and designers of this country and Canada will be invited to attend. It is planned to hold this convention in the early part of January at the headquarters of the association in the Educational Building, 70 Fifth Avenue. The organization will hold a meeting next Wednesday, at which there will be a demonstration of drafts and talks on styles, tailoring problems, and shop management.

Clothing Outlook Better.

While it is too late at this date for the clothing manufacturers to receive full benefit of the cold weather in the shape of overcoat business, the fall in the temperature has increased the demand for spot merchandise considerably. Orders for overcoats on the style of the balmacaan have been received up to a good number, and this business, although belated, has created a more optimistic tone in the trade. This activity has had a desirable effect in checking cancellations on Sprng merchandise which were coming in rather more heavily than usual before the advent of cold weather. While conditions in the trade are not normal by any means, they show much improvement over what they were until recently.

Ribbons for the Holiday Trade.

Business is more brisk in the ribbon trade at present than the manufacturers and jobbers selling to the retail trade were inclined to believe would be the case at this time. The merchandise in demand is mostly of a holiday character. It consists of satin and warp printed ribbons for making up gift bags, and tapestry and fancy lingerie ribbons. The ribbons of the satin variety are being sold in ⅛ to 2½ inch widths. Cautious sellers are withholding their ideas regarding Spring styles, but indications point, it is said, to the use of wider goods. Several of the large milliners who are busy now on their modeling for next season are employing wider ribbons for trimming purposes, and the rest of the trade is expected to follow their example.

Normal Conditions for Hatters.

The large manufacturers in the hat trade find that conditions, as far as they are concerned, are about normal. Collections are reported to be good, and operating plans have been altered to take care of the increased demand for soft hats now so much in vogue. If the volume of sales at the present time shows any falling off this fact may be traced to changed conditions in the trade. There is a tendency to cut down on orders for future consumption, which permits jobbers and retailers to move out their seasonable stocks before tackling merchandise for the next season. Thus, up to a short time ago, the time was not propitious for the manufacturer to approach the buyer with merchandise for the Spring on account of the warm weather, which held off the sale of Fall and Winter merchandise.

The Burlap Situation.

The report that the Turks had reached the Suez Canal is causing some uneasiness in the burlap field, though there are some members of the trade who choose to doubt its authenticity. If they have, however, the effect on shipments of these goods to this country is apt to be even worse than the activities of the late Emden. There is a considerable quantity of burlap on the water at this moment, and it was said yesterday that at least three steamers carrying it should come in within the next two weeks. Eight-ounce goods were offered here yesterday at 4 cents, while for 7½-ounce goods 3.90 cents was asked. The quotation on 10½-ounce burlaps was 5¼ cents. More buying interest is being shown in lightweight goods than in heavy, but the actual business done so far this week was not as large as that of a week ago.

Improvement Is Expected.

While things are a little duller now with makers of gold jewelry than they usually are at this time of the year, a decided improvement in buying is expected when the retailers resume their operations early next month. Although the usual December buying movement does not last very long, it is figured that this year, with retail stocks smaller than is usually the case, it will be more active than under more normal conditions. In this expected improvement the clearing up of the financial outlook will doubtless be a prime factor, for this class of goods, being properly classed as luxuries, is among the first to feel the effects of consumers' retrenching. Also, the rapid way in which this merchandise runs into big money does not go well with restricted credits. Gold mesh bags, lorgnettes, fancy necklaces, and the better signet rings for men seem to be the articles most favored by the buyers.

Haiti Short of Money.

Because they need merchandise and have no ready money with which to pay for it, prominent importers in Haiti have written to a big export firm in this city asking them if they will sell a portion of the current Haitian crop of coffee and cocoa in order to provide the importers in question with funds. As this has been done before by the export firm for certain of its customers in times of stress, it was said yesterday that the selling would probably be undertaken as soon as shipments of the crops mentioned can be begun. One difficulty facing both the importer and the exporter is the lack of transit facilities at this time. It was said yesterday that only one steamer was now on the route between Haiti and this country and that trips were made every three weeks. The reduced schedule of sailings was brought about by the falling off in amount of freight carried between the two points as a result of internal strife on the island.

Printcloths Were Featureless.

The approach of the holiday kept trading within narrow limits in the gray goods market yesterday. About the best business of the day was done on 39-inch 68-72s for 1915 delivery at 4⅝ cents, though there were some sales made of that construction at the same price for delivery during the remainder of this year. Other nearby delivery business was done on 38½-inch 64 squares at 3⅞ cents and on 64-56s and 60-48s in the same width at 3 9-16 and 3⅛ cents, respectively. Some more business was put through on 37-inch drills on the basis of 4 cents for 37-inch, 3.95-yard goods, the orders calling for delivery in December, January, and February. There was little call for 36-inch sheetings during the day, but the demand for forty-inch goods of this kind for nearby delivery was fairly active. Some trading was also done on 40-inch lawns. Closing printcloth prices were:

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

BRADSHAW & CO., a corporation dealing in women's apparel at 22 West Thirty-fourth Street, has made an assignment to Samson A. Schneider. A petition in bankruptcy also was filed against it by Archibald Palmer for these creditors: K. Woronoff, $625; E. Luboschutz, $600, and C. Lebowitz, $75. The company was incorporated on April 18, 1914, with capital stock of $110,000 with John L. Bradshaw President and Christopher T. Burkhardt Treasurer. Mr. Schneider is President of the United Suit, Cloak, and Skirt Manufacturers' Association. The liabilities are estimated at $40,000 and assets probably $25,000.

LOUIS MEYERS & CO., manufacturing furriers at 12 West Thirty-second Street, have made an assignment to Charles Mautner. The partners are Louis Meyers and Maurice L. Farber. Henry H. Silver, attorney for the assignee, said that the liabilities were $42,000 and the assets $39,000.

STERNSHEIN BROTHERS, manufacturers of furs at 110 West Thirtieth Street, have made an assignment to Samuel Kahan. Two petitions in bankruptcy were filed against them by creditors, one by H. Weissman & Co., $48; M. Alpert, $367, and Samuel Levy, $150, and the other by Abraham Cohen, $509; Max Peltzman, $509, and Paul Jacob $8. Liabilities are said to be $15,000 and assets $5,000. The partners are Joseph and Abraham Sternshein.

FRANK M. RANDALL.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Frank M. Randall, dealer in furniture at 136 West Fifty-second Street, by these creditors: Ebert Furniture Company, $107; Sieling Furniture Company, $338, and Red Lion Furniture Company, $1,016. He made an assignment on Oct. 19. Liabilities are said to be $50,000 and assets $35,000.

FULTON-ALBERT CORPORATION, builder, of 303 Fifth Avenue, has made an assignment to Max E. Sanders of 170 Broadway. A petition in bankruptcy was filed against it by these creditors: Herman E. Schanzlin, $650; G. Biekelhaupt Skylight Works, Inc., $140, and Gorman & Lees, $75. Liabilities are said to be $25,000.

CORTELYOU INVESTING COMPANY, INC.—A petition has been filed against the Cortelyou Investing Company, Inc., builder, of 20 Avenue A, by these creditors: Purvis & Shelton, $500; Nathan Paris, $1,407, and Haslach Walser Company, $41. The company was incorporated in May, 1913, with a capital stock of $5,000, and started to build three apartment houses on Cortelyou Road, Flatbush, which were stopped, it was said, for lack of funds. Creditors think they can be finished for $1,000, and they would be worth considerable more than the mortgages on them, which aggregate $150,000. Liabilities are $12,000, outside of the mortgages.

MORRIS J. SYDNEY.—A petition has been filed against Morris J. Sydney, dealer in diamonds and jewelry at 154 East Broadway, by these creditors: Rose Pasternak, $571; D. Wolkoff Company, $12, and Cecil Block, $6. He made an assignment on Nov. 9. Liabilities are $5,000 and assets $1,500.

LOUIS WALLACE.—A petition has been filed against Louis Wallace, dealer in general merchandise at 1,588 Madison Avenue, by these creditors: Samuel Schwartz, $40; Sobel Brothers, $31; Frank E. Abramson, $387, and H. Corrin & Co., $71. He made an assignment on Monday. Liabilities are $2,500 and assets $1,000.

JOSEPH SHEIMAN.—A petition has been filed against Joseph Sheiman, shoe dealer at 142 Orchard Street, by these creditors: J. E. Bates & Co., $382; Frank H. Hobbs, $189, and Isidore Simon, $249. He made an assignment on Nov. 18.

ROSE, also known as ROSALIND EPSTEIN, dealer in gowns at 413 Madison Avenue, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $25,173, and no assets. Among the creditors are the Mme. Epstein Co., $14,000; Berger & Co., Paris, $7,718, and Hugo Kaempfer, $1,200. A petition was filed against her Dec. 13, 1906, which was closed without a discharge, and a petition was also filed against the Mme. Epstein Co. on Dec. 3, 1912.

EMORY B. REMINGTON, advertising agent, of 44 East Twenty-third Street, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $10,721 and assets, $8. Among the creditors are J. Walter Thompson, $1,500; J. Walter Thompson Co., $1,609; Prudential Life Insurance Co., $1,179; Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., $940; Jessie M. Goodrich, $1,065, and Albert C. Atwood, $1,065.

GEORGE BUSBY of 715 Madison Avenue has filed a petition, with liabilities of $22,895 and no assets. Of the liabilities $21,300 is contingent on a lease.

PHILIP P. GREENBERG, jobber in druggists' sundries, of 152 Lenox Avenue, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $1,201 and assets, $148.

ANSELM BRUCK, a clerk, of 243 West 126th Street, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $4,113 and no assets.

BANGS LABORATORIES, INC., of 39 West Twenty-second Street, has filed schedules showing liabilities of $16,837 and assets of $14,767, consisting of machinery, $13,104, accounts, $850; notes, $500; chemicals, $311, and cash, $2.

NEW YORK CONFECTIONERS' UTENSIL COMPANY, manufacturer of ice cream cans, at 71 Varick Street, has filed schedules showing liabilities of $10,317 and assets of unknown value, as the company made an assignment.

M. B. K. COAT COMPANY, INC.—Judge Hand has appointed John L. Lyttle receiver for the M. B. K. Coat Company of 114 West Twenty-sixth Street; liabilities are $12,000 and assets $3,000.

J. MARCUS WOODWORKING COMPANY.—Judge Hand has confirmed a composition of the J. Marcus Woodworking Company of 3,521 Bronx Boulevard with creditors at 100 cents on the dollar in notes running from five to fourteen months. Liabilities were $66,716.

ALOIS KOHN & CO.—Creditors of Alois Kohn & Co., manufacturers of gold chains at 16 Maiden Lane, met yesterday at the office of William Allen, referee in bankruptcy, at 67 Wall Street. Many claims were filed and Henry B. Singer was elected Trustee in bankruptcy. Liabilities were $102,627.

ABRAHAM KALBFELD, dealer in dry goods at 2,032 Third Avenue, has made an assignment to Harry F. Zurmuhlen.

Discharges in Bankruptcy.

Judge Hand has granted discharges from bankruptcy to:

DIEDRICH NIEMEYER, saloon-hotel, at 1,815 and 1,817 Park Avenue; liabilities, $35,960.

RELIEF PROMISED QUEENS.

McAneny Tells Committee About Rapid Transit Plans.

The Queens Chamber of Commerce sent a deputation yesterday to the Board of Estimate to discuss the new rapid transit work in Queens. They complained that when the Steinway tunnel was put in condition for temporary operation, its line would end 500 yards away from the nearest Long Island Railroad station, so that it would be of little immediate use. They asked the board to vote $400,000 to make it possible for the elevated trains from the Second Avenue line to cross the Queensboro Bridge.

President McAneny informed the deputation that the Transit Committee of the board had this matter under consideration, and would recommend the voting of the money as soon as it was necessary.

"It is the toughest proposition which the committee has to consider," he said. "The work on the different sections takes an uneven amount of time, and there is no use in finishing the bridge section before the others are ready. I think, however, we can assure you that the bridge connection will be ready when the other sections are."

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Local exporters said that export sales on Wednesday would probably aggregate fully as much as any day's business this season, the sales being estimated at about 2,000,000 bushels. Notwithstanding this activity the wheat market showed a heavy tone throughout the greater part of the day, and final quotations were net unchanged to ⅝c higher.

In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at $1.17½; No. 2 hard, at $1.17½; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.19⅝, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.24⅛, all nominal, cost, insurance, and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

The corn market felt the influence of increased receipts at Western points, and prices were lower, closing at ⅜ to 1⅛c net decline. In the local cash market new No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 73½c, and prime Argentine at 68 to 69c, delivered.

OATS.

The oats market was moderately active and prices were easier, closing ½c net lower. Export sales for the day were placed at 600,000 bushels, but these were offset by larger receipts at primary points. The local cash market was barely steady, standard quoted at 54½@55c; No. 2 white, 55@55½c; No. 3 white, 54@54½c; No. 4 white, 53¾@54c; fancy clipped white, 56@57c; ordinary clipped white, 54@55c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was again quiet, with comparatively small fluctuations, although the undertone was easier, owing to liberal receipts of hogs at interior points. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 28,000 head; estimated for Thursday, 16,000 head; Kansas city received 12,000 head and Omaha 8,000 head.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The cottonseed oil market again gave evidence of inherent strength, and prices at the close were 10@16 points net higher.

The range of contract prices was as follows:

COFFEE.

Amid considerable enthusiasm, the members of the Coffee Exchange received the announcement by the Board of Managers shortly after midday yesterday, that, after having been closed for four months on account of unusual conditions arising from the war in Europe, the Coffee Exchange will reopen for business at 10:30 A. M., Monday, Nov. 30. Yesterday was first notice day for December contracts, and about 35,000 were circulated, while sales through the Liquidating Committee amounted to 70,750 pounds. December sold as low as 5.15 through the committee, which was the lowest price yet reached, but at the close of the day a steadier feeling prevailed, with December quoted at 5.25@5.30; March, 5.65@5.69; May, 5.80@5.86, and July, 6.67@6.72. In the local spot market Rio 7s were quoted at 6⅛c and Santos 4s at 10c.

COTTON.

The cotton market was comparatively quiet, but ruled steadier during yesterday's trading. General business was doubtless restricted by the fact that today is a holiday in the local trade, while Liverpool will remain open as usual, and also by a disposition to await the effect of the December notices expected next Friday morning. There was considerable covering, however, while there also appeared to be a scattering demand from trade and investment sources, the bulk of the latter being for October, and with offerings limited prices sold some 11 to 12 points net higher. The close was a shade off from the best under realizing, but steady at a net advance of 7 to 9 points. Southern spot markets as officially reported were ¼c lower to 1-16c higher, generally unchanged. The local market for spot cotton was quiet and unchanged at 7.75 for middling upland; sales 600 bales.

The range of contract prices was as follows:

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 9,926 packages. General trade very quiet. A few buyers were in search of very high-grade, fresh creamery to carry them over the holiday, and for such they paid about former rates, but all other grades had a little easier tone, and it is probable that concessions would have been made if business would result. Some further trading in storage creamery, mostly at 32@33c, few gilt-edge lots reaching 33½c. Process, ladles, and packing stock unchanged. Creamery, extras, (92-score,) 34½@34¾c; higher scoring lots, 35@35½c; firsts, 30@33½c; seconds, 26@29c; thirds, 24½@25½c; creamery, held, extras, (92-score,) 32½c; higher scoring lots, 33@33½c; firsts, 29@32c; seconds, 26@28½c; State dairy, finest, 32@33c; good to prime, 28@31c; common to fair, 23@27c; process, extras, 25½@26½c; firsts, 24@25c; lower grades, 22@23c; imitation creamery, firsts, 23½@24½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 22@22½c; seconds, 21@21½c; lower grades, 19¼@20½c; packing stock, held, fine, 21½@22c; current make, No. 2, 20¼@21c; lower grades, 19@20c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 3,840 cases. There is no change in the situation of the market for fresh-gathered eggs. Storage eggs are meeting a moderate demand, and about steady. Nearby eggs continue scarce and firm in the highest grades. # $400,000 NEW HOME FOR BOWERY Y. M. C. A.

Building Will Contain Conveniences Similar to Those of Modern Hotels.

NOT A CHARITY INSTITUTION

Most of the Guests Pay, but Accommodations Are Given to Those Who Cannot.

Plans have just been completed for the new Bowery Branch building of the Y. M. C. A., to be erected out of the $4,000,000 campaign fund money. In many ways this new building will be unlike any association building elsewhere. Its work will be, it is expected, the last word in dealing with and helping men of the type who frequent, from choice or necessity, the famous thoroughfare. The location of the new branch will be Third Street, just off the Bowery, immediately in the rear of the Dry Dock Savings Bank Building. The dimensions will be 64 by 135 feet, and there is an open space of twenty feet toward the Bowery. The cost of the structure, with the land, will be $400,000.

Features of this building, said to be wholly new in this sort of work, are that it is to contain a barber shop, a tailor shop, and will have a doctor. Guests for longer or shorter periods will be provided with every convenience that higher priced hotels might provide. Guests are to be furnished with pajamas free, and a sanitary barber shop will be provided. Their clothes will go to the tailor shop to be sponged and pressed, and their linen to a laundry. Next morning a new man emerges, and if he is looking for a job the secretary tries to get one for him.

For all these accommodations the guest pays 15 cents for a bed, if in a dormitory, and for the other services 20 cents, or 35 cents in all. For breakfast in a room or series of rooms seating 200 5 cents only will be the charge. For that sum the tailored and refreshed guest gets five crullers, bean or pea soup, baked beans and a pint bowl of coffee. On some days, for variety, he gets corned beef hash or clam chowder.

Of all places in the world where one would suppose the pay in advance policy would be insisted on is in the Bowery, but here the association does not now, and will not in the new building, maintain that policy. An account will be opened with each man who comes in as a guest. If he wants better night quarters than a dormitory, or if the 150 beds in the dormitory are occupied, he can have a room to himself at a small advance. There are 153 rooms, and by the week they cost $2. The Bowery Branch maintains this policy of trust, and 65 per cent. pay up. Others pay when they can.

Besides these accommodations the new building will have a public barber shop, reading room, gymnasium, shower baths, roof garden, hall for public meetings, moving picture shows, elevators, and other conveniences. The structure will be of brick and stone, hardwood finish, and fireproof. It will be among the first buildings for men to come from the receipts of the famous $4,000,000 campaign.

Jackson & Rosecrans are architects of the new building. The contract will be let this week, and the work of tearing down to make room for it will be started at once. The Secretary of the Bowery Branch is Harry W. Hoot.

WAYWARD WIFE A SUICIDE.

Kills Herself When Husband Unexpectedly Learns of Her Folly.

When policemen, in response to cries, entered the flat on the second floor of 66 West Ninth Street, yesterday, they found Joseph P. Grant, a mason, bending over his wife, Minnie, who lay senseless, with a bullet hole in her right temple. They hurried her to St. Vincent's Hospital, where she died last night.

Grant said he had married her seven years ago when she was only 18. They lived happily until last July, when Grant went to Swissvale, near Pittsburgh, to work. On Nov. 20, he said, he sent his wife $30, and was surprised to get a despondent letter from her, inclosing pawntickets for jewelry he had given her. He was worried, and decided to surprise her happily with a visit. Yesterday morning he arrived at the house.

"My wife tried to bar me out," said Grant, "but I forced my way in and found a young man with her. He and I went outside to talk it over. I told him I should want a divorce, and asked his name. He refused to give it and went away. I let him go, too heartbroken to protest.

"Then I came back. I couldn't get in, and, climbing up, looked over the transom. My wife was lying dead, apparently. Neighbors let me on to the fire escape, and thus I got in."

The police believed Grant's story and he was not held.

CLAIMS KODAK FILM MONEY.

Mrs. Stevens Says Her Husband Was Rev. Mr. Goodwin's Partner.

In a bill to be filed tomorrow in the Chancery Court in Newark Mrs. Bertha Stevens, widow of Hugh L. Stevens of 12 Treacy Avenue, Newark, seeks an accounting of the estate of the Rev. Hannibal Goodwin, rector of the House of Prayer and inventor of the photographic film. The Eastman Kodak Company of Rochester, N. Y., after fourteen years of litigation, recently made a large cash settlement with the Goodwin estate. Mrs. Rebecca Goodwin, the widow, died last September.

Mrs. Stevens brings the suit on the ground of a verbal partnership agreement made between her husband and the Rev. Hannibal Goodwin, who worked together on the photographic film between 1877 and 1880, she says.

SHE DIDN'T WANT CARD DECK

St. Regis Guest's Order for Packard Car Was Misunderstood.

Mrs. John E. Liggett of Augusta, Me., ordered an automobile at the St. Regis yesterday morning, but she came very near getting a deck of cards instead. Mrs. Liggett speaks slowly and very distinctly, which is very different from the way most people speak when they give orders in New York hotels.

"Will you order a nice new Packard sent around to me!" asked Mrs. Liggett. "It must be a brand new one, as I hate old ones."

"Yes, ma'am, right away," was the reply of the busy clerk, who was sorting out the mail. "I'll have it sent up to your room right away."

When he learned that it was an auto that was wanted, the clerk hastily disposed of the cards and apologized for the delay.

TOO MANY LIEUTENANTS.

Police to Have 91 Sergeants in Place of 55 Higher-Grade Men.

The Board of Estimate yesterday adopted the report of Controller Prendergast, allowing the Police Commissioner to appoint ninety-one Sergeants at $1,750 a year by decreasing the number of Lieutenants at salaries of $2,250 by fifty-five. The changes will take effect today. Police Commissioner Woods said there were too many Lieutenants in the department and not enough Sergeants. The fifty-five vacancies in the grade of Lieutenant will not be filled.

The board voted to issue $300,000 corporate stock for the purchase of new motor apparatus for the Fire Department.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Henry C. Hallenbeck Gives City and Suburban Property in Payment for 208 Fifth Avenue, Held at $385,000—Investors Buying New-Law Tenements—$120,000 Park Row Mortgage.

A deal involving a Fifth Avenue business building and other Manhattan, in addition to suburban, property, has just been closed whereby Henry C. Hallenbeck becomes the owner of the seven-story building at 208 Fifth Avenue, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth Streets, extending through to 1,128 Broadway. The frontage on Fifth Avenue is 28.2, on Broadway 30.2, and a depth on the northerly line of 123.4 feet.

Mr. Hallenbeck, who is the head of the printing firm of Wynkoop, Hallenbeck & Crawford, has purchased the building from the St. John's Park Realty Company, (William D. Kilpatrick and James H. Cruikshank,) who acquired it a year ago from Elmer A. Darling in part payment for the new nine-story loft on Fourth Street, between Horatio and Gansevoort Streets. The sellers also own the adjoining building at 206, but that has not been sold in the present deal. The 208 Fifth Avenue building has been held at $385,000.

In part payment Mr. Hallenbeck has given the five-story flat at 203 West 120th Street, adjoining the northwest corner of Seventh Avenue, on plot 25 by 100.11; in Brooklyn two apartment houses on Dean Street, an apartment house at East Orange, on the northwest corner of Fourth Avenue and Nineteenth Street, on plot 75 by 100, a five-acre tract at Upper Montclair, and two residences in Montclair on Gates and South Fullerton Avenues, covering a plot about 300 by 300 feet.

Sale in Greenwich Village.

In the old Greenwich Village section the Duross Company has sold for Jane James 159 West Thirteenth Street, a three-story and basement and cellar private dwelling on a lot 20 by 103.3 to Joseph L. Buttenweiser, the present owner of the adjoining house, 161 West Thirteenth Street. The purchaser now has a plot 40 by 103.3 100 feet east of the corner of Seventh Avenue, on which he contemplates erecting either a twelve-story loft building or an elevator apartment house.

Investors Buying Flats.

The Rev. Findlay M. Foster has sold to an investing client of H. V. Mead & Co. 106 West 109th Street, a five-story triple flat on a lot 25 by 100.

As an investment, William Wuest has purchased from Mary and Ellen Malloy 220 and 222 East Forty-seventh Street, two five-story single flats, on a plot 38 by 100.5, located between Second and Third Avenues. Daniel Casey negotiated the sale.

$120,000 Park Row Mortgage.

The Title Guarantee and Trust Company loaned $120,000 yesterday on first mortgage to F. N. Cowperthwait and others. This mortgage covers stores and flats at the northeast corner of Park Row and Roosevelt Street, and is for three years, at 6 per cent.

Buyer of Seventh Avenue Corner.

Contracts were closed yesterday by Leslie R. Palmer, President of the Fourteenth Street and Seventh Avenue Company, for the sale of the new twelve-story loft building, occupying a plot 100 by 117.8, on the southeast corner of Seventh Avenue and Fourteenth Street, to the Adams Land and Building Company, reported to be a subsidiary company of the Adams Express Company.

Astor Estate Leases Thirty-fourth Street Property.

The United Cigar Stores Company has leased from the Astor estate the property at 28 and 30 West Thirty-fourth Street, to be used as a premium station, dating from Jan. 1 next. The premises have a frontage of fifty feet and a depth of one hundred feet. Extensive alterations will be made to fit the premises for the new use.

Bronx Sales.

The Poundridge Realty Company has purchased as an investment from a client of S. & J. H. Albert the three five-story new-law tenements at 970, 974, and 978 Union Avenue, on a plot 120 by 173, located between 163d and 165th Streets. The property has been held at $150,000.

E. Dusenbury sold to M. Merle 2,259 Loring Place, a three-story dwelling, on plot 21.3 by 100, near 183d Street.

Long Island.

On the Estates of Great Neck the McKnight Realty Company sold a plot having a frontage of 130 feet, on Bay View Avenue and depth of 142 feet directly opposite the eighth hole on the Great Neck golf course, to F. L. Du Boscue, a civil engineer of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The purchaser has started the erection of a large Dutch colonial house, to be completed by early Spring. The same company sold to Albert Hagstedt a plot having frontage of 80 feet and a depth of 137 feet, facing Cedar Drive, near the entrance to the Estates of Great Neck for immediate improvement with a dwelling of English half timber type.

In the Ridgewood section the G. X. Matthews Company sold to Owen McMahon 1819 and 1821 Madison Street two three-story six-family flats for $22,900.

The Lewis H. May Company has resold for Morris Asinof two lots on the east side of Beach Avenue, Edgemere, L. I., to a client, who will construct a two-and-a-half-story brick bungalow.

Residence Sales in Newark.

Several good deals have just been closed in Newark by Feist & Feist, who have sold to Dr. Louis Reich, the former home of Joseph Feder, one of the founders of the Prudential Insurance Company, at 677 High Street, on a plot 22 by 199.3. They also sold to Max Schiffenhaus the residence, on plot 30 by 130, at 35 Hillside Avenue, 125 feet north of Clinton Avenue, and to Morris Meltz, the three-story dwelling at 18 Chester Avenue, on plot 28 by 100.

Facts on Greenwich and Chelsea.

The Central Mercantile Association is preparing a realty survey of the Greenwich and Chelsea village sections to be issued in bookelt form before Jan. 1. It will contain a map of the district bounded by Canal Street, Twenty-third Street, Broadway, and the Hudson River. The subjects treated will include the price of land, the title of buildings already standing, and the space available for future ones, the facilities for manufacturers, accessibility of labor supply, and paving conditions for transportation.

Private Dwellings Leased.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co. have leased for a long term of years for Mrs. M. Havemeyer Butt, 8 West Fifty-second Street, a four-story high-stoop brownstone dwelling, on a lot 25 by 100, to M. J. Buckley. Also a place at Garden City, L. I., in conjunction with Gage E. Tarbell to Edmund Quincy.

Pease & Elliman have leased, furnished, for Frederick M. Hoyt his four-story and basement dwelling, 17 by 100, at 112 East Seventy-third Street, to Mrs. George S. Choate; also for Mrs. Francis Winthrop of London the four-story and basement dwelling, on a lot 25 by 100, at 40 East Sixty-ninth Street to Charles G. Meyer of the Cord Meyer Company.

Commercial Leases.

The Cross & Brown Company has leased for Charles A. Gould the store and basement at 830 Broadway to Maurice Cohen.

Charles F. Noyes & Co. has leased the store at 86 Nassau Street to H. B. Covert.

Real Estate Notes.

The Washington Heights Taxpayers' Association will meet Friday evening at 558 West 158th Street, and will be addressed by Park Commissioner Cabot Ward.

Walter I. Willis, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, has been appointed by Gov. Glynn as a delegate to the eleventh annual Convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress to be held in Washington, D. C., on Dec. 9, 10, and 11.

NANCE GWYNNE TIP TO 'INJURED WIVES'

Gives Address, Invites Them to Come On, and Says She'll Be Married Soon.

HASN'T BEEN SUED AS YET

Denies Receiving Any Summons from Manager's Wife, but Admits She Gave Card Case to Plunkett.

Miss Nance Gwynne, the actress, telephoned to THE NEW YORK TIMES last night and said:

"I want you to deny for me that I have been served with a summons in a suit by Mrs. Sue S. Plunkett, wife of Joseph L. Plunkett, my theatrical manager, for alienation of Mr. Plunkett's affections. I haven't received any such summons, and all I know about the whole affair is what I have read in the papers.

"About two weeks ago Max. D. Josephson, a lawyer who once handled a small case for me, called me up on the telephone and told me that a friend of his in the office of House, Grossman & Vorhaus had told him that he had served me the night before with such a summons. Mr. Josephson asked me to come down to his office at once.

"I told him that I had received no such summons, and saw no reason to visit him at his office. He said he wanted to save me money, but I told him I didn't see how he could do that, and at last I agreed to submit the question to Collin Suder Hill of Capetown, South Africa, who is here now, and whom I am to marry Christmas week. Mr. Hill told me to pay no attention to this lawyer, and I did not.

"Now it's perfectly true that I did give Mr. Plunkett a leather card case inscribed, 'God bless Joe Plunkett and make me a good actress for his sake,' but I presented it at a dinner party in honor of the success of my new play, and on the same occasion I gave gold presents to two other gentlemen. To Thomas McGrane I gave a gold pencil, inscribed with a Gaelic phrase, and to John Melrose, an English dramatic coach, I gave a gold match box.

"Mr. Melrose's gift was inscribed 'To dear Johnnie with much love.' I'm an old friend of Mr. Melrose and of his wife, and I saw no harm in my gifts. Mr. Plunkett was an excellent manager and had done well for me, and what more natural than that I should remember him also? But I don't see how a woman whose husband gets leather gifts while other men are getting gold can think that his affections are being stolen.

"I've given many presents to gentlemen in my life I've got that habit. As for Mr. Plunkett, I have great respect for him. I think he is a great manager, but so far as affections go I don't believe he has any except for his work. He's in love with that.

"Now, I'm living at 200 West Fifty-eighth Street. I haven't been served in any suit yet, but if there are any injured wives who think I've wronged 'em, now's the time to find me; or I shall be delighted to receive any alienation summonses or judgments as I leave my home, at the wedding, or as I enter the church. They'll all be welcome."

That was all.

REGISTER GETS MANDAMUS.

Estimate Board Ordered to Transfer $18,000 for O'Loughlin.

Justice Russell Benedict, in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn yesterday, granted to Register Edward T. O'Loughlin of Kings County a writ of mandamus compelling the Board of Estimate to transfer to the general fund of the Register's office $18,000 which had been appropriated for "extra clerks."

The Justice explained that the Legislature gave the Register the power to employ extra copyists whenever the work of recording deeds fell more than a month in arrears.

The decision ended a long controversy between the Register and Controller Prendergast.

Be On the Lookout For The Picture Section
OF NEXT SUNDAY'S TIMES.

No more interesting and striking photographs have reached this country since the great war began than those selected to appear exclusively in the Picture Section of The Times on next Sunday, reproduced by the Rotogravure and half-tone processes.

A splendid picture sent by a French woman to relatives here shows the brave Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul caring alike for the French and German wounded, brought in from the battlefront near Soissons, until they can be removed to the nearest hospitals. It has the composition and lofty appeal of a great painting. It will be reproduced in Rotogravure exclusively in the Picture Section of The Sunday Times. It is finely adapted to framing and abundantly worth it.

Other notable pictures include the strange effect of a cannon ball which tore a great hole in the wall surrounding the convent of the Sisters of the Poor at Nieuport, immediately before a shrine, wrecking everything about the shrine but leaving that unscathed; a Belgian sharpshooter firing from the branches of a tree; a Japanese uphill charge on Tsing-Tau; great numbers of French prisoners held by the Germans; Canadian Highlanders cheering the English King and Lord Kitchener; German soldiers washing up before leaving for the battlefront; Gen. von Emmich, of Liege fame, and his staff, and many other photographs as interesting.

In addition to war views, the Picture Section will contain a splendid photograph of the new Yale Athletic "Bowl," showing 70,000 people seated for the Yale-Harvard football battle. It is a most impressive picture.
